The Smartest Fashions of Well-Dressed Folk

Elizabeth Costello Paul

LETTERS FROM HOME

DEAR ELEANOR:
In this sleepy old town the one excitement is the afternoon mail, when every one dresses up to go to the postoffice.

I am not quite equal to the walk yet, for the general store, which includes the postoffice, is quite a mile from Highland Farm, and my ankle is still a bit painful if I tax it for any length of time.

Elizabeth, May and Louise make the trip every afternoon. It would amuse you to see how they prink for such "wild excitement" as this affords. The youth and beauty of the countryside meet regularly at 5 in the afternoon to collect news from the outside world, and those of us who are here to enjoy the rest and quiet of country life anxiously await letters from home.

Yesterday the gay trio brought me your jolly epistle, and while I sat on the shady piazza to enjoy it, they read their letters under the trees.

A pretty picture they made, too. Their gayly colored frocks reminded me of a bouquet of field flowers against a background of green.

May wore a lavender-and-white flowered organdie that she had made herself. It is a dear. The bodice is cut with short kimono sleeves, having a three-inch band of plain lavender organdie from the little round Dutch neck to the sleeve's edge, where it is run under a similar band forming a hem. Pointed pieces of plain organdie are stitched to broad tucks on either side of the front and lap over the center, revealing a finely tucked vest fastened with lavender buttons.

Skirt and bodice join with a broad girdle of plain material, which also appears on the scant skirt in two three-inch bands and a hem. Her natural-straw hat is turned up in the back with a big bow of lavender organdie, and a wreath of fine lavender and pink buds encircle the crown.

A pretty trick May has of wearing a bandeau of organdie about her dark hair, caught with a full bow on one side.

Elizabeth, you know, adores pink. She was lovely in pink foulard showing a deeper-toned dot. This was made up over an underdress of deep rose. The surplice bodice crossed in front and had the neck edged with deep vandyke points of white lace.

Edging a narrow black satin girdle around the bottom was a row of the same lace. The most attractive overskirt, falling in a deep point in front, has a two-inch band of black satin, and is caught up midway from waist to hem with a rosette of satin. Elizabeth wears with this a big yellow straw hat, with a crown band of black velvet under a wreath of pink roses. Her parasol, too, is pink.

A "study in blue" we call Louise.

Blue dimity is used for her gown, which has a deep square yoke of heavy white lace and narrow cuffs of the same. A panel front to her bodice buttons on either side to the lace, and broad turned-back cuffs on the short kimono sleeves show three buttons in the front.

On her tawny head she wears with this frock a pale-gray linen hat, having a huge bow of many loops made of blue-and-white spotted ribbon laid across the top. Of course, she carries a blue silk sunshade. Trust Louise to harmonize in her color schemes.

Are you weary of this chatter? Well, it's your turn next. Au revoir, my dear sister. Your affectionate

MADGE.

MEXICO'S FINANCES IN HEALTHY CONDITION

Cash Reserves More Than 62,000,000 Pesos and Will Pay Off Revolution Debt; Free Press in Force

MEXICO CITY, July 22.—Figures furnished by Ernesto Madero, Minister of Finance, shows the Mexican provisional government ended the first month of its administration with a cash reserve of more than 62,000,000 pesos, substantially the same amount as was turned over to his successor by former Minister Liman-tour upon his retirement from office.

Exports for June totaled 22,000,000 pesos, which is significant as indicating to what a comparatively slight extent the war interfered with various enterprises engaged in the production of mineral and other products marketed outside Mexico.

The government's financial statement for June was received with great interest and satisfaction by representatives of many United States and European financial institutions who have been sent here to observe conditions and watch developments under the new regime.

Several today called their principals an optimistic report and denied rumors of any serious resistance to the federal authority, implying full harmony between Do la Barra and Madero.

That the reports that De la Barra is not to be Foreign Minister in Madero's cabinet after the election are groundless may be positively stated.

The rumored substitution of J. N. Galbraith, head of the Walter Pierce Oil Company's Mexican business, and H. H. Hansen, local manager of the International Banking Corporation, is not significant, except as indicating the desire of Henry Clay Pierce to substitute new men for the two representatives he always has had on the board.

It is stipulated in the by-laws that Pierce, as the largest individual holder in the merger line, shall have the privilege of naming two directors: E. N. Brown, the president, will remain as director and also as president, if he desires.

The government has not the slightest intention of dissolving the merger. The lines are profitable and meeting all their obligations without calling upon the government for assistance.

Great interest is expressed here in the object of the negotiation between Lord Cowdray, owner of the Pearson oil interests in Mexico, and the group of American oil capitalists headed by John W. Gates.

The Mexican press is "free." That it should be was one of the many things promised by Madero, and local publishers have not waited for him to be formally elected before beginning to exercise their newly acquired right.

Their assumption, however, was justified. Emilio Varona Gomez, Minister of the Department of Interior, was not slow in publicly assuring the newspaper owners that they could publish whatever they liked.

That this unrestricted expression is stimulating has already been demonstrated; whether it will prove intoxicating remains to be seen.

Most of the new periodicals are said to be projected. Lack of advertising doubtless will force many of these youngsters into their graves, for the only reason apparent for their existence in many instances is that some one wishes a medium of public expression.

Some of Those Who Grace News

H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT

GERMANY FAILS TO BLIND EUROPE

LONDON, July 22.—The action of the German government in sending a warship to Agadir and notifying Morocco of its intention to land marines at that port, has been widely discussed in Europe.

Agadir is the best harbor between Tangier and Dakar on the West African coast. From the point of view of naval strategy it gives Germany an Atlantic base opposite South America and on the line of communication of Great Britain with its South African colonies.

The daily newspapers give most lively evidence of this "freedom." "El Imparcial," a paper which has always been pro-government, has inserted under its head the words "Diario Independiente," and independent it is.

The public also has caught the spirit of free speech, and almost all the papers publish columns of comment furnished by readers. Most of it is signed by the writer's name, and in this comment, and in the editorial columns, the political questions are freely discussed.

With the German action at Agadir the Algerias compact becomes waste paper. Even at Algerias German diplomats offered to recognize French supremacy in all Morocco for the gift of the port of Mogador.

For England a German naval base at Agadir is a serious disturbance. For France it is a promise of still another frontier to defend.

If Germany stays in Agadir, then there must be a new European conference, a partition of Morocco between France, Spain and Germany, and the deliberate concession to Germany of the territories she has now seized and just as much more as, by additional threats of war, she can compel her English and French opponents to concede to her.

All these circumstances the German Foreign Office has doubtless reckoned. The forward step is admirably timed; it seems destined to succeed.

PRINCESS ZITA WILL BE BRIDE OF ARCHDUKE

LUCIA, Italy, July 22.—Princess Zita of Parma and Archduke Charles Francis Joseph, second in line of succession to the dual throne of Austria-Hungary, are to be married in the last week of October in the chapel of the imperial palace in Vienna.

On her return from Rome, where she lately received the papal blessing, the young princess will make her obeisance to Francis Joseph at Linz, from which place it has been found impossible to move him.

It is interesting to note that the future empress of Austria has long been an intimate friend of Emperor William's only daughter, whom rumor often betrothed to the Austrian heir.

The villa where the betrothal took place, Planero, near here in Tuscany, is the last of the late duke's Italian possessions and greatly favored by the family as a summer residence.

The widowed Duchess Infanta Maria Antonia of Portugal, is the youngest and handsomest of the six Braganza sisters, whose brother is Dom Miguel, the pretender to the throne of Portugal, and one of whose nephews, the Duke of Viseu, married Anita Stewart of New York.

Undoubtedly the match was made by the Archduchess Maria Theresa, mother of the heir to the Austrian throne, Archduke Francis Ferdinand. The Los Angeles Times correspondent has already told how Emperor Francis Joseph's daughter had spread a net to catch young Archduke Charles for her daughter, Archduchess Ella, but Archduchess Maria Theresa and her sister, the Duchess of Parma, brought Charles and Zita together and Cupid did the rest.

His clothing, including his shoes, were ripped from his body, and he was left naked.

Walter Seigman of Glen Rock, was also struck by lightning and rendered partially unconscious. He was burned about the arms and body, but his injuries are thought not to be serious.

pressing Carlist and Republican agitators in the Pyrenees will hardly be drawn. Whatever happens, it seems that Spain will prove a final loser.

The present developments in the Moroccan affair do not now seem to promise war. But the possibility of hostilities always latent in the Sierreflan situation has certainly not been removed. In such a situation Disraeli or Palmerston would hardly have hesitated. Even Clemenceau, speaking for France, was ready to risk war rather than German invasion of Morocco six years ago.

MILLINER FALLS HEIR TO FORTUNE

Girl in Teens Stumbles on $83,000 Placed in Pathway by Indulgent American; News From London

LONDON, July 22.—A young milliner, a girl in her teens, employed at a shop at Redruth, has just become heir to $83,000. The news came as a great surprise to her acquaintances there, and she has been the recipient of congratulatory letters on every hand.

She is Miss Norma Dixon, a girl working in the millinery department of Messrs. Pope Brothers, Redruth, and first saw England when she came from America three years since on her trip.

Reports published at the end of last week stated that the French troops had entered Meknes, the scene of the proclamation of Mulawi Zin as sultan of Morocco, and had captured that prudent pretender.

The disgrace of the Grand Vizier El Glauil was made manifest in an untimely manner on May 26. On that day the sultan, surrounded by his ministers, set out for the mosque to pray.

At Willesden Police Court on Monday there was in some respects a strange parallel to the case of Lewis in the experience of Mark Mammetta, a youth of 17.

Mammetta, who was brought up in a charity school, was sent to a farm in Canada. He gave the 17th day as his birthday, and was charged with wandering without visible means of subsistence.

MISSING MAN'S BODY FOUND IN GARDEN

Legs of Slain Belgian Tied Together; Rope Around His Neck.

Mystery of Parisian Suburb Is Solved by Grewsome Find.

PARIS, July 22.—In March last year M. Vermersch, a wealthy Belgian landowner, who had a handsome villa at Vesinet, a pleasant suburb of Paris, disappeared. Every effort to discover his whereabouts failed. The affair had been almost forgotten, when a few weeks ago certain information reached the police.

M. Vermersch, who was a man of about 60, was of somewhat eccentric habits. The only other occupant of the villa was his manservant, a Belgian named Adile Vercuruse, but M. Vermersch often invited guests, and even chance acquaintances, to stay with him.

Sometimes, when he had guests staying at the house, he would suddenly disappear, and nothing would be heard of him for weeks. Then he would reappear as mysteriously as he had vanished.

In March of last year M. Jooris and Mlle. Debloucke were M. Vermersch's guests. One night Vercuruse received a telegram telling him that his mother, who lived in Belgium, was very ill, and enjoining him, if he wished to see her alive, to return home at once.

Vercuruse received his master's permission to make the journey, and started the same night. On arriving at his native place he found his mother perfectly well. She denied all knowledge of the message her son had received.

Returning to Vesinet, Vercuruse discovered his master had disappeared. M. Jooris and Mlle. Debloucke told him M. Vermersch had gone away without saying where he was going. Relatives and friends were informed, and the most exhaustive inquiries were made, but without result.

M. Jooris and Mlle. Debloucke left the villa when the police had satisfied themselves that there was nothing against them. Vercuruse stayed on for some time, hoping that his master would return; then he, too, left, and the villa was shut up.

When he disappeared M. Vermersch, it was with a weight about $10,000 on him, and it was imagined he had gone off on another of his mysterious journeys. This theory received justification from reports that he had been seen in various countries, and gradually the affair faded almost entirely from memory.

Then a few days ago the police received several anonymous letters suggesting that if they were to examine the garden of M. Vermersch's villa, the mystery might be explained. So insistent did these letters become that the authorities determined to take action.

Digging operations were therefore begun, but it was not until Monday that the workers' efforts were rewarded. Two men were digging in the kitchen garden when they discovered at a depth of about three feet, a body.

It was doubled up, a rope was fastened tightly around the neck and the legs were bound together by a strip of woolen material, evidently cut from a jersey. Only a little underwear was on the body. The opinion was at once expressed that M. Vermersch had been murdered for the sake of the $10,000, and afterwards buried, and that the false message had been sent to Vercuruse in order to get him out of the way.

Yet directly the body was discovered the police sent to the Belgian authorities asking them to arrest Vercuruse as well as M. Vermersch's wife, Mlle. Debloucke, and all three are now under lock and key.

London has not ceased talking of the Duke of Connaught's coronation, a fitting prelude to the coronation festivities.

A South African named George Lewis told a particularly sad story when brought up at Truro Police Court in the week on a charge of breaking windows.

Lewis, who claimed to have carried dispatches from Rorke's Drift and to have served in several campaigns, has become "stranded" in England. He came to England from Africa last December, the Truro magistrates were told, to see his mother, a Truro woman living at Ilford, Essex, who was dangerously ill.

He arrived three days after her death, and then went to some friends in Surrey, where he lost all his money, about $200. Since then, said the police, he had been visiting people whom he knew in South Africa in the hope of getting the money to pay his passage back.

The police added that he served in the Basuto and Matabele campaigns, and during the South African war, being a burglar, he was called up under Crompton, but deserted with six others and joined the British force.

For three days he had nothing to eat, and broke windows at Truro; then he gave himself up.

DREAM MESSAGE. At Willesden Police Court on Monday there was in some respects a strange parallel to the case of Lewis in the experience of Mark Mammetta, a youth of 17.

TERRA NOVA TO DO SURVEY WORK

Will Be in New Zealand's Service Until Sent South.

WELLINGTON, N. Z., July 22.—The Antarctic expedition ship Terra Nova, now at Lyttelton, has been engaged by the New Zealand government for coastal survey work until she is required to proceed south again in December next. Before Captain Scott left for the Antarctic a tentative agreement was entered into by him with the Hon. J. A. Millar, minister of marine, that the Terra Nova should be employed on this work during her spare time in New Zealand.

The Hon. J. A. Millar said that the Terra Nova will be sent to as many places for surveying as she has time to visit and she should be able to do a good deal of work during the six months that she will be at the government's disposal, including the coast off New Plymouth and near Cape Palliser along the coast where the Penguin was wrecked.

Bare Island (Hawke's Bay) is supposed to be two miles off, and in addition Cape Farewell, Cape Campbell and the East Cape are places where the Terra Nova may be utilized with advantage.

AGENCY PICKS BAD HUSBAND; IS SUED

GENEVA, July 22.—Probably the first case of the kind ever heard before the legal courts of Neuchâtel, Switzerland, when a tradesman brought an action against a detective agency, who, he alleged, had recommended him to a bad husband for his daughter. To find out the character and reputation of a young man who had asked for his daughter's hand, the tradesman applied to a local detective agency, and on receiving favorable information he consented to the marriage, and gave his daughter $2000 as a dowry. The young man, who in reality had a bad reputation, spent the $2000 in dissipation, and neglected and finally deserted his wife, who returned to her home.

The tradesman now came to court to cover the $2000, alleging neglect and misrepresentation. He won.

CANADIAN ROADS TO SPEND FORTUNE

Millions Will Be Disbursed by Companies Operating in the North.

TORONTO, July 22.—During the next year or two there will be very heavy expenditures at Montreal by the railway companies. The Grand Trunk will spend between $9,000,000 and $10,000,000 on elevation of tracks, station buildings, and other improvements. The Canadian Pacific Company is enlarging the Windsor-street station at a cost of $2,000,000, is erecting a new ten-story building for the Dominion Express Company, which will provide yards and improving hotel and station accommodation, and altogether is engaged in works that will cost between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000.

The outlay by the harbor commissioners for the twelve months will be at least $400,000. The three railways and the harbor board will spend during the year between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000. These expenditures at Montreal indicate the amazing development which is proceeding all over the country. Expenditures proportionately heavy are also being made to improve shipping facilities at Toronto, St. John, Halifax and Winnipeg.

At least $400,000 will be spent at St. John on harbor improvements and in providing terminals for the National Transcontinental railway. There is a recurring report that the head offices of the Canadian Northern Company will be transferred from Toronto to Montreal. As yet a definite conclusion does not seem to have been reached, but ultimately this is likely to happen.

COMPULSORY INSURANCE. BERNE, July 22.—After having been eleven years before the Swiss parliament the bill for compulsory insurance against sickness and accident has just been passed by the upper house, or Ständerat, unanimously, and by 135 votes to twelve by the lower house, or Nationalrat. A bill for the same objects was submitted to a referendum in May, 1900, and rejected by a large majority. Since then the original bill has been entirely recast. It is possible that the people may demand another referendum on the bill before it becomes a law. Should a referendum be taken, the Bund thinks the bill will probably pass.

ADMIRABLY TIMED. All these circumstances the German Foreign Office has doubtless reckoned. The forward step is admirably timed; it seems destined to succeed. As for the Spanish, their part in the whole performance has been rather contemptible. Fearful that the French march to Fez would be followed by French supremacy in all Morocco, they have deliberately volunteered to act as a German cat's paw. The Spanish occupation of El Kasar was, it turns out, the signal for German aggression in the south, and by these tactics Spain has precipitated a crisis from which she may gain a certain amount of immediate profit. But for the temporary aid of Germany she has provoked the permanent hostility of France and England. Her financial condition is desperate and French financiers are her only resource. Her political condition is even more desperate, and henceforth it may be suspected that French activity in sup-

KAISER PASSES ON VALUABLE GIFTS

German Emperor Makes Point Never to Keep Memorials.

Berlin Club Would Clothe Men in "Knickerbockers and Blouses."

BERLIN, July 22.—One of Emperor William's established rules is not to keep for his personal use or gratification any valuable gift.

For instance, when Count Schack gave his famous picture gallery to the emperor in 1894 his majesty accepted it, but immediately presented it to the city of Munich and even had a new museum constructed to hold the pictures, instead of giving way to the temptation to remove the pictures to Berlin, as Prussians wished him to do.

When Villa Falconieri, near Rome, was left to the emperor in the will of Ernest von Mettelshofen the emperor accepted it, but immediately turned the villa into a home of rest and study for artists.

The Martin Luther letter, for which J. P. Morgan of New York paid $25,000 and which he afterwards gave to the emperor probably will eventually, if not immediately, go into one of the national depositories of historical treasures.

SUE FOR GIFT ESTATE.

Emperor William has been sued for possession of the royal estate of Cadmen on the ground that he accepted it as a gift from a certain Arthur Birkenar while the latter was mentally irresponsible. If he takes it as a gift it would be perhaps the only instance during his reign of his keeping any valuable property presented to him.

While he was passing through Genoa on his return from Corfu to Berlin some of Birkenar's Italian heirs threw into his carriage a packet of letters bearing on their suit. Straightway the Berlin newspapers received a semi-official intimation that the claim was absurd; that the emperor had never owned the estate at a time when it was heavily mortgaged and ruined by bad husbandry that he accepted responsibility for all the debts and allowed Birkenar a yearly income of $8000 as payment.

HEIRS QUOTE EMPEROR.

Members of an Italian family named Giangrandi, heirs of Birkenar, declare, however, that the emperor received the estate (which has since become very valuable owing to the discovery of a royal porcelain factory) as a gift, not as a purchase, at a time when Birkenar was a "morally sound" man.

They now publish a letter in which the emperor is represented as saying: "I desire to express to you my royal gratitude for your great-hearted determination to present to me your property at Cadmen and for your true patriotic feeling displayed in the gift."

It is singular that the claim of Birkenar's heirs was not made until thirteen years after the transfer and just when the emperor had publicly declared that the improvements made on the estate by careful husbandry and a large expenditure of money.

GERMANS SEEK DRESS REFORM.

A society of some seventy persons has been organized in Berlin for the purpose of reforming the style of men's garments. It is composed of persons from all sorts of professions and aims at abolishing trousers, substituting knickerbockers, and coat and waistcoat to be given to a sort of loose blouse hanging well down to the knees. Linen of all sorts is to be discarded.

The newspapers treat the matter as more or less absurd; and some of them challenge the members of the society themselves to appear in public in the new garb.

The Cologne Gazette goes deeper and points out that Germany can have no influence over the world because of the predominance of the military uniform over civilian clothing here where even the emperor never lays aside his helmet, for a silk hat.

It thinks that the fashion for men's garments will continue to be set at London, for a popular dandy of London clubland has more influence in setting fashions than the whole of the society of German scholars, artists and writers.

SEA YIELDS DEAD ON BRITANNY COAST

Relics of the Famous French Wreck Are Washed Ashore.

PARIS, July 22.—Skulls and human bones in great numbers have been washed ashore on the Brittany coast at Ploevet, in the bay of Audierne. In this bay was wrecked, on January 21, 1797, the Republican ship Les Droites, a "Barras," which had been pursued by two English frigates and drove straight on to the rocks of the wild and pitiless coast. Every man on board perished in the shipwreck except one, an English prisoner. Soon after the wreck some 600 bodies were washed up by the sea and were buried in the sand dunes which encircle the Bay of Audierne, but which have since been invaded by the sea. With the crumbling coast the remains of the French sailors were taken back into the deep; and now once more the sea is giving up its dead.

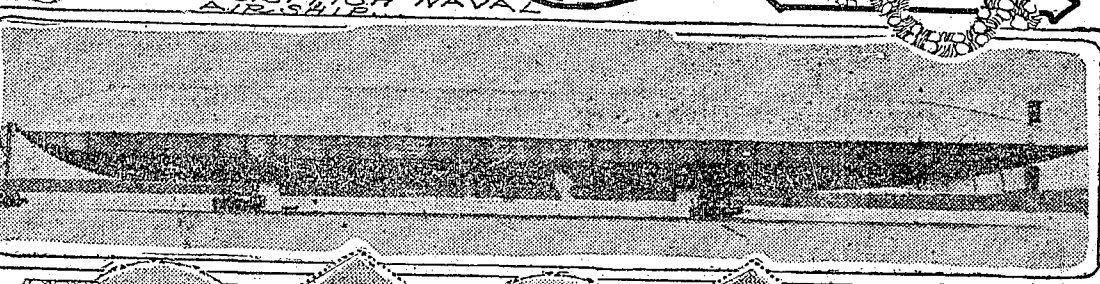

SEPARATION FROM THE CHURCH.

TORONTO, July 22.—The Presbyterian general assembly has voted by 132 to seventy-nine to permit Queen's University, Kingston, to separate from the church. The theological faculty will become Queen's College, and will be governed by a board of twenty-five trustees appointed by the general assembly. Otherwise all connection between the church and the university ceases.

LORD KITCHENER INSPECTING THE INDIAN CONTINGENT.

FINDS PORTRAIT YANKEE PLAY 'BAD-MANNERED' MADE IN ROMAN ERA BUILDERS TO RULE THE FIELD GUESTS IN LONDON SCORED

LONDON, July 18.—Professor Flinders Petrie is back in England after a successful winter's work at Memphis, Gerzeh, Hawara and Maghazul in Egypt.

"I have brought home some striking painted portraits of the Roman period discovered at Hawara," he said. "The first series was discovered as far back as 1888 and some of the finest are in the national gallery. The recent finds include portraits of men and women and judging from the style of dressing the hair, one cannot be far out in believing that they date from 100 to 250 A. D."

"A few are painted on canvas. This appears to have been employed before the adoption of panels. Some are painted in thin color, apparently water color, perhaps with white of egg as a body. The greater number are painted with colored wax laid on in a melted state with a brush. They are evidently portraits painted after death, in order to place the deceased in the tomb."

"In this period of mummies, with the portraits, were kept in the house for many years. Probably for one or two generations they stood in the colonnade around the atrium and seemed to preserve the continuity of the family life that went on around them."

SCRIBBLED ON BY BOYS.

"When when the footcases had been kicked in, when rain and dust had damaged the upper part, and when little boys at their lessons had scribbled caricatures on the faces, and here and there a sheet of canvas about a foot square and showing some comical sketches of a human figure. That is how the little Egyptian had made fun of his dead grandfather. As many of the portraits have been spoiled by the excess of oil in the mummy it is evident that the defects of that system of embalming were not yet known by experience."

"Another fashion is brought to light. Observe the style of the earrings worn. There are three distinct types, the pendant, the hoop and the ball. The ornaments for women's hair were also worn, as can be seen from the gold wreaths and front hair combs that some of them are wearing, and here a one lady who has adopted or clung to the fashion of wearing curls."

NEW STEAMSHIP SERVICE.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, July 22.—The United Fruit Company is about to start as an experiment a fortnightly steamship service between Jamaica and Southampton, beginning on July 4. If the experiment proves successful the service will be made permanent.

LONDON, July 22.—Henry W. Savage, who, after a brief holiday at Baden-Baden, sailed for New York on the Kronprinzessin Cecilie on Wednesday, has arranged with Aubrey Hopwood, author of "Nobody's Widow," for the early production in New York of Mr. Hopwood's fanciful musical comedy entitled Somewhere Else. Mr. Hopwood will collaborate with Gustav Laders, the composer of "The Prince of Pilsen," who is already working on the music of the new piece.

Mr. Savage, before his departure, expressed his conviction that American playwrights would come into their own during the forthcoming season. He based his opinion primarily on the failure of the European market and instances Vienna, where, out of fifteen musical productions last season, there was not a single real success.

SAME STORY IN BERLIN.

In Berlin there is the same story, while in Paris the eternal triangle of husband, wife, and lover as the basis of a play weaned even the public of the boulevards, which has hitherto with relief the arrival of Alas Jimmy Valentine at the Renaissance theater.

Even in London no fewer than six revivals are being given and of the four or five successes two of the biggest—"Kismet" and "Baby Mine"—are by American authors, while "Pomander Walk" won success in New York before it could gain a hearing in London.

AMERICAN TALENT RULES MARGET.

"All of which," said Mr. Savage, "goes to show that the supply is not equal to the demand in London. On the other hand, the American play market is in an increasingly healthy condition and with the notable additions made during the last few years in the number of American authors, it is reasonably certain that native talent will rule the market during the coming season."

"Two factors have contributed to this, which American managers will hail with pleasure—the greed of foreign authors and managers and the fact that native authors are presenting views of life with which their public is acquainted and in which it is interested, rather than the sometimes distorted view which results from indifferent translations of a foreign author's play."

"In any event it is the public which will gain from this swing of the pendulum, and the cause of American dramatic art will receive a much needed stimulus."

LONDON, July 22.—At the last garden party given by King Edward and Queen Alexandra at Windsor, some society correspondents remarked upon the rudeness of "American" guests, who crowded around the royal couple and stood on chairs to gaze on the king taking refreshments with his guests. It was contended at the time by other English correspondents that those guilty of the alleged rudeness were not Americans.

This incident is recalled by a notice which Carl Henschell has given, that he will move a resolution at the next meeting of the court of common council, in August, for the purpose of considering the desirability and advisability of reducing in the future the number of invitations which it is customary to issue to the aldermen and commoners to attend civic banquets in the Guild hall.

MEN AND WIVES 'UNCOUTH.'

This has reference to the alleged "uncouth manners" of some members of the council and their wives at the banquet given to the king and queen on their recent visit to the city. London was silent on the subject at the time being, as they now admit, ashamed of the gross breach of decorum on the part of certain councilmen and their friends. Now Mr. Henschell has forced the matter upon public notice.

The Financial Times says: "It is only a sense of duty strong enough to overcome our sense of shame which induces us to give publicity to the behavior of the company assembled at the Guild hall to welcome the king and queen. In common with other citizens we must perforce endure our share of the humiliation consequent upon the shocking conduct of certain vulgarisms who disgraced what was no doubt, regarded by the public at home and abroad as a representative gathering of the inhabitants of the city of London."

STARED THROUGH GLASSES.

The Daily Express in an article headed "Gog and Magog Are Ashamed," remarks how the "ladies" and "gentlemen" stood on chairs during the royal progress through the ancient hall and gazed at their majesties through opera glasses, and adds: "Such an exhibition of bad manners could hardly have found a parallel anywhere else in the whole wide world."

Reads as if these worthy Londoners were the "Americans" at the Windsor garden party, doesn't it?

STAGE GOSSIP FROM LONDON

LONDON, June 22.—William Faversham, who with his wife, Julie Opp, is, as usual, spending the holiday at their English country home, is full of a new scheme to organize a Shakespearean company, with which he will start operations in America early next year. With this in view he has approached Ellen Terry. It would appear, she is not wholly indisposed to listen to the voice of the charmer, always supposing that he comes duly equipped with a fat check-book. She has, in short, signified her willingness to consider a proposal on the condition that she receives $500 a performance with a minimum of seven performances in each week. That stipulation is rather a steep proposition, and he is taking time to think it over. Among the parts which the fair Ellen would play are Emilia in "Othello," the Nurse in "Romeo and Juliet," Faversham's company would further include himself, Julie Opp, Lauretta Taylor, of whom I hear excellent accounts, Tyrone Power and Frederick Ward. By-the-by, Faversham tells me that he has acquired another play by Edward Knoblauch, entitled "Discovering America," which he proposes to produce next season.

I daresay the news has crossed the Atlantic of the success of the Irish players, who have their headquarters at the Little Abbey Theater in Dublin. They are now appearing here at the Court, where they have been very cordially received. They are all very tall and in their own domain are hard to beat. Their strength lies in the portrayal of Irish life and character and they rejoice in the support of a small group of native Irishmen who display extraordinary cleverness in fitting them with roles. At the head of the organization stand the poet, W. B. Yeats and Lady Gregory, both extremely ingenious and imaginative playwrights. Arrangements have been established a repertoire theater, at which she produces pieces by untried dramatists or dramatists of the advanced school of Bernard Shaw, Granville Barker and John Galsworthy. She, too, has enjoyed considerable success, although, of course, she has enough money at her command to run the enterprise, were it necessary, as a losing concern. The fame of her company has got abroad and before the year is out its members are to be shipped to your side.

In Manchester, Miss Horniman, daughter of the wealthy tea merchant of that name, is engaged upon a work very similar to that accomplished by the Abbey Theater people in Dublin. She has established a repertoire theater, at which she produces pieces by untried dramatists or dramatists of the advanced school of Bernard Shaw, Granville Barker and John Galsworthy. She, too, has enjoyed considerable success, although, of course, she has enough money at her command to run the enterprise, were it necessary, as a losing concern. The fame of her company has got abroad and before the year is out its members are to be shipped to your side.

Both the Horniman and the Abbey Theater companies are eventually to make their way to Montreal, where at the New Theater in New York how the thing can be done on a paying basis. When they have succeeded in proving this in the mother country where we are still far from having a National Theater as yet, the nearest approach to it is His Majesty's and it would surprise me in no way if, a few years hence, Tree should be parted with his property in order that the word "National" might be written over its portals and he himself appointed general manager.

HEALTH OF POPE GIVES CONCERN

Work Cut to Minimum as He Is Reported Growing Weaker.

ROME, July 22.—The health of the pope continues to give grave cause for concern. His Holiness is growing weaker and the word "National" might be written over its portals and he himself appointed general manager.

His Holiness is cheerful and bears the pain and suffering with a remarkable degree of cheerfulness. He has a longing to go to Venice and look at the sea once more, but this of course is impossible. He remarked to a visitor recently that he believed if he could breathe the sea air once more it would give him a new lease of life.

As it becomes more apparent that it will not be long before the election of another Pope will be necessary, interest centers in Cardinal Rampolla. It is the very general belief in church circles that he will receive the almost unanimous vote of the Sacred College.

ENGLISH COAST TOWNS SLIPPING INTO WATER

Battering Seas Take Lands as Toll as Result of Constant Erosion; Much Soil Is Reclaimed to Counteract Loss as Far as Concerns Area

LONDON, July 22.—During the last few winters, so serious have been the land-slides on the east and south coasts of England, sweeping away houses that had at one time stood far back from the sea, that an alarm spread all around the coasts, from town to town, that England was gradually but slowly being swallowed up by the waves. In the neighborhood of Cromer, for instance, where land-slides are frequent occurrences, the natives tell of the ancient town of Cromer, now lying under the waves far out at sea.

In response to the representations of several municipalities on the coast, a commission on coast erosion was appointed by the government to inquire into the changes that have been occurring in the coast line during the last twenty or thirty years, and the result of their examination now shows that while the sea is washing away large portions of the coast line, much larger accretions are occurring, the net result being that the United Kingdom, instead of shrinking is steadily growing larger. In fact, while 4304 acres have been washed away, 28,717 acres have been gained on other parts of the coast by the receding of the sea.

GOING ON FOR CENTURIES.

Nevertheless it is true that numerous towns are in serious danger. The coast of East Angles between Flamborough Head and Spurn Point, stretch of forty miles, has been subject to erosion for centuries and it is still occurring along the whole coast at the rate of from two to four yards a year.

It is estimated that since the first Roman invasion in 55 B. C. 115 square miles of land have been lost. Twelve towns and villages have been swept away. At Hunstanton, the chalk cliff is gradually being washed away and the houses on the top are in danger. From Tarmouth, where the Thames estuary has been going on for many years, and in 1905 the old church of Eccles disappeared in the waves. At Pakefield, in 1907, property valued at $60,000 fell into the sea, and since that date further falls of cliff have occurred, carrying houses with them.

High tides have been done on the coast of Sheppey, in Kent, many hundreds of acres, including Warden Church, having been washed away. The three castles at Sandown, Deal and Walmer were, according to war office records, built a quarter of a mile from the shore. About one hundred and fifty years ago they had to be protected from the sea, but the Castle of Sandown and a battery to the north subsequently became a prey to the sea.

ISLE OF WIGHT GOING.

The beautiful Isle of Wight, the "Garden of England," is being steadily though slowly washed away. Meanwhile its position affords shelter to the coast line behind it. To the west of Hurst Castle the coast is wasting rapidly. Land-slides at Lyme Regis have brought down as much as forty to fifty acres at a time, and the old Church of St. Michael is now in danger of being destroyed. The sea has already practically fallen into the sea.

But where these places have lost so much other parts have gained, notably the coast line in the northeast between Tees and The Wash and between Lynn and Walsingham, where large tracts of land have been reclaimed from the sea.

"POMANDER WALK" HIT.

Everything is right about the production of Louis R. Becker's "Pomander Walk." It is given in just the right theater, the Playhouse, and by just the right family of actors. As the short-tempered old admiral, Cyril Maude, has a part that he will surely make famous, while Mrs. Maude, whose stage name is Wilma Emery, and Miss Margaret Maude are a family party, you see, and a charming family as well.

The play is already well known in America, where it had a big success last winter. It shows every indication of having the same happy experience here. It certainly is a pretty and pleasant entertainment. There is not a thrill in it, but no end of quiet humor and homeliness. It is one of the most restful plays the correspondent ever saw.

LOTS OF POMANDER WALKS.

There are lots of Pomander Walks in the second-class, highly respectable suburbs of London that are just the same today as they were a hundred years ago, when the action of the play is supposed to take place. Of course there is a nice little love story and the rest of the dialogue is all gossip of a very natural kind.

The world, which has become callous to the sacrifices in marriage of princesses for state reasons, for once professed itself shocked at the heartlessness of a father who could bestow his fifteen-year-old daughter on a man more than twenty years her senior, and a man with an unsavory reputation, too.

The emperor had been very firm on the point. It was one of his great objects that every available member of the imperial family should contract matrimonial alliances with the reigning houses of Europe, more especially, so it is said, as he had failed to do so himself. Though the Princess Clotilde, who was betrothed to a prince of the strength of character of her house, never took the public into her confidence if her marriage was a failure, she was universally believed to have been an ill-used wife.

The war of 1870 changed the fortune of the Bonaparte family. The empress, and later the emperor, came to England, and Princess Clotilde and her husband fled to Italy. They had and human kind, highly respectable, middle-class gossip.

Mr. Maude's pretty little theater has again a pretty little play, and so everybody should be happy.

It is said to have to say that this happy state of affairs does not exist. The Haymarket Theater, where Herbert Trench has brought out a play by Sardou called "Above Suspicion." The program announces that it is the "exclusively authorized translation and adaptation by William Trench," and that "the acting rights in this play in the United Kingdom and America are the property of Herbert Trench."

NOBODY WANTS THIS PLAY.

He need not have gone to all that trouble, for it is doubtful if anybody would think of disputing his rights. He's welcome to them. The master hand of Sardou is apparent in spots and his left stagecraft is shown in the plot but way he unties the knots in the plot but the first part of it is largely chatter. The audience wondered what it was all about, for an English audience is none too alert. It always wants to be personally conducted through the plot.

Miss Alexandra Castle looked charming as the woman who caused all the trouble, and Aubrey Smith gave a fine performance of the outraged husband, Charles Maude as the lover overacted to an annoying degree.

The main trouble with the play is that there were too many characters in it and they all had too much to say. It was a flood-tide of words.

QUAINT CUSTOMS KEPT.

Two quaint old ceremonies, one of very ancient date, the origin of which is not quite known, have just taken place, one in Ireland and the other in the old world village of Braunton in Lestocashire.

In North Kilmarry, some twelve miles from Cork, there is a grave to which the country people still make pilgrimages at certain periods of the year, believing that they will be cured of rheumatism and other ills. On the grave are a number of crutches and sticks which have been left by pilgrims who have been cured.

The pilgrims bring with them cups and jars of holy water which they place on the burial place, some of them also tearing off parts of their clothing, which they hang on a thorn bush beside the grave. The custom is described in the inscription: "Erected by a friendly hand to the memory of Rev. Patrick Dilworth, died January, 1833, aged 58 years."

The "Holm meadow" at Braunton is always moved on the Thursday before Feast Sunday and the hay taken by the parish clerk who, having it removed to the village church, has it strewn all over the aisles. The origin of the custom is not known, but it is thought that it had its beginning at the time when the floors of the churches and houses were of earth and covered merely with rushes, and that there took place each year the ceremony of strewing, the villagers going in processions to the churches to strew the floors with new rushes.

Scattered about London and its environs are still detachments of troops from every part of the empire. The Indian contingent of the "Coronation army" is encamped at Hampton Court, and consists of Sikhs, Rajputs, Gurkhas, Pathans, Maharrattas and members of other fighting races—some 600 officers and men in all—whose rich and varied uniforms present a most picturesque spectacle. Lord Kitchener paid a visit to the Indian camp the other day and inspected the troops, chatting with some of the veterans whom he had known in India.

The Queen of Bulgaria was a Princess of Reuss Kostritz, one of the smaller principalities of Germany. She married King Ferdinand when he was only a prince, but she was a princess. She shared herself free and he was proclaimed king. His first wife was the daughter of the Duke of Parma, and there are four children of that union who now have Queen Eleonore for a step-mother.

FACT, FICTION AND FANCY FROM EAST

*Camille Begins Marathon in Search of Job; Then Off to Farm for Shape

NEW YORK.—The new theatrical season is on.

Camille Wentworth is doing her annual equinoctial maneuver for a job. It precedes the rehearsal season by a few weeks. Around and around she goes until her name is affixed to a contract which binds her, among other things, to behave like a lady. She goes to her "chambers" pocketbook, she looks up a reasonable boarding-house, like The Cedars, and goes away to drink cow's milk, so that she will be able to wear a low-neck gown without making the wardrobe lady kid her. Her problem is to put on ten pounds in two weeks.

She finds a place at seven dollars per. It is a lovely place, "in the heart of the most beautiful mountain country. Surmounting the top of a wooded foothill, it commands a view the like of which does not exist except in this locality. Fishing, rowing, bathing, canoeing in a lake near by, and to entertain the tired city folk. Stretching away from the cottage is a wide expanse of country, dotted here and there with cedars. Beautiful wild flowers delight the eye, and the meadows, interspersed with the tall grass, babbling brook, bring to one's vision the flowered fields of Arcady."

"Oh, grapefruit," says Camille, "where is the cow?" And then she hurries through the booklet and last finds a picture of the place and in it is a cow. She writes a letter. She for the country away from the hall bedroom and quick lunch places of the city. She must regain her "strength" before the hard rehearsal season, the perspiring, heart-breaking four weeks in a low-studded lycraum bed, with no room for the body to take with her yards and yards of inexpensive calico to make summer dresses to rehearse in. And there is the cloth for the bloomers. How she dreads to think of those four weeks, but the deed must be done.

PRELIMINARY SKIRMISHING.

But what a time Camille has had in getting that contract.

Beginning about the first of March, she has written to all the business managers and advance agents she met while on the road during the season. At supper and at dinner and during the game of pinocle or poker after the show this one and that has told her of his influence with some firm or other. "She is talented; she can do better things," and being fairly foxy herself she has made a note of the booster's name and takes plenty of time to call his bluff. Sometimes he answers.

"Anything in the world, little girl, that I can do for you I will. Let me know where you are living and I'll call and talk the matter over. I'll be in the city in a few days. For it is the closed season for entertainment in the profession. The salary saved must be made to last until the opening of the fall. It is evened up."

Most of her gentlemen friends to whom she writes "never get the letters." So after the correspondence wears itself out and Camille goes back to her room, she begins to campaign for a job in earnest. First she meets all her girl friends and they talk the matter over. Her room is the clearing house for the prospects of all the girls of her generation. They wish to find out what she knows and if she has any money saved. But Camille is wise and she keeps what she knows to herself. She doesn't take notice of what they say. She remembers it. To let them see her taking notes would make them shut up.

THAT BURLESQUE NIGHTMARE.

Then she runs over in her mind the possibilities when she refuses for the night. Sleep does not come quickly for Camille is thinking hard. That Wardlock show, how she would like to get with it. But they want only blondes, and Camille isn't a blonde. She knows the manager, back in New York, and she is very kind to the girls. Well, that won't do. And that "String Bean" show. One must have an operatic voice. Poor Camille, she can't sing above whisper and a "cholic" she gives her no chance. That is out of the question. She wonders if Al Timber has anything for her and how soon they open. And then she runs the whole list over in her drowsy

UNCLE SAM AIDS HUNGRY CATTLE IN BLACK HILLS

STOIX FALLS, S. D.—The United States Government, through the officers of the forestry service, has come to the relief of the cattlemen and horse raisers of the Black Hills and adjacent territory, whose range has been burned off by the excessively hot and dry weather in that part of the Northwest.

The feed for the cattle and horses has been reduced to the minimum, and more serious even than this lack of feed is the fact that water holes have become dry over many parts of the range and there is no sufficient water to supply the wants of the animals.

The forestry service has decided to permit cattle and horses to be placed in the Black Hills forest reserve under a lease system.

Applications have been made to the Black Hills forest service for the grazing of about 500 head of cattle and nearly 1000 head of horses in the Black Hills forest reserve. The United States Agriculture has authorized the grazing of 10,000 head of cattle or horses in each of the two divisions of the Black Hills forest reserve, and there is no doubt that the drought has decided against the sheep owners placing their herds in the Black Hills forest reserve and as a result they must look for new grazing grounds elsewhere.

Associate Forester A. F. Potter of Washington, D. C., who recently visited the reserve at the request of the cattlemen of South Dakota and Wyoming, following their petition to the Forestry Department to permit them to graze their herds in the Black Hills during the continuance of the drought has decided against the sheep owners placing their herds in the Black Hills forest reserve and as a result they must look for new grazing grounds elsewhere.

ELECTRICITY TO MAKE BRAIN AND MUSCLE

STOCKHOLM, July 22.—According to Professor Svante Arrhenius, of Stockholm, bright and "brainy" children, with robust physical development, by means of electricity, are promised by experiments carried out in his suggestion. Fifty school children were divided into two groups, being identical in point of height, weight and age, and were placed in two classrooms of the same size and having the same amount of light. Exactly the same teaching was given in each classroom, but one of the classrooms was subjected to discharges of electricity and the other was not. Though the experiment is not yet concluded it has been found possible already to report that the "electrified" children have responded by showing greater mental and physical development than the children not so treated.

KILLS DAUGHTER AND COMMITS SUICIDE

VIENNA, July 22.—A terrible tragedy is reported from Sofia, Bulgaria, where Colonel Petronoff, commander of the Sixth Infantry Regiment of Timovo, now garrisoned in Sofia, killed his daughter, a beautiful girl of about 18 years of age, and then committed suicide. The cause of the tragedy is said to have been Miss Petronoff's pronounced aversion to a woman whom the commander intended to marry. His daughter believed that this woman was of a doubtful character, and attempted to do everything possible in order to dissuade her father from taking the step which might plunge the whole family into misery. Her obstinate refusal to be friends with her father's fiancée excited the father's fury. Recently he entered the bedroom where his daughter was lying asleep and stabbed her with a dagger, after which he took his own life by stabbing himself.

ASBURY RELAXES ITS RULES

BOARD WALK AND ESPLANADE REVIEW AT ASBURY COURT.

There was a time when no one was allowed to bathe in Asbury on Sunday, but the rules of the resort have relaxed a great deal in recent years.

Asbury can be very hot, but so is almost every summer resort at times. Asbury is famous for its morality and its baby parades. The morality is diurnal, and the baby parade is annual. During the week in which the parade is held a queen is crowned and there are balls and other grand high doings.

DOING TIME; SEEK PITY

Spouses Sent to Prison for Non-Support Have Organized

NEW YORK.—Not to be a bit behind their more fashionable contemporaries, the members of the famous Alimony Club in Ludlow Street Jail, the husbands on Blackwell's Island have organized a club of their own.

They think, like the Ludlow street husbands, that their wives have been too cruel in getting them sentenced to a summer residence behind bars. Moved by the hot spell, they break their "sullen silence," tell their grievance and make a few suggestions in a letter to the editor of Forward, the Jewish daily newspaper. The letter, published by Forward yesterday, is:

"We ask you, in the name of justice, to print this letter. We have been sentenced to six long months by our wives. The charge against us is that we have not supported our families. We are in prison."

"There are many among us who would never have received so severe a sentence had we had a hearing before an impartial judge. There are many cases of the following character: The wife abandons her husband and to get a bit of satisfaction she appears before a magistrate and charges him with non-support. The judge does not give him opportunity to explain. The bench is always in sympathy with the weaker sex."

NEW YORK IS STILL IN RING DESPITE HOT WEATHER

NEW YORK, July 22.—New York has come through her trial by heat slightly damaged, but still in the ring.

The city has one great advantage in meeting the heat. There are scores of little cooling trees which may be taken for a slight expense, and in reasonable comfort.

During those awful days early in the month these advantages were certainly taken by the populace.

It is a safe estimate to say that more than a million people went to the seashore, lake, shore and mountain resorts within easy reach of New York on more than one day of the extreme heat. On July 4, for example, it is estimated that the number of New Yorkers and visitors who thus sought succor from heat numbered upward of two millions. The immensity of this may be realized when it is known that there are only seven States in the Union which have a population of more than 2,000,000 men, women and children.

The 8631 ton steamer Minneapolis crowded the Western ocean as a yacht on her last trip, as far as her two passengers were concerned, for they had all the luxurious furnishings, all the attention of polite officers and crew, and the deck space for their exclusive benefit. The lucky two were Mrs. S. J. Black, wife of a big cattle fancier of Indianapolis, and Harry West, a farmer of Oregon.

Delayed by the dockmen's strike, the liner did not sail on her scheduled date from London, and all the other passengers were transferred to other ships. Thus Mrs. Black and Mr. West had eighteen stewards, three stewardesses and two cooks to attend to them. They dined at the captain's table, one at either hand, and were not bothered by other passengers getting in their way or seeking to engage them in conversation when they didn't feel like talking.

Each had a bedroom steward, a table steward, deck steward, watchman, bath-room attendant, barman, that is, each could have had a barman if desired. "Boots" and "one steward to bring tea, water and another to fetch hot water."

YOUNG ABSCONDER BETRAYED BY GIRL

CHICAGO.—Betrayed by a pretty 18-year-old girl with whom he had fallen in love, Albert McGookin, who absconded with $3500 belonging to depositors of the First National Bank of Englewood, was arrested at Marengo, Ill., and brought back to Chicago yesterday.

McGookin, who is 20 years old, said he spent all of the $3500 except $7 and amounts with which he purchased two diamonds, traveling in first-class style and having a good time with girls. He was wearing a diamond ring and a diamond shirt stud and had bought a broncho when arrested.

McGookin was employed by the bank as a messenger. June 3 he collected the money from the depositors and absconded with it. He was arrested by the Chicago police and then I was arrested.

"I don't think I would have been caught if it hadn't been for Louise. She was pretty and I liked her as soon as we got acquainted. I bought her a nice diamond ring and we had good times."

McGookin was living at a hotel in Marengo and was in front of the place with his broncho when Lieutenant Coughlin and Detective McGuire arrested him. McGookin emptied his pockets before they boarded the train and showed the detectives the $7 he had left.

The boy was starting for a dance on a dairy farm near Marengo when arrested. He had taken his broncho to the street and was preparing to ride the animal to the farm.

IN RELIGIOUS FIELDS

NEW YORK, July 22.—There may be a finer, more effective organization than the Salvation Army, but I am frank to say I don't know what it is.

In season and out, in cold weather and hot it goes on its way, taking the light of the gospel into dark places and lending the helping hand of Christian sympathy to fallen humanity. It is gratifying to see the work of this splendid organization receiving the recognition it has earned.

Theodore Roosevelt pays a very glowing compliment to the Salvation Army and incidentally to Rider Haggard, the novelist, in the Outlook.

Concluding his review of Haggard's recent work Roosevelt says: "The Salvation Army has done social work in England in many different lines, and it has met the well-nigh infinitely varied needs of those among whom it has worked with an equally varied and successful singular combination of zeal and sanity. Men, women and children are all alike cared for. The maternity receiving homes are among those which meet especially desperate needs in a spirit that is really that of the Founder of Christianity. Yet, great though the good is that is done by these homes, great the achievement they represent in the rescue of poor creatures not really vicious, but far more often victims of vice, all this is equaled by the work done in many other ways. One very interesting feature brought out by Haggard, incidentally, is that in a sense the Salvation Army is a 'this gentleman' which is more literal than it means such a complete change in a man's nature as is equivalent to the casting out of devils. Few people who read his book can fail to be almost as much impressed as Haggard is by the extraordinary combination of lofty disinterestedness, intense zeal and understanding, and first-rate business ability which have enabled General Booth and those associated with him to accomplish so much in directing work of reformation, would be the waste forces of benevolence to national ends."

Educationists who desire a refined Bible for use in schools need only reprint the New Testament this figure in the papers. This version was the clergyman's attempt—in his own language—"to diffuse over the sacred pages the elegance of modern English." Accordingly Nicodemus is referred to as "this gentleman." The daughter of Jarius is raised from the dead with the command, "Young lady, arise!" and at the Transfiguration St. Peter remarks, with painful politeness, "Oh, sir, what a delectable residence we might fix here."

Sermons are no so lengthy as they used to be, and one seldom sees in the Rev. papers the joke, so familiar in other times, wherein the minister was chided for his "fourteenth" remark, which was supposed to mark a period in his sermon somewhat towards its close.

It is said that Thomas Hooker thought of his duty in performance of his duty in performance of his duty. Once it is related that the famous divine did deliver a really short sermon—preaching exactly fifteen minutes. He sat down; but after a brief rest, was up and said it was not over yet. Every one of Granmer's sermons was a small volume in itself, and Bunyan, Calvin, Baxter and Knox are all said to have been only a little more merciful to their hearers.

In striking contrast to these long-winded discourses may be mentioned some startlingly brief sermons of late years. Perhaps the shortest of all was that delivered by a clergyman at Ocean Grove, New Jersey, who, after announcing his text, announced that he was finished, and then said, "Don't worry; it's wicked."

It would be difficult to exceed this in brevity and effectiveness, but a North Carolina minister, in the last century closed approximately it. He gave out the text, "God so loved the world," etc., to which he added this observation: "My friends, did I speak an hour I couldn't make that message any plainer. I'll just leave it with you."

Another clergyman had been requested to deliver a charity address on behalf of orphan children. His sermon consisted of the text, "Whence shall we find bread to satisfy the hunger of the multitude?" and then said, "The collection was the largest ever taken in that vicinity."

For the first time in connection with a convention of the American Federation of Catholic Societies, to be held at Columbus, August 20 to 24, there is to be a convention of editors of Catholic periodicals. The aims are personal acquaintance and discussion of methods of work, which such periodicals may be improved. The apostolic delegate at Washington, Mgr. Falconio, will be the celebrant of the mass at the Columbus convention, and principal speakers will be Archbishop McManister, of Milwaukee, and Bishop McManister, of Trenton, two of the founders of the federation, and Archbishop Moeller of Cincinnati. Former Secretary Bonaparte of Baltimore will be another speaker and will deliver the banquet address. The principal guest at the banquet, August 20, at which it is expected 12,000 will be in line. In this federation, among others, are the Ancient Order of Hibernians, the Knights of Columbus, the Foresters, and the Catholic laymen, whose combined membership runs into the hundreds of thousands.

TWO MILLION DOLLAR DEPOT.

CHICAGO, July 22.—Bids for the construction of the new $2,000,000 Union railroad station at Kansas City were opened yesterday at a secret meeting attended by President W. S. Kinnear of the Terminal Railroad Association of Kansas City and Architect Jarvis Hunt. Several proposals were received, but the contract will not be awarded for several days.

"Waste" in Jeweler's Workroom Worth More Than Its Weight in Precious Metal

To appreciate the value of economy, visit a jeweler's workroom, where invisible specks of gold lurk in the cracks of the floor, on the white aprons of the workmen, under the tables, among the tools, in the water, on the walls, in the dust, everywhere, and learn from the watchmakers, the engravers and the stone setters what the hoarding of waste really amounts to in dollars and cents.

As a matter of fact, the room so impresses a visitor with the spirit of husbanding that he almost hesitates to breathe for fear of appropriating a few grains of gold floating in the air, or to walk across the floor for fear of carrying away some of the precious metal on his shoes, or to shake hands with any of the workmen for fear of having a shyn particle unavoidably sticking to his finger tips.

Not that in a jeweler's workroom there is such evidence of gold as to remind one of the gorgeous palaces of the Aztecs in the dust of Cortez, when gold plates as large as wagon wheels decorated the outside of buildings. Oh, no! A jeweler's workroom is anything but magnificent looking. One of those places which are different from what they seem. The floor is rough and unvarnished, but it is a valuable floor; the walls are uncalculated, but they are rich walls; the tables near the marks of many a craftsman's chisel, still they are expensive tables, because they have gold all over them.

But you cannot see the gold. They look just as ordinary as a do, but there are a lot of them. They are so much that every eight years or so the boards, the tables, and things are burned, when the cheap looking floor drops $500 in gold in the furnace, the tables go up, and the walls yield a goodly amount, accumulated through the years.

When a workman must repair twenty-five watches a day, he has no time to waste the piece of gold which flies off his wheel and rolls under the table, he has no time to spend gathering the gold shavings which drop into his tool box, he has no time to notice the gold dust settling on the walls, when he is blowing the flame to solder a ring. But he does not worry. He knows that those shiny particles, if they are not to be recovered some day, when the janitor sweeps or the floor is burned. Of course, he tries to collect what waste he can. He is responsible for it, and he must bear it in a tin box given to him for that purpose. Every month he is supposed to dust out the drawers of his work bench thoroughly and save the dust.

An elderly engraver keeps the little chips of gold he punches out of a watch case or a ring in a cigar box. No one would ever know that there was a gold atom the scraps of paper, the tobacco, the wood shavings, the dirt, if the engraver did not say there was. But every evening before passing out from his day's work the old engraver places this rubbish in the big safe carefully, along with the diamond rings, the Swiss watches and the precious stones.

The janitor also every evening drops his sweepings into a barrel for safe keeping. In fact, each workman before leaving his home, must wash his hands in one of the small basins, dish pans, or pails on top of a barrel into which the water runs, as into a reservoir, for safety. Not a drop of the water is lost, it is used with gold. Sometimes 500 worth of gold is washed off the workmen's hands in one day, and much more scraped off their aprons.

Then ever so often, probably once a month, all the towels used by the men in the workroom and all the men's big white aprons are put into a kettle and boiled to give up their gold. When hats, coats, shoes are worn sufficiently to be worn, bring them down to the workroom, too, to be boiled for their gold, which is collected in a reservoir, passed through a sieve, and the water drawn off. The residue is placed in a crucible and put into a furnace, when the gold drops to the bottom and the dirt rises. Then the crucible is broken and the gold, being separated from its alloy, is used again. Much gold is saved in this way.

CONVICTS TO WORK FARM

Criminals Are Pleased With Scheme of Legislature

GULFPORT, Miss.—As a result of the recent state-wide immigration convention the legislature is to be petitioned to set aside 25,000 acres of land, to be worked by convicts. Governor Noel presided at the convention and favorable legislative action is expected.

The plan is to place the immense tracts of cut-over timber lands under the careful cultivation as the other demonstration farms of the State, to make the farm not only self-supporting, but a source of revenue which may be applied to the expenses of the State penitentiary institutions or to other state expenditures.

It has not been decided whether to work the entire tract as an assemblage of large farms, or to give a tract each and allow them to work it in much the same fashion that he would if he were free and owned the land.

CRIMINOLOGISTS FAVOR PLAN.

The latter plan would fit in admirably with a further extension of the system which contemplates giving convicts a tract of land at the end of their term, the seed and implements to work it, and allowing him to pay for his equipment in small installments.

Experts in criminology say the plan is likely to mark the beginning of an entirely new method of dealing with delinquents of all varieties.

Statistics show that the smallest percentage of crime originates among such classes. So the criminologists favor it. They advise keeping convicts at regular labor outdoors, requiring an exercise of brain as well as body, and above all something that shows them a better way of life, and an honest citizenship when they are released.

But the benefits to the criminals are only the beginning of the advantages the state will reap.

WHAT CONVENTION HAS DONE.

The greatest agricultural experts of the world today are directing their attention to the South. Some of the most noted Federal authorities whose attention has been directed to the Gulf coast of Mississippi state that within the next ten years this region will become one of the healthful conditions, a wonderful soft water, its abundant streams and fine drainage area, is destined to become the most thickly settled country in all America and will hold the same attraction to the United States that the Nile holds to all Egypt and Africa.

The state wide immigration convention, though only two years old, has done wonders in bringing in the new settlers and establishing them as successful farmers.

STOCK RAISING TO BE FEATURE.

By the new plan 22,000 acres will be put into corn, potatoes, melons, oranges, cane, etc., and the increase in the output of the farms in the region will follow this educational demonstration is estimated at from 500 per cent. to 800 per cent.

Early season beginning in March or stock raising. The Bermuda grass and lespedeza are noted as farmers. The new settlers are beginning in March or April enables cattle to be fattened for market with little or no grain.

PEDDLING BANANAS HE WAKENS COP; IS NABBED

CHICAGO, July 22.—"Bananas!" shouted James Cokidas, a peddler, at Main and Davis streets, Evanston, Ill., last night, when he was awakened by a policeman. Leo Larkin, awakened, dressed and took Cokidas to the station, where he was charged with disorderly conduct. An Evanston ordinance makes the shouting of wares unlawful.

NIMRODS IN AUTOMOBILE

Texas Ranchers Abandon Horse and Hunt in Motor Car

REFUGIO, Tex.—The use of the automobile upon the big ranches in Texas, for business and pleasure, has become a fact. There is hardly a ranch in the state that does not possess one or more cars. For the most part the grazing territory is well suited for automobile, the country being generally of a level character, and even where highways have not been constructed the natural smoothness of the country enables the machines to be operated with little interference.

Perhaps the most notable ranch in the use of autos is that of F. B. Rooke in Refugio county, in the upper Gulf coast region. This ranch embraces 45,000 acres of land. Mr. Rooke owns five cars.

The ranch garage is constructed of concrete blocks and is built for the accommodation of seven machines. Connected with it is a repair shop containing all the necessary accessories for keeping the cars in running condition.

Mr. Rooke has one car that he has driven fully 125,000 miles and he says that it is still good for another 25,000 or 50,000. For a long time it was the family car. When an occasion arose it was turned over to the ranch superintendent. This car is of a two-cylinder chain drive type. The family conveyance is a large five-passenger touring car. He also owns a Ford car for his own use. The car which Mr. Rooke keeps for his own use is a four-cylinder roadster. His son has a medium sized roadster.

The big ranches in Texas, which Mr. Rooke's cattle graze is covered with a thick growth of mesquite trees and other shrubbery. This wilderness is the habitat of great numbers of deer and other wild game. Mesquite and other shrubbery are many roads which afford an easy passage for the automobiles.

One of the great pleasures Mr. Rooke and his neighbors derive from the use of his automobiles is in hunting deer during the open season and in chasing down coyotes and wolves. He says that he has killed upon his ranch during the last few months thirty-seven wolves by hunting them in his cars and has shot them.

During the winter season a favorite pastime is to use the cars for duck shooting. The small ponds and lakes upon the ranch are visited by myriads of wild ducks and geese when cold comes, begins to set in. It is an easy matter for a man to get his fill of this character of sport by using the cars as a blind for shooting the fowls. Mr. Rooke is a great hunter.

Whenever they feel in the mood to take a run to San Antonio, Houston or any other town within a radius of fifty to 200 miles it is considered a matter of no unusual moment for them to indulge in such pleasures and great conveniences that come through the use of cars upon Mr. Rooke's and other ranches they are of great value from a business standpoint.

From a business standpoint, the use of cars in carrying out a different character of work that is constantly demanding attention upon the big landed properties. They afford a quick means of transportation between the commercial points and the ranch headquarters.

Presently the machines are used for marketing products of the farms that are often run in connection with the ranches and to bring some rancher automobiles are used for "fence riding," but this can only be done where the boundary fence is paralleled with a fairly good road, and it is the exception rather than the rule where such an improvement exists.

The introduction of automobiles upon many of the ranches has done away with the picturesque mounted cowboy, and this frontier character soon will belong to the past, of wares unlawful.

Stage and Land

ORPHEUM

Easily the biggest bill of the year is offered at the Oakland Orpheum today, when five new acts will be found on the program. Of these five three are given head-line honors, the distinction of being named as a feature of the bill having been divided between three acts—Al. Johnson, the great minstrel man; Emma Dunn, late star of "Mother," who appears in a sketch called "The Baby," and Willa Holt Wakefield, a New York society entertainer.

Al. Johnson, who last season was the star feature of Lew Dockstader's Minstrels, is apparent in vaudeville with his inimitable chatter and song. At the close of his season with the big minstrel organization, Mr. Johnson played at the Fifth Avenue Theater, New York, and scored there what can easily be pronounced the most emphatic success ever made on Broadway by a black-face comedian. The demands for his services came from every side and it is a matter of congratulation to Orpheum patrons that his services were exclusively secured by Martin Beck.

Of strong appeal and finely sustained interest is the playlet "The Baby," the splendid vehicle in which Emma Dunn is making a success in vaudeville. Miss Dunn and her company, including John Stokes, the author of the playlet, will be a feature of Orpheum's show next week. This role fits Miss Dunn admirably. She starred in "Mother" for some time and played the mother with Richard Mansfield in "Peer Gynt."

In this play the role is that of a German immigrant, whose husband has left her. She takes the baby to a foundling asylum in New York and after she has given it to the authorities, finds she cannot reclaim it. She tries to get the baby back in a most gripping scene. The anguish of the mother is very short but very vivid. The end is happily and dramatically brought about. This part is one of the best Miss Dunn has ever had and in it she is making one of the big hits of a brilliant career.

It has been several years since the charming and cultured presence of Willa Holt Wakefield has graced the theaters of the Orpheum Circuit. In the meantime Miss Wakefield has been winning greater laurels in and around New York. Her appearance here next week will be a part of her second tour in the West. Miss Wakefield is a Southerner who has left her surroundings of politeness and refinement of the drawing room and has brought with her that atmosphere to vaudeville. She cannot fail to impress her auditors as a cultured, intelligent and brilliant woman. Withal she has the knack of entertaining that makes her an instant favorite.

A jolly good lot of fun is promised in the performance of "The Dandies," in their musical melange and burlesque, "Our Audiences." Insight, too, into the class and manner of the English musical hall devotee is to be obtained from the burlesque. It is a great travesty, and, like all clever caricature, a fair picture of the real thing. The three men and two women are most capable entertainers and Henry J. Corter, their head, is famous in England as a producer of these laughable features. This act has played, by royal command, before the king and queen.

The Charles Ahern cycling comedians present a novel offering in which skillful wheeling and genuine comedy are intermingled. This troupe came to the Orpheum direct from the London Hippodrome, where they have been a feature for one month, and at the close of this tour they return for a long engagement. The act is full of laughable features, of which the finish, which Mr. Ahern calls "A Mile in 13 Seconds," is perhaps the most unique.

"The Photo Shop," one of the finest acts that Jesse Lasky ever has produced, surpassing even "The Piano Phils," "A Night on a House Boat," "At the Country Club" and other brilliant successes of his, is to be retained on the bill for one more week. It is a delightful musical comedy and lends color and life to the program in abundant measure. A dozen pretty girls, several smart comedians, a wealth of scenic effects, many witty lines and sparkling singing numbers are to be found in "The Photo Shop."

Gene Green, who has scored a tremendous hit during the last week with his singing, is to vary the routine of his numbers and will no doubt continue to be as great a success as during the last seven days.

The Marcel Boris trio of athletes will round out this great show.

BELL

The special offering in this week's bill of vaudeville at the Bell is the Oriental grand operetta, "A Royal Romance," which Edmund Stanley and his company are presenting, and which is unquestionably the biggest thing ever presented at the exceptionally low scale of prices which are charged here. There are in the cast of "A Royal Romance," besides Mr. Stanley, Mlle. Hortense Mazaretti, the popular French contralto, and Miss Belle Storey, the beautiful young Scotch soprano. All three are artists of the first water, and together they give excerpts from several of the famous grand operas, together with a few of the more modern musical compositions in a manner which, with the elaborate stage settings and costumes, makes this one of the finest, most enjoyable musical offerings ever heard in the city.

A feature that will unquestionably commend itself to the patrons of the Bell is Josselyn's magnificent interpretation of the story of "Ben Hur" or "A Slave of the Galley." It is an expensive production, invented, constructed and patented by William H. and E. B. Josselyn and is acknowledged to be the most dignified attraction ever seen in vaudeville. It will be shown as a special added feature of this week's show.

Al. White's Four Dancing Bugs are here with their extraordinary assortment of big steps, which means that there is something in the nature of a treat in store for that very large division of vaudeville patronage which fancies the clog and the eccentric fling.

The Four Londoners present one of the most daring and beautiful aerial acts ever seen on the circuit. There are two charming and agile women in the act and it is to be said that they are not a bit less clever than the two male performers. For the many who fancy athletic vaudeville, the Londoners promise a rare treat.

Pearl and Roth in a light and airy laugh producing act, "Forcing An Opportunity," and Somers and Storke in "Jackson's Honeymoon" are both big specials of the week's program.

YE LIBERTY

There will be the usual popular matinee at Ye Liberty playhouse this afternoon, when any seat in the big theater can be secured for 25 cents. This matinee, with the performance of this evening, will conclude the run at Ye Liberty of "Sweet Kitty Bellairs," the pretty David Belasco costume romance in which Isabelle Fletcher and the Bishop Players have scored such a notable success.

"ZAZA." Miss Fletcher enters into the third week of her limited season tomorrow evening, when, in response to general demand, the bill will be "Zaza," David Belasco's splendid drama of the emotions in which Miss Fletcher is credited with having scored the greatest hit of her entire stage career.

It would probably be hard to name a more widely known or universally better liked play than "Zaza." Played originally by Mrs. Leslie Carter, for whom it was translated from the French of Berton and Simon by David Belasco, it jumped into popular favor at once, and it would seem as though each succeeding year finds it a more popular play and a more valuable piece of theatrical property. For "Zaza" is one of those plays that one can see time and time again and each time with increasing pleasure. For its powerful story, merry atmosphere, the many quaint and well-drawn characters and the strain of the comedy that runs through the five acts make it a play that never fails to attract and interest.

The play will be given a strong cast and a magnificent scenic production at Ye Liberty tomorrow evening. Miss Fletcher has played the role of the French heroine many times before, and many of those who have watched her work closely declare it to be her finest characterization. One thing is certain: of all the roles she has been seen in at Ye Liberty—more than two hundred in all—she has never scored a more complete personal triumph in any of them than she has as Zaza.

As Bernard Duffrene, the Parisian who wins the love of the provincial music hall singer, Mr. E. T. Hall, the new leading man of the company, will be seen to excellent advantage. He too, has portrayed the role before, so it is a character he is thoroughly familiar with. Henry Shumer has a great role as Cascart, the singing partner of Zaza, and Mrs. Mina Gleason as the bibulous Aunt Rosa, will supply much of the comedy. There are more than thirty speaking characters altogether in "Zaza," and each of them will be portrayed next week by an actor or actress of standing. Edward Fielding, James Gleason, George Webster, Andrew Bennison, Walter Whipple, Clarence Elmer, Beth Taylor, Maribel Seymour, Bessie Sankey and Edna Sharpe, as well as all the other favorites, will have well-fitting roles.

"Zaza" will be given for the usual seven nights only, with popular matinees on Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday and will be followed by "An American Widow," one of the recent comedy successes which will be in Oakland.

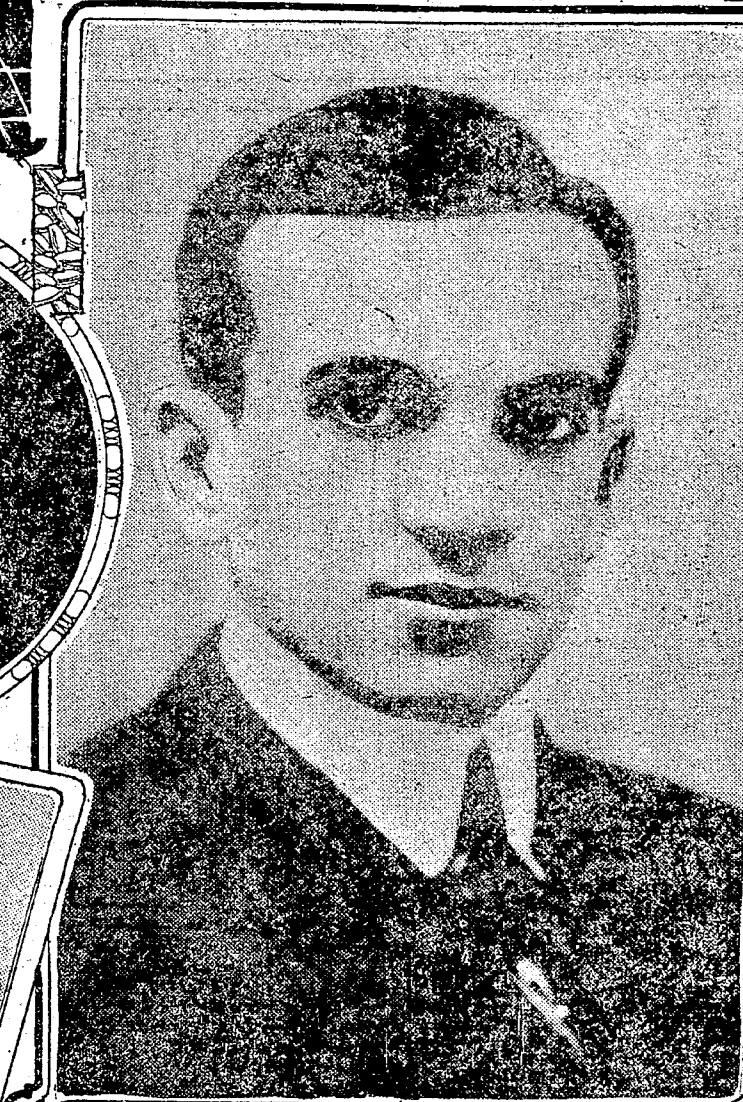

Mr. Stevens will present "The Admirable Crichton" for this week's attraction. This show is a fantasy in four acts, by James M. Barrie, one of the most popular authors of the day, and is with having scored the greatest hit of her entire stage career.

It would probably be hard to name a more widely known or universally better liked play than "Zaza." Played originally by Mrs. Leslie Carter, for whom it was translated from the French of Berton and Simon by David Belasco, it jumped into popular favor at once, and it would seem as though each succeeding year finds it a more popular play and a more valuable piece of theatrical property. AL JOLSON - OAKLAND ORPHEUM

ous and so uniformly good as during the week which begins today. For the next seven days the patrons will find much in the line of entertainment at Oakland's big pleasure park that will supply them with many hours of pleasure. Beginning last evening a new free extravaganza is the offering in the open-air amphitheater called "The Gypsy Merry Widow." Weber's prize band begins his last ten days of concerts at the park.

"The Gypsy Merry Widow" is a clever blend of the "Merry Widow" and the "Bohemian Girl" and by an interesting series of incidents introduces the leading characters from the two great light operas. The scene is laid in a Gypsy camp in a wood not far from Paris, similar to that made famous in the "Bohemian Girl." Devil's Hoot, the leader of the gypsy band; Thaddeus, a proscribed nobleman; Arline, the Bohemian girl, and Prince Danilo and Sonia, the two chief characters from the "Merry Widow," are introduced into the interesting plot. Many of the famous song numbers from both operas are sung, including "I Dream I Dwell in Marble Halls," and an ensemble, "Gypsy Life" from the "Bohemian Girl"; "I'm Going to Maxims" and "Villie" from the "Merry Widow," and among the big dance numbers will be the famous "Merry Widow" waltz, the Mazurka dance and the Russian dance including the thirty girls.

Rubie Leslie, who was a Maxims girl in the original production of the show in New York, will play Sonia; Blanche McHaffey, the talented soloist with Weber's band, will sing Arline; Carlton Chase will be the Prince Danilo; Arthur Macdonald, David's Hoot, will play Thaddeus. The production promises to be the most elaborate, both in scenic and costume, of any of the free extravaganzas yet produced in the Ida Amphitheater.

ALCAZAR

During his starting season at the Alcazar, commencing next Monday night, Richard Bennett will be aided by Mabel Morrison, leading woman, and Belasco & Mayers, regular company.

"Arsene Lupin," the first play to be presented by Bennett, has never been staged in San Francisco, but the English version of the French novel from which it was adapted is familiar to all the patrons of interest-grasping fiction. The play had a long run in New York last year, and all the scenery and properties used in the original offering have been rented and renovated for the Alcazar production. Its presentation is one of the most expensive undertakings ever undertaken by the Alcazar management.

Bennett is best known to San Francisco playgoers by his impersonation of John Shand in Barrie's "What Every Woman Knows," when that delightful comedy was given here by Maude Adams. Miss Morrison is well known in the east as an accomplished actress and a handsome woman. She has been Bennett's principal artistic support ever since he attained stellar distinction.

Responsibility for Great Railroad Wreck Will Be Hard to Place, Say Officials

This is a photograph of the wreck of the Federal Express at Bridgeport, Connecticut. The train was going at a speed of sixty miles an hour and at a crossing jumped the track and plunged over an embankment. Many were killed outright and scores were injured.

BRIDGEPORT, July 22.—It is stated that responsibility for the great railroad wreck at Bridgeport will not be easy to place. Prominent officials of the railroad company place the blame on the engineer of the wrecked train who, they say, was traveling at sixty miles an hour over a cross-over switch.

The wreck is the more interesting because the train is the one President Taft usually takes when going to his summer home.

WOMAN WHO SWAM RIVER LOSES HEART

EDGWATER PARK, N. J.—Cupid has stolen the heart of Miss Isabella Somers Roberts, who holds the distinction of being the only woman accomplishing the feat of swimming the Delaware river at this place. The river is a mile and a half wide at this point.

The announcement of Miss Roberts' engagement to Russell Burley, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Burley of Burlington, has been received with interest by the many friends of both parties.

Miss Roberts is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Roberts, whose country house, Maplehurst, is located on the river bank.

Collecting Is Fad Of Oakland Smart Set, Says Suzette

It is the day of "the collection." In almost every household in the "smart set" there is "a collection." It represents a kind of sport, the diversion of one's leisure hours. The value of the collection ranges all the way from a few dollars to many thousands; and the things "the collection" represents from post-cards to the rarest of treasures in books and pictures. In the collection we might find beetles and butterflies, suits of armor, tapestries, laces, brasses, china, old jewelry, statuary. And this is no new development. In large cities there are the great museums, representing the researches of centuries; and the homes of the rich are often museums on a modified scale. In the days of one's childhood there were the family albums, with which you were expected to amuse yourself in the old-fashioned homes. And, indeed, they did amuse you, though not quite in the fashion planned by your hostess.

There was also "the autograph album," in which you read all sorts of poems—"original" and "selected." You enjoyed most the former; and for reasons which you never confided to your good hostess.

Americans are developing collections on a larger scale, so that European countries are passing laws in self-protection. J. Pierpont Morgan is spending millions in securing the old art treasures of Europe, and he has lately spent what would be an ordinary fortune to some people in one rare old book. And why should he not spend his money that way? It will all be the heritage of the American people in the years to come.

One of the finest "collections" in the world is owned by the University of California, and that our State owns such superb treasures is due to the splendid generosity of Mrs. Hearst. She has been one of the best-known collectors in the world, and she has been aided in her selections by the best European connoisseurs. Few realize how magnificent is the museum owned by the University of California, and how important. Mrs. Hearst was granted her own concession in Egypt, and the explorations there were conducted under the direction of Reisner, the well-known Egyptian explorer. All the papyri, which have been translated, and all the valuable treasures excavated are now the property of the University of California. Treasures from all nations, gathered with the aid of the best scientists in the world, belong to our university; and we will one day realize their importance, when a suitable building shall be erected for them in the foothills at Berkeley.

Sometimes there is just one work of art by which a household may be known. While the William H. Crocker has many pictures, their gallery is best known by "The Man With the Hoe." Poor, tired "Man With the Hoe"; poor peasant out there in the fields of France, looking stolidly and hopelessly out upon a leaden sky! He did not know that he would bring fame and fortune to a poet in far-off California, to Edwin Markham, who represented "the weight of centuries" in a single poem.

William R. Davis bought one of the finest pictures exhibited in the great Chicago fair, and this picture, "The Sheep," is quite enough adornment for any ordinary home.

The best art critic in the State is probably Mr. Frank C. Havens, who can ably discuss any school of painting. Mr. Havens has been to all the large exhibitions, and he can tell you just exactly where he saw any great picture, and who painted it. In an instant he can tell you to what school of painting any picture belongs; and as a judge of marine views, he perhaps has no equal in our country. The half has not been written of that superb collection of pictures out in the Piedmont gallery—far and away the finest collection on this coast. May it be kept together far down the years to come!

MRS. F. C. HAVENS RUG CONNOISSEUR.

Mrs. Frank C. Havens is also most artistic, and her collection of rare rugs has been chosen with much study and with much knowledge of fine artistic effects. She has a most beautiful collection of brasses, of splendid symbolism, and they lend themselves admirably to a home, in which there are the finest specimens of East Indian woods; some of the fine beams in the construction of the house having come all the way from India.

Mrs. Oscar Long's new home is the perfection of art. It is along perfect lines of architecture, exactly suitable to its location. Its fine Chinese hall has been greatly admired; and she has only a few pictures, but these are very rare, indeed.

In the Henry Clay Taft home one finds a few specimens of very rare statuary; and a fine "Whistler" is owned by Mrs. B. S. Noyes.

Fine old woods are to be found in Koa Hall, in Jackson street, and some rare old mahogany, lending itself to a charming home environment, is owned by Mrs. J. P. Neville.

Miss Ethel Moore on a trip to Japan made the first collection of Japanese prints in the State, a collection of fine and rare prints, which grow more valuable as the years go by. We are near the Orient, and it has been possible for us to add to our treasures, and some exceedingly fine carved woods are the property of Captain Minor Goodall and Captain Joseph Matthews.

Beautiful old laces and rare embroidered draperies are owned by Mrs. Isaac Requa, and some of the most beautiful pictures in the State are owned by Mrs. Mark Requa. One of them is a most charming study, a portrait of little Alice Requa, reminding one of the best portraits of the Dutch school of art, and painted by Miss Margaret Herriek.

Mrs. Joseph Stanford, who is a fine art critic, has also some very beautiful paintings. One of them is an exceedingly fine study of trees, a study of the great sycamores for which the Stanford home at Warm Springs is famous. The picture was painted by one of California's finest artists, Mrs. Mary Herriek, Ross.

In the free library is some superbly carved old furniture, brought from Stratford-on-the-Avon, and the gift to Oakland of the Ebell Club.

Mrs. George W. McNear, Jr., brought from Paris a few years ago a fine collection of posters, and she has been adding to her collection ever since, so it is now both picturesque and artistic. Almost every one arrives from Europe with a collection of some kind. One well-known man brought back an assortment of canes, which have been the delight of his friends.

Mrs. Luning spends many hours in her artistic conservatory, with its delightful fountain in the center. All sorts of rare ferns are to be found in her collection, which grows in importance each year.

In the Harold Spencer Black conservatory are many fine orchids; and across the bay one of the collections these rare plants offered the suggestion for the title of George Sterling's new volume of verse, "The House of Orchids." He has a genius for unique titles, as shown in "The Wine of Wizardry." A fine old peach-blow vase is part of the Butters' estate, and rare specimens of Satsuma and beautiful hand-painted China adorn the home of the Frank Woodwards at Berkeley.

Mrs. William Cliff has been abroad many times and her collection of brasses is very valuable. She has an exceedingly attractive collection of old brass candlesticks and her fine old china, in rare willow patterns and in deep blue tones, is very rare indeed. Some of it has been brought from the British Isles and its finest specimens are from the Isle of Man.

A. S. Macdonald has some valuable old books and he has a most wonderful collection of autographs of famous people. In these days, when we know how much handwriting is indicative of character, a collection of autographs is of ever increasing value.

At Arbor Villa one finds several notable pictures. Among them is one representing Clara McChesney's best work. It is a fine study of a Dutch interior, with a peasant woman painted in strong lines as its central figure.

COLLECTION OF CUPS POSSESSION OF BRIDES.

The brides of today are the happy possessors of collections of cups, unique, original and valuable. A friend chooses a cup with care, and it is usually a very beautiful one. Or else the cup is historic and means much to the bride. Among the fine collections are those of Mrs. Thomas Knowles, Mrs. William Thornton White and Mrs. James Kenna.

Happy is the girl of today who has inherited the jewelry of her grandmother. For the old time jewelry represents the ornaments most in style today. In vogue again are the long earrings, the heavy pendants, all the colorful, barbaric stones that add a striking note to one's costume.

And so it goes, in the many homes of the smart set one finds something always of value, something on which genius has set its sign, something which represents the best handiwork of man and carries a message down the ages.

LONG BRANCH SENDS NEWS OF OAKLANDERS.

Notes from "Along Long Island's breeze-swept shores" are of interest to us, since so many of our friends this year are summering on Long Island. From Sag Harbor comes the news that "George Sterling, the poet, proves himself a fisherman, too." For of Sag Harbor, summer sports one reads:

"Yachting has come to the fore this season and this seems only natural when one considers for a moment that Sag Harbor is one of the oldest whaling towns on the Atlantic seaboard. Bluefishing is furnishing a lot of sport for those who like it. Almost anybody could like the kind of fishing they are getting at Sag Harbor. A little patience is rewarded with a boatload. George Sterling, the California poet, landed a string of fifty-six, and one of his friends caught forty-two."

Among Eastern news notes one also reads: "Only for the courtesy of Frank C. Havens of Piedmont, Cal., who has an estate here, the summer colony would not have had a bathing beach during the recent hot spell. Recently a new breakwater was built around the old bathing beach, inclosing it in such a way as to make it practically useless. Mr. Havens generously invited the summer colony to use his private beach."

F. M. SMITH ON CRUISE IN EAST.

The F. M. Smiths were yachting recently in the annual cruise of the

MISS LUCILE WOLLENBERG of New York now visiting in Berkeley, which was formerly her home.

Shelter Island Yacht Club. The objective point of the cruise this year was Fisher's Island, opposite New London, Conn. Every year in July an interesting masquerade takes place at Shelter Island, in which the Sihaqua Indians repulse the attack of the Norsemen under the leadership of a Viking king. One hears that "all were dressed in festive regalia and not a maid in a hotel could find a feather duster."

OAKLAND WOMEN AMONG BEST DRESSED.

Now that they have had all the big races abroad the styles are definitely settled for the midsummer and early autumn hats, and lo, all the capitals in Europe are blossoming out with the all-white hats. They have replaced the vivid scarlet and the emerald green of the hats of the earlier season. And here is the one style sure to sweep our America—the turbans of tulle. Described in poetical language as being so ethereal that they look like a faint mist of incense rising from the head of the wearer.

And the modistes will not be sorry to see the gorgeous reds and blues, greens and purples vanish for a while. In their places are lilacs, lavenders, silver, white and the black and white combinations which have been popular and effective all the year. And the French, who have always been fond of it, are using canary yellow and making very fascinating picture gowns of that bright color tone.

The world grows ever more artistic and we are learning the value of good color tones. Lines are very valuable in their way and the well-gowned woman knows just the sort of lines that are becoming to her. And she achieves real success when she knows perfectly what color tones she may wear. It is not the number of gowns which count in these days, but the lines on which they are built and the color tones they represent.

One of the best gowned women whom one meets in every-day life is Mrs. Frederick Stolp, and all her friends know of her penchant for blue. She is wearing a gray tailored gown this summer and one notes the touch of color added to it in the blue cornflowers that she wears and the blue in the tailored hat.

Mrs. Durkee (Marian Lally) had a wedding gown that was most effective—a tailor gown of white broadcloth with a wide white hat.

Mrs. Gertrude Atherton, the well-known writer, is a most interesting woman and she is always perfectly gowned. At the St. Francis Hotel recently she was a most attractive picture in a black satin gown with yoke and cuffs of rare old lace. Her hair of dark blue velvet was most beautifully trimmed in pale lavender wistaria.

Geraldine Bonnie, another well-known California writer, also dresses exceedingly well. She has been wearing lately a dark blue satin gown with a hat of deep American Beauty colored straw, trimmed in feathers.

Mrs. Harry East Miller looks specially well in American Beauty tones and she was one of the young girls who always set off every costume by an American Beauty rose. Mrs. George Hammer is one of the young matrons who can wear the new Parisian color, "canary yellow," but she looks best in pale lavender. The new shades of lilac are specially becoming to her brunette type.

Mrs. Oscar Long wears white, a great deal and the only color one sees sometimes in her admirably planned costumes is in the faint touches of violets and lavenders in the wide plumes of her hats.

Mrs. Willard Williamson and Mrs. Wickham Havens are true representatives of the brunette types of beauty—the types that artists have always loved to represent on canvas. Indeed, Mrs. Williamson reminds one always of the best Gainsborough effects—with her wide picture hats and the sweeping willow plumes. She dresses with a great deal of dignity and her clothes strike a note of harmony not often seen in the gowns of so young a matron.

Mrs. Havens always has very becoming color tones in her costumes and the hand work on her gowns is always very exquisite.

Mrs. Frank L. Brown wears black.

TO BEAUTIFY THE SKIN.
Every woman who desires the pleasure of a perfect complexion, because any rough, plainly, blochy or "muddy" skin can be made smooth and clear by using this method. The "Vaseline" treatment is about the only way in which scrawny lines and hollows can be banished, and as you can prepare this at little cost, it is worth trying. Here is how to make it: Dissolve one and a half cups of sugar in a pint of water. Add one cup of Vaseline. Stir until thick and smooth. Apply to the skin. It gently, yet thoroughly removes impurities and disposes of fine lines and wrinkles, leaving the skin wonderfully smooth and clear and giving to the complexion that rare, exquisite touch of refined beauty, impossible with powders or cosmetics.

Test B: The hair and scalp should be shampooed more frequently in hot weather because of the increased amount of dust in the atmosphere. A hairless shampoo mixture that cleanses and soothes can be made at trifling cost by dissolving a teaspoonful of egg in a cup of hot water. Pour a little at a time on the scalp, then rub briskly and the itching scalp is relieved. Rinse with cold water and dry. This creates quickly loosens and dissolves every particle of dust and dandruff. Rinse leaves hair and scalp scrupulously clean, the hair dries quickly and takes on a rich gloss and fluffiness, while the scalp is left soft and pliant. Twenty-five cents' worth of egg will make many shampoos.

Allan A.: Disfiguring fuzs quickly vanishes once delol is used. Get an original package from the drugist and with water mix enough into a paste to cover offending hairs. Spread on and after two or three minutes remove it and wash the skin and the hairs will have vanished. Aside from removing hairs, delol is antiseptic, and leaves the skin white and firm. Be careful, however, to get genuine, as substitutes are often dangerous and worthless.

A. L. T.: Dull, stinging hair sometimes results from excessive perspiration and an unhealthy scalp, and the only way in which to restore natural color, brilliancy and fluffiness is to employ a good tonic. I am giving the formula for one, which I used with correct excess oiliness, disfigured dandruff and not only made the hair soft and silky, but induced a luxuriant growth. Mix a half-pint each alcohol and water, then into this put one ounce beta-canthol. Massage freely into the scalp and you will be delighted with its cooling, invigorating effect and the splendid results following.

Corra M.: (1) See answer to A. B. C. (2) You can get almost instant relief from itching, burning feet if you use a foot bath nightly for awhile, to which add one tablespoonful boro lisor solution to every quart of water and into this stir a teaspoonful powdered alum. Not only will you obtain permanent relief, but you will be able to wear snug-fitting shoes without discomfort. This solution is splendid for removing perspiration odors and is highly antiseptic. To prepare, dissolve one ounce boro lisor powdered in one and one-half pints of boiling water; when cool add one-half pint alcohol.

Gossip About Makers of Books and

Their Work

NE halls with much pleasure any publication from the press of the George E. Elder Company of San Francisco, and this is true for many reasons. In the first place because any book issued by the Elder Company is printed because of its literary excellence. And all the publications are printed in an artistic fashion, that they are most pleasing, and one cares to give them a permanent abiding place. And we have also a pride that in our far western coast, so far from the literary centers, we can send out such books to challenge the attention of the reading world. So for these reasons, and many others as well, one welcomes to the library arena, "Comfort Found in Good Old Books," by George Hamilton Fitch, published by Paul Elder & Co.

For years Mr. Fitch has been one of the leading critics on this coast, and his wide reading, and his knowledge of books have given him a leadership on this coast that makes any review of books of much value.

Perhaps no better idea of the scope of the work can be given than to repeat the title of the chapters:

"Comfort Found in Good Old Books: The Greatest Book in the World—The Bible; Shakespeare Stands Next to the Bible; How to Read the Ancient Classics; The Arabian Nights and Other Classics; The Confessions of St. Augustine; Don Quixote; One of the World's Great Books—The Imitation of Christ; The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam; The Divine Comedy, by Dante; How to Get the Best Out of Books; Milton's Paradise Lost and Other Poems; The Progress of the Faint of All Allegories; Robinson Crusoe and Gulliver's Travels; Old Dr. Johnson and His Boswell."

Although these essays are not critical, they contain a large amount of literary information and they are practical and helpful beyond any other volume of this sort within our knowledge. The author's plan has been to give the best work of each writer, with hints in regard to the most useful criticism. Incidentally, Mr. Fitch thoroughly believes that the best education is not essential to the best literary culture and throughout the chapters of this book he has made suggestions for a course of reading that is simple, practical and within reach of any one who has half an hour a day for reading.

The volume is beautifully printed from hand-set type and is illustrated with thirty-two mounted pictures, many from rare prints. These illustrations are reproduced by a new step process that gives them the appearance of fine steel engravings. There is a full bibliography of all the authors, giving the history of the various editions, and other facts, and an index that is descriptive and very helpful. The book is bound in a flexible linen of convenient size to be slipped into the pocket.

Mr. Fitch has on his title page the well known quotation from Goldsmith: "I love everything that's old; old friends, old times, old manners, old books, old wine."

PATHOS IN PREFACE.

There is nothing more pathetic in all literature than Mr. Fitch's introduction to his book. It is a study of the pathos of life, when he lost his beloved son, Harold. In the introduction he says:

"No book has lived beyond the age of its author, and it is a sad fate that the spiritual force which endures through the centuries. The words of the Biblical writers of Thomas a Kempis, Milton, Bunyan, Dante and others who are discussed in this book, are charged with a spiritual potency that has made them of today, as they have made countless generations in the past."

"Even the Sphinx is not so enduring as a great book, written in the heart's blood of a man or woman, who has lived the depths of sorrow, only to rise up, full of courage and faith in human nature."

There is an added introduction that one reads with a great pity for human suffering, and with a great reverence for something that is sacred. And if one also has lost dear ones, the quick tears of sympathy dim one's eyes, the choking sob is in one's throat, for this agony of parting, which is human heritage.

And so, unkind, unkind, softened, one turns with the author to the books which have brought him comfort, that one also may be soothed, sustained, strengthened.

"Most of the things that I had valued for the sake of my son now had little or no worth for me. But to take up again the old round of work, without the vivid joyous presence of a companion, dearer than life itself, one must have some great compensations; and the chief of these compensations lay in the few feet of books in my library case—in those old families of ages that can still beguile me, though I am as well in the dust with grief and my heart is as sore as an open wound touched by a careless hand."

Could anything in all literature be more helpful than the conclusion of Mr. Fitch's introduction? Then, the reader courage in it, much spiritual bravery.

"But the vital thing is that you have your own families—books that are real and genuine, each one brimful of the inspiration of a great soul. So may you come into the true kingdom of culture, whose gates never swing open to the pedant or the bigot. So may you be armed against the worst blows that fate can deal you in this world. When our house is in mourning we turn to the Bible first—that fount of wisdom and comfort which never fails him who comes to it with clean hands and a contrite heart. It is the medicine of life. And after it comes the great books written by those who have walked through the Valley of the Shadow, yet have come out sweet and wholesome, with wisdom and counsel for the afflicted. One book through which beats the heart of a man who suffered and yet grew strong under the lash of fate, is worth more than a thousand books that teach no real lesson of life."

"This book is written in the first bitterness of a crushing sorrow; but it is also written in the spirit of hope and confidence. I hope to make life easier for the poor boys in memory of the one dearest who has gone before me into that 'undiscovered country' where I hope some day to meet him, with the old bright smile on his face and the old firm grip of the hand that always made me feel at ease and steady in my loyalty. And what a lesson there is for men in this last paragraph, for men need this lesson more than women:

"Among men of New England strain like myself it is easy to labor long hours, to endure nervous strain, to sacrifice comfort and ease for the sake of their dear ones; but men of Puritan strain, with natures as hard as the flinty granite of their hillsides, cannot bear their loved ones how dear they are to them, until Death lays his grim hand upon the shoulder of the beloved one, and closes his ears forever to the words of passionate love that now come pouring in a flood from their hearts."

And so we come to the "old books," beginning with the "greatest book in the world, the Bible," the "real study of which can never be finished, though you may read it all in a day. The study of the Bible is written with much feeling, with reverence, and with a simple dignity that carries the author's message to one's heart."

Next to the Bible comes Shakespeare, and his plays are so much more than small space. Whole volumes, in one exhaustive study have been written, without catching a certain elusive charm, or a sure depth of analysis, that one finds in Mr. Fitch's essay.

"The masterpieces without a superior in any literature are: Hamlet, Othello, King Lear, Julius Caesar, Macbeth and Antony and Cleopatra. Each typifies some overwhelming passion, but Hamlet gives them the appearance of a human mind, swayed by every wind of impulse, noble in defeat, and pathetic in the final ruin of hope and love, largely due to lack of courage and decision of character. Take it all in all, this book is the finest creative work of any modern author. This play is packed with bitter experience of life, cast in verse that is immortal in its beauty and melody."

One enjoys Mr. Fitch's unique way of looking at the "Arabian Nights," and the German Legends. Bound up with memories of one's own youth, with the spring tide of one's life, are the Oriental Fairy Tales, which are a study of the pathos of life, when he lost his beloved son, Harold. One understands the Rubaiyat better for Mr. Fitch's analysis of it, and one is very glad that in his best books are included "The Imitation of Christ," and "The Confessions of St. Augustine."

"Many familiar things look up at us from these pages. There are the old pictures from Pilgrim's Progress, and we are about our old friend Dr. Johnson and his Boswell, and the "Pilgrim's Progress" is followed by "Robinson Crusoe," Mr. Fitch says of the latter:

"It is the greatest book of adventure for boys that has ever been written, and the mature reader will find it full of charm, for in all English literature there is nothing finer than the descriptions of Robinson Crusoe's solitary life, his delight in his pets, and his care and training of Friday."

And we travel once more in Lilliput, and once again we smile in Gulliver's experiences with the Brobdingnagians, and our new book, with its memories of old times, old friends, and old joys—the delight that only a much-loved book can bring to us.

The prints throughout the books are charming. They are old copies, in beautiful, faded, old tones, each one is in itself a treasure, and they are a series which adds to the rare value of a very delightful book."

Mr. Fitch makes only one mistake in his series of essays. He says they were written primarily for those who have not had a college education. But they are of universal interest, for they treat of life's greatest problems and the courage to deal with them, and that must always be of universal interest to mankind."

BOOKS OF TODAY.

It is difficult to turn old books—one's old time favorites—to the newer books of today to the lighter reading that the French people say is simply "Four passer les temps."

But do we ever read now-a-days just "to pass away the time?" "To be amused" is perhaps a better way to express it, and in the line of light reading we find two new books:

"The Princess of New York," and "Red Rose Inn."

Of "Red Rose Inn," which is published by the J. B. Lippincott Company, one reads:

In a sprightly style Edith Tunits Sale writes the letters from a young woman to her older sister that form the little story and Rose Inn. She has hidden herself in a lovely, out of the way corner of New York's village in order that she may take a thorough course with herself and decide some perplexing problem. And then she comes a well-dressed Prince Charming in a motor car, finds her good to look at, and an entertaining companion upon motor and riding trips. So she puts her problems to one side and says, "Why think when I can enjoy myself?"

All goes merrily for a time, until she discovers that while Prince Charming's millions are most adorable and desirable, Prince Charming himself is rather a drawback. And then she finds that the problems insist upon being thought about after all. When she tries she succeeds only in making herself miserable without solving them. But at last the knot is untied. In the year the author has been from her woes as smiling and happy as the red roses of the little inn she has come to love so much. It is a graceful, light little story, and is not without some of the charm of the author's previous work. The letter writer reveals her pleasure-loving, undeveloped, but sincere and warm-hearted nature.

Mrs. Sale is the author of "Manors of Virginia in Colonial Times."

"PRINCESS OF NEW YORK."

"The Princess of New York," (Brentano's) is written by an Englishman, Cosmo Hamilton. The name of the princess is Maudie Stanton, and she is the daughter of a multi-millionaire. One might explain to the writer that there are no more "Maudies" in America, our names have taken on dignity as our nation has grown older. Maudie goes to Europe for the first time, and the story opens on the deck of the Lusitania. She goes to Europe with Mrs. Dempster Raffan, and on the first day she meets two Englishmen, one a young man, and the other, "the villain of the piece." The author's description formulates very well the story of the latter part of the book.

"Well, this older man, Allen Merestham, of Sir George and Lady Merestham, all of them notorious in half a dozen capitals for their games, proposes to marry the unsophisticated Maudie, to make a grand haul, and he goes about it skillfully, for he had been used to politics since his life and knew the tricks of the trade. Strange also that Mrs. Raffan, though she has been so many times in London, doesn't know anybody there, and is greatly pleased to meet the Meresthams and let them take charge of Maudie's social affairs, which they do with a sort of sham. Dukes and Earls and things on her, and she never knows the difference—lived all her life in New York, too, and moved in the multi-millionaire set."

But it cannot go on forever, and one day the who knows Merestham scheme goes kersplash and Maudie is up almost in jail as a pal of the gang. But Geoffrey Kingsward is there to rescue her, and though he doesn't do it, he makes himself solid with Maudie and eventually wins out.

"Now this sounds as though Cosmo Hamilton had written a story not worth reading, but don't make such a guess as that you are reading, for it is a mighty interesting and readable book with a lot in it to think about but the story. It is a very absorbing tale, with no so-called literary style, and Mr. Hamilton makes the live story all the time, and there is no getting away from it so long as there is another unread page."

QUAINT DEDICATION.

The old art of intimate and "unhallowed" dedication to books seems to be reviving. One of the latest dedications of this book-series is that of "Dawn O'Hara," by Edna Ferber, which is

TO MY DEAR MOTHER Who Frequently Interrupts
My Reading.

MY SISTER FANNIE
Who Says "Sh-sh-sh!" Outside My Door.

"THE WRITER LADY."

The way in which women write literature is well told in "Dawn O'Hara," Edna Ferber's new book:

It's hard trying to develop into a real writer lady in the bosom of one's family, especially when the family refuses to take one seriously and keeps on saying, "A half-hour elapses before I get back on the track. Then appears the hero—a tall blond youth, fair to behold. I make him two yards high, and endow him with a pair of clothing-advertising shoulders."

Scarcely am I settled in my cubby-hole, typewriter before me, the working plan of a story buzzing about in my brain, when I hear my name called in a muffled tone, and though the speaker is my mother, I pay no attention. I have just given my heroine a pair of calm gray eyes, shaded with black lashes and hair to match. A voice floats down from the upstairs rooms.

"Dawn! Oh, Dawn! Just run and rescue the cucumbers out of the top of the ice-box, will you? The iceman's coming."

parting jab at my heroine's hair and eyes, and I'm off to save the cucumbers.

Back at my typewriter once more. Shall I make my heroine petite or grande? I decide that staidness and Gibbonese height should accompany the calm gray eyes. Sis opens the door a little and peers in.

"Dawn, dear, I'm going to the dress-maker's. Freda's upstairs cleaning the bathroom, so take a little squirt at the roast now and then, will you?"

"Mumph, I reply.

Sis shuts the door, but opens it again almost immediately.

"Don't let the infants bother you. But if Freda's upstairs and Sis comes to you for something to eat, don't let them have any cookies before dinner. If they're really hungry they'll eat bread and butter."

I promise, dreamily, my last typewritten sentence still running through my head. The gray seems to have gone into the heroine's calm gray eyes. What heroine could remain calm-eyed when her creator's mind is filled with roast beef? A half-hour elapses before I get back on the track. Then appears the hero—a tall blond youth, fair to behold. I make him two yards high, and endow him with a pair of clothing-advertising shoulders.

There assails my nostrils a fearful smell of scorching. The roast! I fling open the oven door. The roast is marvellously good, and gravely. It takes fifteen minutes of the most desperate first-aid-to-the-injured measures before the roast is revived.

Back to the writing. It has lost its charm. The gray-eyed heroine is a stick; she moves like an Indian lady outside a cigar shop. The hero is a great deal, with the very latest effect in hats.

Some of Mrs. Requa's gowns are of black chiffon, or of black satin, and they are always most beautifully trimmed in lace. Mrs. Requa looks especially well in lavender and she has wonderful amethysts which follow the color tones of her gowns.

Many of Mrs. F. M. Smith's gowns strike deep color tones and last year some of the most notable were planned along color effects of deep wine red tones.

Mrs. Livermore to CHAPERONE PARTY.

Mrs. Horatio Livermore is planning to chaperone a camping party, which bids fair to spend idle August days. The camp is to be situated in the heart of Mono county, and the young people are to reach it on horseback. In fact, the trails over the Mono wilds can only be reached on horseback, and one hears that the scenery along the way is superb. Among the young people in the party will be the Misses Elizabeth Livermore, Newell Drown and Gertrude Ballard. They are to be gone a month.

SUZETTE.

"IDLE RICH" HAVE INDEED PASSED.

The time was when no self-respecting young man wished to be referred to as simply "a society man." He would have regarded it in America as a term of reproach. But with the passing of the "merely idle rich" we have changed all that. For it is our society people that we have come to depend on for some of our best activities in lines of advance. New York's best known society man is Frederick Townsend Martin, who is well known not only in New York, but in the older capitals of Europe. He is the author of an exceedingly well written book, "The Passing of the Idle Rich," a book that has been widely discussed in the smart sets of New York and London.

Frederick Townsend Martin was the recipient of many honors in London, where he went to attend the coronation ceremonies. Among other courtesies shown him, Mr. Martin was invited to join the Reunion Club, an exclusive dining organization, the membership of which is limited to 150. The Duke of Teck is president and many of the members are poets.

Mrs. William Henshaw is still in Santa Barbara and Miss Florence Henshaw has as her guest Miss Helen Jones, who is a niece of Mrs. H. M. A. Miller. Miss Ernestine McNear is also spending some time as the guest of Mrs. Henshaw at Santa Barbara.

From that historic city comes the news that it is to have a "Kirmess," or "dance of all nations," along the most approved lines. Southern California seems to be the home of the picturesque pageant. We have our many celebrations, all of them planned along colorful lines. So Santa Barbara will no doubt develop a wonderful "Kirmess," which will have for its setting the Hotel Potter. Among the dancers in the Italian picture will be Miss Ernestine McNear.

CITY GIRLS AS Farmettes in New West Eden

STARTING OUT FOR A DAY'S WORK.

GATHERING

AN you imagine a farm-hand looking dainty? Can you picture dainty blue overalls? Did you ever see a farm-hand in French heels with golden hair hanging down his back to a trim little waist? No? Then take a trip to Hempstead, Long Island, and see for yourself.

Yes, indeed, the suffragettes have had it all their own way long enough and now as the really newest fad, occupation, call it what you will, of fair women we have the farmettes. On the magnificent country place of Mrs. Oliver H. Belmont, known as Brookholt, and situated at Hempstead, L. I., the owner has established a 200-acre farm and modern, thoroughly up to date agriculture school solely for girls.

The venture is a pioneer one, for, although there are numerous agricultural schools throughout the country, they are connected mainly with colleges and other institutions, and they are not exclusively for women. Mrs. Belmont's school is probably the only one of its kind in the United States.

It is her intention to give the girls who show aptitude and interest every opportunity, with the hope that, on leaving, they will be able to take positions as superintendents of dairy or model farms, or go still farther into the field of landscape gardening. And it is this brand of ambition and enthusiasm which makes the girls at Brookholt oblivious to aching muscles and clay-coated shoes, and brings a grin to their faces when you speak about the ten-hour day with an interrogation point in your eyes.

Every night the girls make their report of the day's work in a diary which they keep. This includes what they have done throughout the day, the methods followed in each case, the condition of the soil they found, and, in short, every detail of plowing, planting, sowing or reaping.

Then, when they leave the school and start out for themselves, these diaries will have been converted into the most valuable text-books, for they will be chronicles not only of what is right to do, theoretically, in different instances, but they will also stand a record of the actual experience encountered in developing the theories in each case.

There is no reason why women should not make clever and astute farmers, providing they know their subject thoroughly and are interested in it. Women who are at the head of beautiful country homes in England take far more interest in their grounds and houses than the women in this country. Here, we leave the work quite to outsiders, whom we pay a big price to do the work, and not bother us until it is done. Whereas the wives of country gentlemen abroad demonstrate the keenest personal interest in the development of everything that goes on about their estates.

the farm, while Mrs. Laura D. Williams, a scientific farmer who comes from Philadelphia, has the entire supervision of the outside work. Mrs. Williams' working costume is a thin print blouse and bloomers so full as to have the effect of a short skirt. A big "farmers" straw hat to protect her from the summer sun, is also worn. Her pupils all dress in a similar costume and for all the world they look like a comic opera chorus of farm hands. Indeed, it is difficult to get away from the impression which they give that they have been taken off some stage on Broadway, and brought into the country expressly for an out of door play.

Yet, as a matter of fact, they have but little time for any sort of play, having to work very hard. From very early in the morning until late in the evening the farmettes are in the fields and garden. And as the majority of them, previous to coming to the farm school, have been accustomed to spending hours at a time over typewriters and in the factories, they find the work in the soil very fatiguing, but it is wholesome fatigue, and they have all gained from three to five pounds a week since they arrived.

From the time they reach Brookholt the girls are given a two months' probation. If they prove sufficiently able, strong, and interested to go on with the work they proceed, at sixteen dollars a month.

Their schedule for the day begins at 5 a. m., when Mrs. Levy arises and sets the machinery of the house in motion. The rising gong is sounded at 6 a. m. and breakfast is served at 6:30.

At 7 o'clock they start out in the fields and do not return until 12 o'clock, the dinner hour. At 1 o'clock they again start out, and do not come back until 6. A hearty supper is then served, and the evening is spent in talking over the day's work and the writing of the diaries.

The final ceremony of the day's actual work is the milking of the cows. Covered from head to foot with white gowns, the girls take turns at playing milkmaid each night.

Sumner, General Grant and the other will not even be selected for the period as of acquaintances of yesterday.

THE FARM HOUSE
MRS. BELMONT'S HOME

After the diaries are written they turn in at an early hour.

"How did you happen to come here?" one of the girls was asked.

"I read about it in the papers," she replied. "As I want to be a landscape gardener, I decided this would be a good beginning, and wrote Mrs. Belmont. I received application blanks, and later was sent for to be interviewed."

PHYSICALLY FIT.

"Of course, you know, you have to be physically fit before you can even qualify. Then they talk to you, ask you all sorts of questions, and, in other words, generally size you up. If you look like a likely candidate, and there is room for you, you are notified to come out."

One of the brightest girls in the school is deaf and dumb, though she holds a college certificate.

"Yes, I think the school will succeed," remarked Mrs. Williams, the instructor, during the course of an interview on this subject. "She sees that the idea is not only to teach farming, as they do in the colleges, but to carry along the work right with it."

The course of training could be finished in less than a year, though there is to be no fixed rule as to that. It will depend entirely on the aptitude of the student. But it would hardly be worth while for them to learn the preparation of the crops for the ground and then to leave before they are taken out of the ground. In all it takes about twelve months to get a complete conception of everything that is to be done.

"We expect to have this season sixteen acres of field corn and four acres of sweet corn and nine acres of potatoes, as well as spinach, beans, squash, carrots, radishes, asparagus, tomatoes, and every vegetable you can think of."

"Later, when the time comes, we are to run a motor truck in to New York to market."

The farm house where the workers live is most attractive. A long driveway lined by orderly rows of maple trees leads directly from the street to the dwelling.

Gabled windows peer out from under a sloping roof, to the very shingles of which vines have clambered along the corners of the house. The house itself with a veranda running its entire length faces a big gravelled courtyard, across the way from which is a long line of neatly kept stables.

On the south end a road leads out to the fields and pastures, while the north end of the courtyard looks out toward the garden. On the other side of the house, which is approached by the driveway, with its lines of maple trees lie sentries on duty, is the lawn and a prim, gravelled walk which takes one to a long, low building with old-fashioned wind mill.

A big room on the main floor of the farm house is devoted entirely to the purpose of recreation. Adjoining it is a cloak room, bath and shower, where the farmettes, returning from a day's work in the fields, doff their sweaters, overalls and sunbonnets, have a cool plunge and don their dainty summer dresses for dinner.

INSANE WOMAN IS SPOOK

NEW YORK.—Instead of the stable belonging to Benjamin Robinson at No. 93 Humboldt street, Williamsburg, being haunted, as neighbors for nearly four weeks had believed because of peculiar noises at night, it was discovered that an insane woman had been in the hayloft during that time and it was from her weird noises came.

The woman, Vera Trevor, an Austrian, twenty-one years old, who has neither home nor friends, slipped into the stable nearly a month ago after she lost her place as domestic. She had been acting queerly and this probably had much to do with getting her out of employment.

The first peculiar midnight noises coming to the ears of neighbors sounded like groans and hysterical sobs. When they continued night after night and appeared to emanate from the stable, Robinson, who is a butter and egg dealer, made an investigation and seemingly was nothing amiss in the stable.

The noises, however, went on and neighbors began to suspect that spooks were making the unusual disturbances. The moans and cries were more pronounced on Monday night than before and Robinson called upon a more thorough investigation.

With a pitchfork he pushed aside the loose hay and presently there was exposed a pair of feet that were found to belong to a woman. She jumped at Robinson when he vanked her from her hiding place and attacked him with a pitchfork. While the two were in a scuffle several men went to Robinson's aid and the woman was overpowered. She was taken to the police station and during the four weeks she made the loft her home she had subsisted on corn, bran, oats and other animal fodder.

The woman was taken to the Manhattan avenue police court, where Magistrate Nash was satisfied she was mentally unbalanced and sent her to the Kings county hospital.

Former Senator Henderson Tells How He Drew Thirteenth Amendment

WASHINGTON, D. C.—John Brooks Henderson was elected to the United States Senate in 1862. He framed the thirteenth amendment to the constitution, which abolished slavery in the United States for all time. Men of his generation, said this amendment, passed by Congress at a psychological moment in the history of the nation, a thing to preserve the union. Himself a slave owner, he gave up his own for the sake of the country. His constituents, slave-owners, burned him in effigy and demanded his resignation. He completed his term in the Senate and retired to private life with the thanks of the unionists and the curses of his own people. He gave up his seat in the Senate and, honored and respected, he spent the rest of his life in the study of his great country. He was a strong mentally and physically, a man of sixty-five. The contemporary and adviser of Lincoln, he has watched the passing events with the keen eye of the philosopher—far removed from the confines of the partisan political arena—and sees in the present and future little cause for national worry.

Looking back over half a century, the former Senator told the World correspondent the story of the thirteenth amendment to the constitution—virtually the last amendment made to the document during 110 years—as the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments were little more than supplementary articles.

HOW SLAVERY WAS ABOLISHED.

To win. The extreme abolitionists demanded that the President free the slaves unconditionally, while the border state people were as insistent that they be not deprived of their property. Had Lincoln been defeated it would have been a virtual acknowledgment of the failure of the war and the union would have been disrupted. In this crisis, Senator Henderson, a representative of the border state, burned all political bridges between him and offered the resolution in the Senate.

Passing over the intervening half a century he spoke of the progress of the generations that have passed, and offered his opinions of the proposed amendments to the constitution, which are being fostered on all sides today.

Mr. Henderson was sitting in an arm chair in the study of his great brownstone home, in Sixteenth street, and as he told the story of the passage of the amendment there was little in his manner or appearance to suggest that he had been in the throes of the great struggle of half a century ago. He spoke of "Mr." Lincoln, "Mr." Seward, "Mr." Chase, "Mr."

Sumner, General Grant and the other will not even be selected for the period as of acquaintances of yesterday.

GOING TO LINCOLN'S AID.

Continuing, Senator Henderson said: "President Lincoln was hard pressed for a course to be followed on the slavery question. Sumner, Wade, Chandler and the other extreme abolitionists of the North demanded that he state his position firmly on the great question. Mr. Lincoln was between fires. If he attempted to abolish slavery the effect on the border States, which had been held to the Union causes only with the greatest care and tact, would be dangerous if not fatal. If they were deprived of their slaves they might secede, and the last hope of holding the Union together would vanish. If he dallied longer on stating his position his standing with the men of the North would be weakened. The armies were being defeated on all sides and the Northerners were wearying of the war."

"When the amendment was drafted General Grant had not commenced his great campaign against Richmond; he had not even been selected for the work. General Sherman had not reached Atlanta nor organized his march to the sea. No man could prophesy the end of the war. But whatever might result the majority of the Union men hoped to realize one great purpose and that was the end of slavery.

"Among these men there was a great want of confidence, more or less even in Mr. Lincoln himself. He had already said he would do whatever would make for the preservation of the Union. If the Union could be saved by the abolition of slavery, he would destroy slavery. But if the Union could only be preserved with slavery, he would accept the hard condition and preserve the Union."

PRESIDENT SAYS "GO AHEAD!"

"This strained condition existed just previous to the convention which was to nominate a President. A sign of weakness on the part of Mr. Lincoln meant his defeat and this meant a disruption of the Union. Activity against the slave owners of the border States on the part of Mr. Lincoln meant the loss of the States and in the final analysis the disruption of the Union."

of the strong abolition men would not be taken favorably by the border state men; there was but one course left and that was for a border man to take the initiative—and the consequences. I told him I would make the sacrifice for the Union. He asked me if I knew what it would mean in my state. I told him I realized thoroughly—that I might die politically, but if my political death would add to the prospects of preserving the Union I would gladly make the sacrifice. He thanked me and said: 'God grant that it will be passed, but I have grave fears.'

"I entered the Senate that January morning with the draft of the resolution and no man living with the exception of Mr. Lincoln knew of my purpose. It was received with surprise by my colleagues and with disgust by my constituents."

THE GIRL-WIFE WILL SEEK ANNULMENT.

FRESNO, July 1.—The mother and sister of Mrs. Pearl Wheeler, girl-wife of I. D. Wheeler, recently paroled in the Superior Court on a perjury charge, have made public their intention to annul the marriage of the young couple. Attorney E. A. Williams was consulted by parties interested in the case. William Harvey, Sr., secretary of the local Humane Society, was also asked to interest himself in the matter.

slaves were to be lost to them by this resolution, burned me in effigy—they swore at the mention of my name, and demanded my resignation. They looked upon me as a traitor, but felt that I had done my duty—that my opportunity had come and that I had followed the proper course. A great weight was raised from the shoulders of Mr. Lincoln. Before long the sound of marching was heard in the North and Sherman began their glorious campaigns. Another short year and the Union was re-united.

"There were many men in public life in the days of the war whose conduct was not at all praiseworthy. One of them was Chase, Mr. Lincoln's Secretary of State. He made little attempt to aid the administration, but spent

Judge Graham of this city. It was alleged that Wheeler had cruelly beaten his young wife while living in a tent at Selma. Before the papers could be served Wheeler took his bride to Lodi, where he was arrested as a burglar suspect. He was acquitted on this charge and moved to Oakland. While employed as a photographer agent there he was arrested on the perjury charge.

Constable Drenth went to Oakland and brought Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler back. He was lodged in jail. She was taken to the Grand Central Hotel, where she caused a scare by making the employees believe she had taken poison with suicidal intent.

most of his time in attempting to undermine his chief to satisfy his own personal ambition to gain the presidency. I advised Mr. Lincoln not to temporize with him. I suggested that he dismiss him from the cabinet.

"Although Mr. Chase and I were personal friends I felt that the house divided against itself must fall."

RECOMMENDED GRANT.

Then Senator Henderson paused and continued: "When Grant took charge of the armies the situation took on an altogether changed aspect. I had watched his career and knew him to be a great soldier. I suggested that he be put in command. He was the man of the hour, and Mr. Lincoln chose wisely when he put him in command of the armies."

DOG-CATCHER WHO KILLED 200,000 DOGS IS DEAD

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Samuel Elstein, the Washington poundmaster, who caught and killed nearly 200,000 dogs during the last thirty-eight years, is dead.

When he was appointed official dog-catcher of the national capital in 1871 he impounded almost as many stray horses, goats, geese and cows as dogs. He and his four assistants were set upon by the owners of the live stock which had been allowed to stray from backyard pastures and frolic about the city parks.

Girl-Wife Will Seek Annulment

This report was investigated and found to be untrue. The girl is still in the city, but is staying with friends who are members of the Salvation Army, of which the girl was a member prior to her marriage. The fact that Mrs. Wheeler went to the home of friends led to

The first woman to ride in an aeroplane in America was Mrs. Ralph H. Van de Man, wife of a captain in the army war college. Wilbur Wright was host, and the notable achievement was performed at Cote Park, Maryland, in October of last year. The flying machine has not supplanted votes for women in the minds of Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont and Miss Inez Milholland, but for a time last year the cause must have suffered. Everywhere found the two sleepless advocates.

Miss E. S. Todd is a New York woman who has been keenly interested in the practical side of aviation from the start, three years ago. She was formerly private secretary for Mrs. Russell Sage, and that generous-hearted woman has undertaken to supply Miss Todd with the financial assistance necessary to demonstrate whether Miss Todd's ideas as to airplane construction are to meet with success. She is building a biplane at Garden City. Mrs. J. Frank Raiche, the wife of a biplane builder, also at Garden City, has tried to operate

Many other American women are interested in aviation. Foremost among them is Miss Margaret Anthony, Eleanora Sears, of Boston, who has made a number of flights with Claude Graham White and who recently ordered an airship of her own; Miss Hurd, of New York; Mrs. August Belmont; Mrs. Blanche Schoemaker; Wagstaff; Mrs. George Gould; Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel; Miss Angelica Brown; Mrs. E. M. C. Smith; Mrs. J. P. Morgan; Emily Ladenburg and Mrs. H. Van Rensselaer are all airship enthusiasts.

Mrs. Gavin is probably England's most noted woman aviator. She also holds the distinction of having been the first English woman to make a flight. She once remained in the air forty-five minutes. Preparations for her flights are complete. She has won much distinction in the world of sport, and she comes of sporting stock.

Until very recently the work of education carried on among the poor whites of the mountain country and in the piney districts of such states as North Carolina and Georgia, showed greater zeal and self-sacrifice on the part of the teachers than permanent improvement of the pupils. Miss Martha Berry, a white woman, Miss Martha Berry, to meet the situation with a determination to conquer it. It all began with a Sunday school class in a little hut in the Georgia Mountains. She started it with five small boys in an oak grove near Fossum Trot road. Each boy had two hours of work each day, digging stumps and chopping wood. She, afterward taught them to wash dishes, clean linen and care for their rooms. Miss Berry herself did the cooking.

NEGRO DIES AT 115.

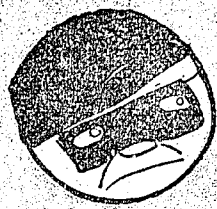

FULTON, Mo., July 24. Ned Ferguson, a negro, 115 years o. l., the last of the antebellum Virginia darlings in Callaway county, is dead at his home in Tebbetts.

Ferguson had drawn a pension for 21 years, having served with the Federal forces in the Civil War.

He was known by almost every person within twenty miles of Tebbetts. Men of note here now pass the prime of life, remember him as a old man when they were boys, and youth for his age.

A close study of this globe will reveal the fact that there isn't a spot on it where I haven't performed some wonderful feat of daring or valor. Great men have tried to undertake impossible things and I have carried them through to completion for them. And there are many lands and islands where I have saved princesses from villainous rogues which do not appear upon the face of this globe. I was the original inventor of everything ever invented—though others have received credit for it—and I was the first man to discover anything worthy of discovery. It's a big world, but I've been all over it fourteen or fifteen thousand times.

OLD OPIE DILLDOCK'S STORIES

(Copyright: 1911: by The Tribune Company, Chicago, Ill.)

It was your Uncle Opie, let me remind you, who first discovered gold in the Klondike. Who went out in the jungle of Africa and captured a mad lion by simply holding on to his tail until he was subdued and tame? Your Uncle Opie. It was an ordinary feat for me to haunt the dark retreats of desperate brigands in the forests of Gingabingoo—some forty thousand miles from here—and rescue the daughters of proud but incompetent potentates and return them to safety; and, on the following day to tame a herd of wild buffalo in the far west of these United States until they ate from my hand. How did I do this, you ask. Simply by constructing the first airship ever thought of and sailing majestically from those thief-infested mountains to the peaceful valleys and plains of our own country. This I did, of course, under the cover of darkness.

I have fished in the Gulf of Mexico on Friday morning, and hunted deer in the mountains of Wyoming on Friday night. I have in the compass of a single day beat the world's golf champion in lower California and thwarted a revolutionary band in the fastnesses of China. It was your Uncle Opie who first nailed the flag to the North Pole, regardless of what other discoverers and explorers have maintained. I have caught whales with my naked hands and killed sea serpents with but a single look of my magnetic eye. I have erected whole cities in a few hours and cut adrift islands which threatened to develop large volcanoes and sunk them in the depths of the deepest seas. I have been dining in cities of far remote lands when explosions have occurred, hurling me in the air and landing me in Chicago, and the same day have gone back and arrested the dynamiters. One day, single handed, I repaired the axis of the globe.

Grand Total $3,274,650.05

Running the city of Oakland during the fiscal year 1911-12 under the new charter, according to estimates of departmental heads as to the needs of their offices, will cost approximately $3,300,000. This is the total of the demands of the various departments, but Commissioner of Finance and Revenue John Forrester has cut out a big pruning knife with which he promises to reduce the budget by considerably over $1,000,000.

Albert H. Elliot, former councilman and member of the board of freholders which framed the new city charter, declared when advocating the passage of the charter he had helped to frame that the government could be run at less expense under the new instrument than the old. City Auditor George Gross, who will assist in the pruning of departmental estimates, having had considerable experience in that line, is anxious to have Elliot demonstrate the logical process by which he succeeded in arriving at this remarkable conclusion.

SOME CHARTER INCREASES.

The new city charter provides an increase in the police department salaries which will place a few thousand dollars, and places the fire department on a full pay basis. It provides for four commissioners at a salary of $3600 a year each, a mayor at $4200, for an entertainment fund and a cash basis fund. But there is not a department in the city government in which the new charter reduces the expense. The new council has re-enacted ordinances and resolutions appointing men who have been serving the city, but few actually new positions have been created excepting those automatically created by the new charter. Nevertheless, the cost of running the city will be in excess of that of last year.

Among the problems the city will have to meet will be the matter of increased lighting for the streets. The various outlying districts have been rapidly building up, and more street lights are being called for. These will have to be provided and the bill will mount heavenward to meet this item of expense.

FINANCES A GRAVE PROBLEM.

The city administration faces a grave problem in its finances for the present year. Where the assessment rolls for the fiscal year 1910-11 showed $126,110,000 to the credit of the city, the removal by constitutional amendment No. 1 of the corporation taxed from the city to the state has reduced this for the present year to $116,250,000 in assessable property from which a revenue is to be derived by direct taxation. About $10,000 will be returned to the city by the state for bond interest and

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—A little cub bear which broke away from Lunstedt's saloon, Ellis and Powell streets, at 10:30 tonight, created a panic in a fashionable tailoring establishment, but an army officer, caused a near riot in a nickelodeon, but was finally captured after great difficulty by policemen.

The cub is the property of A. Simpkins of Mendocino county, who purchased it in this city. Escaping from the saloon, the bear ran into the store of Charles S. Rosner. There were a dozen women making purchases at the time, and many of these scrambled out of harm's way, some jumping on chairs and dodging behind counters. Mrs. Jennie Alfors fainted and Lieutenant McHenry of the First Artillery who went to her rescue, was bitten on the arms and hands.

Leaving this place, the bear ran into the Edison moving picture show, pursued by Policemen Quinlan, Burt and Kalumbach, and was finally caught.

After Many Years' Search Finds Mother

DENVER, Col., July 22.—Edgar Marquis, or Frisbie, of Oakland, who has been separated from his mother since he was a few days old, was reunited with her in North Denver, today. Mrs. Edward Marshall is the mother, who was deserted by John H. Frisbie a year after their marriage. Twin boys, who were born as the result of the union, were taken from her, left on a doorstep of the residence of United States Senator Hill and sent to the county hospital. Subsequently they were adopted by Robert Marquis, a wealthy merchant who removed to Oakland. The lads did not know that Marquis was not their parent until his death a few years ago, after which Edgar began the search for his mother.

Willing to Jump In Bay When Youth Dares

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—Taking a dare, carelessly thrown at him by some young men of his acquaintance, J. M. Lundy of 621 Ellis street, a stenographer for the Pacific-Portland Cement company, attempted to jump from an Oakland ferryboat tonight, but was restrained and taken to the Harbor hospital. Lundy has not been well for some days, and when a youth told him he was not brave enough to jump into the bay, he went on the steamer Piedmont and tried to throw himself into the water. S. P. Policeman Wall took him in charge and on the return trip of the boat he was taken to the hospital and held for observation.

TEXAS GOES DRY BY A MAJORITY OF 50,000

Prohibitionists Win Great Victory at Polls
In the Lone Star State as Result of Hotly Contested Election

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, July 23.—Indications at this time, 2 a. m., indicate that prohibition has carried Texas by approximately 50,000 majority.

DALLAS, Tex., July 22.—On early reports of the voting today on the state-wide prohibition amendment, both sides are claiming victory. South Texas has gone heavily "wet" and northern Texas heavily for prohibition. The balance of power is held by northwestern and central Texas. The one of these sections that gives the larger vote is likely to decide the issue.

Chairman Wolters of the anti, in an estimate given out at Houston, claims 75,000 majority against the amendment.

State Chairman Ball of the prohibitionists claims the amendment has been adopted by not less than 60,000 majority.

Fragmentary returns so far received give no inkling as to the result. All depends on how many voters were kept away from the polls on account of the heavy rains that fell during the first of the day in the prohibitionists' stronghold of the north Texas blacklands, the Red River valley and the Panhandle.

The "antle" do not seem to have fully realized their predictions in Dallas and Fort Worth and their environments. The "anti" leader last night claimed Dallas county by 10,000 majority and Fort Worth county by 5000. It does not look as if these two counties combined will give 10,000 majority.

Waco, Galveston and Beaumont are counted on for about 10,000 anti-prohibition majority. It looks as if the three large blacklands counties will furnish a prohibition lead of 6000. The polls did not close until 7 p. m.

Brother in Answer to Telephone Message Makes Dash for San Jose Only To Be Shown a Hotel Stenographer; White Slavery Theory Is Advanced DETECTIVES SEARCH BEACH RESORT

DEVELOPMENTS IN CASE

Several supposed clues as to the whereabouts of Miss May Ilg, the missing girl, have proved groundless and the detectives are as much at sea as on the day they began the search.

The girl who visited a Fruitvale restaurant and who was supposed to have been Miss Ilg, turns out to be some one else.

A message from San Jose sent one of the Ilg brothers to that city yesterday, but the supposed Miss Ilg was a San Jose stenographer.

Menlo Park, which seemed rich in clues, failed to yield anything tangible.

A beach resort was searched by detectives who believe that the girl may have been a victim of white slavers.

Governor Johnson will be asked to increase the amount of the reward.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—The San Francisco detectives have spent the day chasing will-o'-wispes in the May Ilg case and at midnight were no nearer the solution of the mystery surrounding the girl's disappearance, but were worn out and exhausted by the strain of the continued search.

The final disheartening note came when what looked to be the best clew of the day burst like a bubble and resolved itself into absolutely nothing. E. W. Metcalf, a young man prominently connected, residing at 38 East San Antonio avenue, San Jose, had telephoned the Ilg family of the presence of their sister in the Garden City.

No Doubt About It, He Says

"There's no doubt about it," he said through the phone, "if you want to see your sister, come down on the 3 o'clock train."

The brother of the young woman lost no time. He even hired a taxicab and, with Detective Cashel, swung aboard the last coach just as the train was pulling out of the Third and Townsend street depot.

With the pair went a number of newspaper men and several amateur sleuths. All were bent on the quest and many thought that the final lap in the race to find the missing girl was being run.

Mysterious Metcalf Is Cautious

When San Jose was reached Metcalf met the detectives and the brother at the depot as arranged. Either he wanted to make sure of the reward and desired no interference, or he was of an eccentric turn of mind, for he requested Cashel not to accompany him, and took Ilg along to see the girl.

She proved to be a stenographer in the Hotel Montgomery and but slightly resembled the description of May Ilg. Disheartened and discouraged, the party returned to the city, arriving at 9 p. m., and another bit of evidence had fallen to the ground.

White Slavery Theory Still Held

The police are not fully satisfied that the girl is not the victim of white slavers. Detectives well acquainted with the workings of this organization seem to place more credence in this theory than in any other. Detective Behan paid a hurried visit to a resort on the ocean beach as the result of a mysterious telephone communication from a "leak" employed in one of these places. The detective was told that a girl answering the description of Miss Ilg, even to the facial blemishes, was seen in one of the resorts. When the sleuth arrived on the scene the girl had disappeared.

An appeal to Governor Johnson to augment the reward of $1000 offered by the girl's relatives will be made if no trace can be found of her in the course of a few days.

The detectives are resting tonight and, unless a new clew is received at headquarters, no further work will be done until tomorrow.

Detective Behan spent the day going over the whole ground a second time, but could find no new line which had not already been run to the end. San Mateo county officials were also appealed to, but the widest publicity has failed to unearth any further evidence of May Ilg's wanderings.

The San Jose end looked brighter when taken in conjunction with yesterday's report from Menlo Park, but in each instance of the officers' running down a tangible clew they have been met with conditions tending to indicate the absurdity of the first belief of the identity of suspects.

A new possibility has been advanced by the police to explain the Ilg disappearance, several of the officers believing that she may have met an adventuresome and planned a trip with her to New York or some other point in the east. They argue that the woman or man companion of the girl may have plenty of money to spend and may possibly have been in each instance of the officers' run-

Earth May Put One Over Without Our Knowing It

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, July 22.—The earth may be moving into the fourth dimensional space without its inhabitants knowing anything about it, according to Professor Cassius Jackson Keyser, head of the department of mathematics at the able to furnish her with new clothes, "I cannot give up the search," said Gertrude H. Gripp, the fiance of the missing girl, today. "I do not believe Miss Ilg has ever sought the company of other men, or that she has run away because she had trouble with anyone. We were engaged for nearly three years, but never announced our engagement publicly."

The three brothers of Miss Ilg have been searching all day, but at nightfall were compelled to relinquish their labors, knowing that the detective work on the case tonight gave their version of what they thought may have happened to the unfortunate girl.

"I am inclined to believe," said Detective Furman, "that the suicide theory is the right one. Miss Ilg may, however, have departed while in a stupor. I am inclined to think that there may be another person in the case."

Detective James Mackay asserted that all indications pointed to suicide, or temporary insanity.

"I have, however, another theory," he said, "and now working on it. I have been working on it for the last three years, but I am not now at liberty to divulge what that is."

INFORMATION WITHHELD.

"I think information is being withheld by the family of the missing woman," declared Detective W. B. Behan, "but I am of the opinion that she has either disappeared or committed suicide."

Detectives James Sullivan and Behan, "how a young girl can so strangely disappear at 8 o'clock at night in a large city without some tangible clue turning up," he said.

Detective Behan is at a loss to know what to do. "I have tried every angle," he followed every clue," he maintained, "but I am still as far from reaching a good result as I was in the beginning of the search."

Girl's Fiance and Brother Search in Fruitvale Region

The suspicion that Miss May Gertrude Ilg, who has been missing from her home, 164 Hartford street, San Francisco, since last Monday night, was in hiding in the Fruitvale region, was strengthened today when the Alpha restaurant, 3331 East Fourteenth street, which is run by Mrs. W. R. Parker, has been dispelled. The young woman who was mistaken for Miss Ilg has been located by Mrs. Parker, but the latter refused to tell where she is located.

The suspicion was caused by the story of Mrs. Parker that on Tuesday last she had been approached at her place of business by a young woman who asked for work. The applicant, after declining to wait until Mrs. Parker could attend to her, went away. Then the story of the disappearance of Miss Ilg was related. The facts of the case, came to the conclusion that the applicant of the day before was the missing girl.

The description she gave of the young woman last night, which employed satisfied the brothers of the missing girl that that was the best clue that they had received of their sisters.

RELATIVES IN SEARCH.

As a consequence, the brothers and a large number of relatives, together with the fiance, Sales Agent Gripp of the Standard Soap Company, have since several times visited the Parker business place, in hopes of eventually finding the young woman who had disappeared.

The last meeting between Mrs. Parker and the relatives took place last night, but even at that time the identity of the applicant had not been discovered. Neither had the missing girl appeared at the Parker restaurant.

It was only after the Ilgs had returned home last night that Mrs. Parker was able to locate the young woman who had made the request for work and the latter was found in the home of her parents at a point between the heart of town and East Oakland and in a state of almost nervous prostration.

This discovery was made by Mrs. Parker, according to her story, on suggestion of her own. She stated that she had been told by a man who had been in the short talk which she had had with the girl seeking work, she kept in mind a name that the applicant had used, and because of the notes that the case had been determined to try and locate the young woman who had so greatly resembled the missing girl.

She first informed THE TRIBUNE of her success and declared that the detective had taken a great deal of anxiety off her mind. She declined to state the name of the girl or where she is at present quartered with her parents because of the worried nervous condition from which the young woman suffers.

WILL INFORM ILGS.

She admits that she will inform the members of the Ilg family as to where the young woman lies, but with the understanding that they will not allow any person to visit the place after

MRS. W. R. PARKER, who has figured prominently in the Ilg mystery, and the Alpha Restaurant at 3331 East Fourteenth street, of which she is proprietor. Mrs. Parker believed that Miss Ilg called at her restaurant several days ago. Detectives took up the search on this side of the bay and the Ilg brothers visited Mrs. Parker several times, making their final trip last night, when Mrs. Parker announced that she had been mistaken in her identification.

bearing. Since the failure of Miss Ilg to return home, Gripp has been searching with members of the girl's family and officers.

"I am greatly worried by the disappearance of Miss Ilg," he said, "all the more so because I have no theory as to what caused her to leave her home and because I can not explain it."

At the time of making this statement, Gripp was in company with Henry H. Ilg, a brother of the girl. Both of them were at the time looking still further into the features of the story told regarding the mannerisms and dress of the young woman who had applied to Mrs. Parker of the Alpha restaurant on East Fourteenth street seeking employment and who was supposed to be the missing girl. He was asked what he thought about the story told by Mrs. Parker and stated, both for himself as also for the brother of Miss Ilg, that he had no knowledge as to whether or not there was any clue to be found from what they had been told by the lady but they thought that the young woman who appeared at the restaurant was the missing woman but there was no means of telling where she had gone.

There was something in the tone of Gripp which led the reporter to feel that there would be still further work along the line which had been developed in furthering the story told by Mrs. Parker and that the speaker had made up his mind to say nothing further upon the matter.

DETECTIVE RETURNS.

Certain it is that it was not long after sunset last night when a detective returned from San Francisco and continued on the scene in the neighborhood of the Parker home without, however, indicating that any further material facts in the case had been discovered.

Gripp was asked as to when he had last seen Miss Ilg and replied that his last meeting was with her one week ago last night and, in reply to still another query, declared that at that time he was on the Triendliest terms with her.

"For whom were those tickets that number of women correspondents, but that she had no persons with whom she corresponded on this side of the bay. He also admitted that his sister had developed that times made sketches and sometimes was photographed by others. He denied, however, that she and Gripp had ever been photographed together. He also stated that he did not think his sister had ever been photographed in this city.

Ilg was further asked if he knew that his sister had ever visited this city in company with Gripp, and replied that he thought she had, for the reason that the two went out frequently together and as they were engaged there was little attention, of course, paid as to where they went to enjoy themselves.

The family name of the missing girl is a very unusual one and in view of the prominence attaching to it in the present connection considerable speculation was occasioned as to what nationality it belonged.

Ilg stated yesterday that it was a German name and that there were but two families of the same name in San Francisco, that of his own and another, and yet the other family bore no relation to the family of the missing girl.

This question was asked for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not there was not some family of the same name in this city which might be connected with that of the Ilgs in San Francisco with whom the unfortunate young woman might have taken refuge for some reason or other. But the fact developed that there is not a family of the name of Ilg in Alameda county. For that reason there was no prospect of finding a clue in that direction.

NO RELATIVES HERE.

Ilg also denied that his family had any relatives even of names different from his family name here and as a consequence there was no hope of finding relief in that quarter.

Ilg declared that he had no idea as to what fate had overtaken his sister, but he said he was in search of other members of his family, was following up every clue and would continue to do so until her fate should be determined. Yesterday morning he had spent three hours in the lobby of a hotel in San Francisco for the purpose of examining the features of a young woman who was stopping there to ascertain whether the guest was the girl of whom he was in search, and at length after looking at the woman declared at first glance that she was not his sister.

BERKELEY, July 22.—Suspecting that two grips which had been left at her home might have belonged to May Gertrude Ilg, Mrs. J. Isadore of 1637 Woolsey street reported to the Berkeley police that the luggage was at her home. This evening Policeman Kelly opened up the two grips and discovered that they belonged to Mrs. Marie Zeich of Sacramento and that they had been left at the wrong address.

Mrs. Isadore paid a messenger boy $1.50 charges on the baggage a few days ago. Being an aged woman she concluded that the grips had something to do with the disappearance of Miss Ilg and reported their whereabouts.

DESCRIPTION DOES NOT TALLY.

With respect to the young woman who had been seen by residents in Menlo Park, who, it was said, bore a strong resemblance to his sister, the young man said:

"At first we thought that it might be my missing sister, but when we discovered that she had a suitcase, a beaded purse and several other things we came to the conclusion that it could not be the one that we had lost. My sister left home not taking anything with her except what she wore, leaving even her eyeglasses. She wore glasses when she was at work, but not when she was at home, as a general thing, or when they were not needed for close application. Some of the pictures which have been published in connection with the case do not like that because we thought it would tend to confuse people."

Ilg admitted that his sister had a Secret Report Said to Have Been Filed Regarding Berkeley Officials.

BERKELEY, July 22.—The axe may fall on the board of health in this city as the result of a secret report filed today and several veiled admissions made by members of the city council and the mayor. It is rumored that all of the health board, with the exception of one member, may be ousted. No definite reason could be ascertained for the possible change in the membership. Those who are on the board of health are: Dr. George F. Reinhart, Dr. Robert Hector, Dr. N. Force and R. Grimshaw, sanitary officer.

The city attorney and Health Officer J. J. Benton are also ex-officio members.

PETALUMA, July 22.—Five persons who were in an automobile driven by Charles H. Higgins of 2528 Webster street, Berkeley, when the machine turned turtle on the road between Sausalito and Petaluma today, were pitched out and three of them painfully injured. Higgins, who was at the wheel, was cut about the legs and body from being hurled through the wind shield, and his wife suffered a fractured arm and numerous cuts and bruises. Both are at the Cottage hospital. A sister of Mrs. Higgins was also injured, suffering from a broken leg. Higgins is the proprietor of a commission business at 58 Drumm street, San Francisco.

SPITE FENCE IS TEN FEET HIGH

Neighbor Says Three Houses Went Up Where One Should Have Gone.

ALAMEDA, July 22.—A spite fence ten feet high, but looming up to apparently twice that height, shuts off the view enjoyed up to this time by the residents of the home of D. M. Etter, 2200 San Jose avenue. It is claimed that revenge prompted its erection by C. Fairfax Harvey, who resides next door.

From the Harvey family it was learned that Etter had an agreement with Harvey that he would erect only one house where he has since placed three, and in consequence of the dispute arising from this, the so-called spite fence was put up. Harvey claiming that the breaking of the agreement has decreased the value of his lot $1000.

Beauty Parlors Are Searched by the Authorities

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—The parlors of Madame Adele Millar, a beauty dealer, at 1189 S. Hall street, were searched today by the police, who thought possibly Miss Ilg might be there. There was no woman on the premises at the time, the house being in the hands of decorators. Madame Millar's beauty shop property is located at 166 Geary street, and it was there that Miss Ilg was treated for superfluous hairs of the face. According to H. W. Millar, husband of the doctor, Mme. Millar is in Europe, but the police decided to be on the safe side and therefore determined to search the premises.

COMMISSIONER FORREST WILL SLASH ESTIMATES

Brings Big Knife Into Requisition to Prune Budget for 1911-12 by More Than Million Dollars

demption on bonds for municipal purposes sold prior to the passage of the amendment, but this will not help a great deal.

The revenue other than direct taxation of last year amounted to $384,670, and the estimated income other than direct taxation for the current fiscal year is $417,650. This may be taken from the sum total needed to run the city to gain the estimated amount necessary to be raised by direct taxation. The budget will give the amount needed, and the budget and the assessment roll will be taken as the basis for fixing the tax rate for the coming year.

TAX RATE IS HIGH.

It is possible that the tax rate will be at least $1.75. The city administration, which has been put to some embarrassment meeting the new conditions imposed by the charter, together with the lowering of the assessment roll by taking away the corporations from the municipal tax roll, has hopes that the county will be able to reduce the state and county tax through not having to levy a state tax. This reduction, which is hoped to balance the raise in the municipal rate, may amount to about 36 cents on the $100 assessed valuation.

Department estimates of the needs of the city were handed to Commissioner Forrest yesterday. The total of department needs is $3,267,632.05. Last year the departments asked for $3,022,665. This was pruned to $1,955,737, of which $1,578,000 was raised by placing a tax of $1.38 on the $100 assessed valuation, this $1.38 including bond interest and redemption.

Train Hits Switch With Engine Crew Unconscious

PONTON, Mich., July 22.—A freight train on the D. & M. sped into town today with Engineer Haskins and Fireman Trabergs lying unconscious on the floor of the cab. The train ran into an open switch and the engine was wrecked. Persons in the cars rushed to the engine to shut off the steam. Medical attendance brought them to consciousness. They said they had drunk water out of the engine tank at Holly and shortly afterwards became sick. It is supposed that the water was poisoned.

Champions of Dr. Wiley Fear Delay in His Case

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Friends of Dr. Wiley here are not a little perturbed over the delay in action on his case by the administration. They fear the motive back of the delay is one hostile to Wiley. They voice the suspicion that the President is to let public sentiment

Thieves Kill Clerk and Flee In Auto With Diamonds

NEW YORK, July 22.—Adolph Stern, a jeweler's clerk, was shot and instantly killed about ten o'clock tonight while trying to stop three men who had seized a tray of diamonds worth $5000 in the window of Jacob Jacobi, at the northwest corner of Sixth avenue and Thirteenth street. The robbers escaped with the gems, riding off in a taxi.

GOLDEN POTLACH COMES TO CLOSE

First Affair in Northern City Is Considered Successful Throughout.

SEATTLE, July 22.—Seattle's first golden potlach passed into history at the midnight hour tonight when King Edgar d'Oro and Queen Daphne abdicated the throne at the mask ball, the closing event of a week of continuous entertainment and hilarity.

Success in every sense of the word marked the celebration. Fully 100,000 visitors participated in the closing events and tonight not less than 175,000 persons were on the downtown streets to attend the Elks' torchlight parade and to participate in the merry-making. Since last Monday every form of amusement and entertainment has been provided for the visitors and residents of Seattle.

Tonight's close of the golden potlach was one of fun and hilarity. Until far after the midnight hour the main thoroughfares of the city were jammed with people. Never in the history of Seattle, not even during the days of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition, has such a tremendous crowd appeared on the streets as was downtown tonight.

PAYMENT OF TROOPS HAS BEEN ORDERED

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—Orders have been issued instructing paymasters in this division to make payments to the troops stationed at the following posts on muster July 31: Alcatraz Island, Fort Baker, Fort Barry, Benicia Arsenal, Fort Casey, Fort Columbia, Department Rifle Range, Fort Ruffin, Discharge Camp, Fort Flagler, Fort George, Wright, Fort Lawton, Fort Mason, Fort McDowell, Presidio of Monterey, Presidio of San Francisco, Fort Ruger, Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, Fort Shafter, Fort Stevens, Sequoia National Park, Vancouver Barracks, Fort Ward, Fort Worden and Yosemite National Park, in person.

Arrangements have been made to pay troops at other posts, either by express or by special disbursing officers of the pay department.

SKELETON STEEL MASTS FOR N. Y. FIRE BOATS

NEW YORK, July 22.—The appearance of the harbor fleet of fire boats will be completely changed by the addition of the new skeleton steel masts. The steel decked boats with their towering structures resemble miniature battle-ships. The design of the steel mast, with its obvious advantages, is of course borrowed from the government warships. The elevated position at the top of these masts promises to prove a very important strategic point in battling with harbor fires. From this elevation streams of water may be played directly down upon dock fires, while at the same time, it brings the hose in reach of the upper stories of the largest boats. As in the case of skeleton masts of battleships, these metal structures may, of course, be depended upon to resist all ordinary attacks.

PUBLICITY NOT PUBLIC ENOUGH

Senator Reed Wants Campaign Bills and Money Exhibited to the People.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Senator Reed of Missouri does not believe the Rucker campaign publicity bill now before the House with the Senate amendment goes far enough. It would make the purchasing of a seat in Congress by any sort of hook or crook a felony. "I hold this," he said, "that if every political committee had to expose to the public the source and disposition of its contributions to the last dollar, it would have three good effects. First, it would make committees careful not to go to bad sources for contributions and would deter them in effect from selling their candidates for money to carry their elections. Money given to elect a man may be as reasonable a bribe and may as completely control his vote as money paid for his vote after he is elected. This does not follow, but it often happens."

DON'T WANT PUBLICITY.

"Second—A disclosure of the names of those who received the money tends to force the proper use and deter the improper use of money. It also has a tendency to limit the use of money. One may use money, but he does not like to have it published."

"Third, publicity of the use of large sums of money tends to arouse public sentiment for the man who limited means."

"The Rucker bill, so far as it provides for publicity, is all right. But as I said in the Senate, we are confronted by this condition: While the rulings in Congress have been that if a man be convicted of actually buying votes and other corrupt politics, the House or Senate is warranted in expelling him, still no precedent in the bill and no provision makes the use of vast sums of money in itself to bar one from a seat in Congress, notwithstanding that the use of great sums of money have the effect generally of sowing the seeds of corruption broadcast in a community as was done in Adams county, Ohio."

"If such things are sanctioned by the public, only rich men will be elected to the office."

"To apply this concretely, while it appears that Senator Stephenson of Wisconsin spent $107,000 to secure his nomination, he holds a seat in Congress that he could not have obtained by any other way than through the use of money. "What I desire is to have the law so framed that if a man spends more than permitted by the law he is guilty of a violation of the statute and on these grounds can be expelled from Congress. I put that provision in my amendment, but could not obtain a vote on it and inserted a clause prohibiting spending more than a certain amount."

GATES LOSES SLEEP AND IS VERY NERVOUS

PARIS, July 22.—Oppressive heat and the rumbling noise of the underground railroad running by the Hotel Maurice deprives John W. Gates of much needed sleep. He is agitated and nervous. As a result of the result of this nervousness, his physicians do not share the optimism of the Gates family as to his recovery.

ILL NATURE WILL CAUSE RETIREMENT

Army Officers Must Not Only Be Physically, But Mentally Able.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—An army officer, who through ill-nature or otherwise is regarded as temperamentally disqualified for duty, will face retirement to make room for others possessed of the attributes of leaders of men. This condition is provided for in revised army regulations just promulgated by the War Department. Under the old rules officers were hailed before retiring boards only for physical disabilities. The Department of Justice, however, has decided that the law governing the retirement of officers who, for any reason, have become incapable of performing their duties. This decision has been in force for some time past, but as commanding officers have recommended for so long the retirement only of officers physically disabled, it has been difficult to have them keep in mind the amended interpretation of the law. This is expected to be accomplished by the new regulations.

MAJOR HALL RELIEVED OF PHILIPPINE DUTY

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—The War Department has relieved Major H. Hall, infantry unassigned, from duty as assistant chief of the Philippine constabulary, effective September 22. Upon the expiration of such a leave of absence as may be given him, Major Hall will return to his proper station. Succeeding Major Hall as assistant chief of the constabulary will be Captain John B. Bennett, eighth infantry, at present inspector of the constabulary forces in the islands.

GROWTH IN EXPORT TRADE SHOWS BIG GAIN

Farmer and Factory Share About Equally in Remarkable Foreign Demands.

COTTON HEADS LIST OF SOIL PRODUCTS

Demand for Agricultural and All Other Kinds of Machinery Is Strong.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The farmer and the manufacturer shared about equally in the remarkable growth in exports which characterized the fiscal year just ended. The total increase in exports was $204,000,000 when compared with the immediately preceding year, being a larger gain than ever before shown in a single year of our export trade. Of this gain of $204,000,000, manufactures as a whole supplied $140,000,000, cotton about $125,000,000, meat and dairy products about $18,000,000, corn approximately $10,000,000, food animals $1,500,000, flour about $2,500,000, while wheat shows a marked decline.

COTTON IS KING.

Cotton is king in the export of products of agriculture, the value exported during the year being $55,000,000, by far the largest total ever shown in the cotton export trade, against $40,000,000 in 1910, and $48,500,000 in 1907, the former high record year. Meat and dairy products show a total of approximately $150,000,000 against $131,000,000 last year, but materially less than in certain earlier years in which the total ranged as high as $205,000,000 in 1906 and $211,000,000 in 1908. Food animals show a total of $15,000,000 against a little less than $12,000,000 last year, but much below the figures of earlier years, when the total figures of food animals exceeded $43,000,000 in the high record year 1906 and $48,000,000 in 1908. Against $1,500,000 in 1907, the high record in flour exports in 1903 showing a total of approximately $75,500,000.

QUANTITY IS LESS.

One peculiar feature of the cotton export trade is the fact that, although the value exceeded by more than $100,000,000 that of any earlier year the quantity exported was less than in several years. The quantity of cotton exported in the fiscal year 1911 was about 4,929,000 pounds, against 4,418,000 pounds in 1910, and 4,518,000 pounds in 1907, yet the value in 1911 was $685,000,000 against $417,500,000 in 1909 and $481,600,000 in 1907.

OTHER INCREASES.

The increase in manufactures is apparent in a large number of articles. Agricultural implements as a whole show an increase of about $8,000,000, and reapers alone about $5,000,000, plows and cultivators about $2,500,000, pig copper about $15,000,000, lumber about $5,000,000, iron and steel manufactures as a whole an increase of about $47,000,000, while the details of iron and steel show for shoes, structural iron and steel, about $2,000,000; metal working machinery, about $5,000,000; wire, about $2,000,000; electrical machinery, about $2,000,000; mining machinery, nearly $2,000,000; cotton, over $1,000,000; traction engines, more than $1,000,000, while in other articles not classed under the general title of iron and steel manufactures, automobiles show a gain of about $3,000,000, railway cars about $4,000,000, electrical appliances, about $2,000,000, and naphtha, about $3,000,000.

DIPLOMATS WEARY OF LOAN NEGOTIATIONS

LONDON, July 22.—Diplomats are beginning to wonder whether there will ever be an end to the negotiations over the various Chinese loans. They got the railway loans off their heads and thought there was nothing more to be said about the Manchurian loan. Lately, however, it has again cropped up in the dispatch bags. Japan and Russia, objected to the clause that provided that in future loans the countries supplying the money in this instance should be given the first option. Russia and Japan thought that such a clause gave them a monopoly, and the ambassadors in London complained to the foreign office.

It has been pointed out that such a clause is put in all loan agreements, and is a usual business arrangement. No formal answer has been given yet, but it is believed that steps will be taken by the interested powers to allay the feeling in Japan and Russia that they are being shut out of any loan transactions in China.

BULLET THAT CAUSES SWOON IS INVENTED

BERLIN, July 22.—An inventive German has recently taken out a patent for a pistol for producing apparent death for a brief time. It is loaded with a bullet made of a chemical composition, to which is added enough powder to propel it. The bullet explodes and causes a thick cloud of vapor, which envelops the victim, makes it impossible for him to see, renders his breathing difficult, and he finally falls into a swoon that lasts from ten minutes to a half hour. It is believed that the new pistol will be of importance for police work, as they may be able to overcome crowds effectively without killing anybody.

An apology to his heirs for not having more wealth to leave in order that their path in life might be easier, is contained in a letter written by the late George W. Hall, filed today as his last testament. In the missive Hall explains to his children that he had been defeated in his hopes and ambitions and asked that his body be cremated and his ashes "scattered to the winds." The estate is divided equally among the children and consists of little outside of the family home in Fruitvale.

PRISON DIRECTORS MAKE NO CHANGES

SACRAMENTO, July 22.—With three members Robert Devlin, Tires L. Ford and Charles Sontag—present on the board of prison directors held the regular monthly meeting at the Folsom State prison last night and transacted business of a routine nature. Bills were allowed and reports gone over, but aside from that little else was accomplished. action at all was taken upon the matter of providing a successor to Warden Rell, as has been intimated, and according to one director, such action is contemplated. Rell, so he said, was elected in June, 1909, for a four-year term, and will remain the full time. Dennis Duffy, the new prison director, who was appointed to succeed Charles E. Clinch, was unable to be present, but it is expected that he will make his first official appearance at a meeting at San Quentin prison to be held on Tuesday, July 25.

October.

CLEVELAND, July 22.—J. B. Pearce of this city, president of the J. B. Pearce Wall Paper Co.; C. C. Aler of Columbus, Ohio, president of the C. C. Aler Wall Paper Co.; Norton Newcomb, of St. Louis, president of Newcomb Wall Paper Co., and E. E. Maxwell of Chicago, general manager of S. A. Maxwell and Co., all of them wall paper jobbers, appeared in the United States district court today and pleaded not guilty to the indictments brought against them by the federal grand jury last Wednesday on charges of conspiracy in restraint of trade in violation of the Sherman Anti-trust law. Bail of $5000 was furnished in each case. Judge W. L. Day set the cases for October.

CLOSING OF SMELTER
DEPOPULATES TOWN

Printing Press Concern Will Leave Gotham After 100 Years.

NEW YORK, July 22.—Announcement was made today that R. Hoe and Company, manufacturers of printing presses, have definitely decided to move their factory from this city, where it has been since the business was started, more than 100 years ago. Labor troubles are frankly admitted to furnish the motive for removal. The machinists began to demand higher pay and fewer hours two years ago. As the result of several concessions, their hours of work were reduced from ten to nine hours and their wages were increased from 25 to 30 per cent. On April 1 last the men presented a demand for an eight-hour day with notice that unless it was granted that afternoon none of the 100 men in the machine shop would return to work the following Monday morning. It was not granted and the strike still continues.

ARTISTIC BOOK FOR THE TYPOS

President Wheeler to Welcome Delegates at Greek Theater
After August 16.

When the fifty-seventh convention of the International Typographical Union meets in San Francisco on August 14, the delegates and visitors will each receive a copy of the official souvenir. It will be the best-printed book ever turned out in the West. Special paper has been procured and every detail pertaining to the "art preservative" has been faithfully executed.

For months a special committee of the local Typographical Union has had charge of this work—William J. Reid, Felix Wheeler and M. W. Dreyfuss. Articles have been contributed by many writers, and some of the best known subjects of printerdom have been especially treated. The book was made at the time this city was selected as the meeting place of the I. T. U. forces that the souvenir would be unexcelled.

KNOW GOOD PRINTING.

Now that the final forms are coming from the press, it is recognized that the East will have no local rival. Printers know good printing. They will not be disappointed when they see the official book of the San Francisco convention.

President Benjamin Ide Wheeler of the University of California is going to welcome the typos to Alameda county on the afternoon of August 15. After a short address he will show the different buildings to the delegates and guests, who will also see the Greek theater, which is named after the typographers. Oakland Typographical Union will see that the east shore of the bay is shown to the best advantage.

Special trains are coming from the East, the North and the South to this convention. They will arrive in time for the "get together" on the evening of August 12th, the main train from New York and Chicago having altered its schedule in order to reach its destination a little ahead of the time originally planned. Seattle, Portland, Tacoma and Spokane will send full delegations in reserved coaches, and Texas and the other Southern States will be well represented.

LOOKED ON AS TREAT.

San Francisco is so much in the eye of the world that a journey to the Pacific Coast is a looked-for treat. The selection of the city as the site of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition again directed attention to the metropolis, and in this respect the International Typographical Union proved a paying proposition from an advertising standpoint.

The merchants will reap excellent returns from the presence of a body of men and women of the highest intelligence of those following the printers' craft. They are generous to a fault.

The preparations for the convention are in excellent shape and Typographical Union No. 23 believes that it will be the most successful gathering of the kind in the history of the parent organization. It has been a pleasure to note the cordial feeling toward the printers, who are recognized as leaders in the trade-union movement.

1,000,000 COPIES OF AMENDMENTS

State Secretary Jordan to Issue
Booklets to County Clerks in August.

SACRAMENTO, July 22.—An order for the printing of 1,000,000 copies of the twenty-three proposed constitutional amendments, which are to be voted on at the next general election, October 10, was placed by Secretary of State Jordan with State Printer Shannon today.

Heretofore, the proposed amendments have been printed on large single sheets, but on account of the number and importance of the amendments this time they are to be printed in pamphlet form. The booklets will contain the sections of the constitution proposed to be amended, as well as the amendments themselves. The booklet also will contain brief arguments for and against the amendments, prepared by the Senators and Assemblymen named by the president of the Senate and the Speaker of the House Assemblyman Hewitt just before adjournment of the 1911 legislature.

In accordance with the law, Secretary of State Jordan will send the booklets to the clerks of the fifty-eight counties of the state, to be distributed to the voters. Under a new law State Superintendent of Education will distribute about 20,000 copies to normal, high and grammar schools and other institutions of learning.

To Cure Sore Bunions Treatment Marvelously Quick for This and All Foot Troubles.

"Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of hot water. Soak the feet in this for fifteen minutes, gently massaging the sore parts. (Less time will not give desired results.) Repeat this each day until the inflammation is drawn out and the foot is reduced to normal size. Corns and callouses can be removed in the same way. The Calocide is no longer confined only to doctors' use. Any druggist has it in stock and will quickly get it from his wholesale house. This will prove a welcome item to persons who have been vainly trying to cure their foot troubles with ineffective tablets and foot powders."

BERKELEY GLEE CLUB
MAKING HIT IN EUROPE

The Glee Club of the University of California evidently is making a hit in Europe, according to the critics of the press. There are sixteen young men singing under the leadership of "Brick" Morse, and this is what the London Mail had to say of their Paris concert—the article appearing in the continental edition of the Mail, which is read by English-speaking people touring or resident on the continent.

"The fashionable element of the American colony in Paris was largely represented at the concert given by the University of California Glee Club last night at the Salle de l'Agricaulture. Congratulations are due to this highly artistic male choir, which was under the leadership of C. R. Morse, for their perfect interpretation of a 'really admirable program.'

"Choral singing in Paris is extremely rare, so that last night's concert was all the more appreciated. The singing throughout was practically faultless, both as regards time and expression. Special mention may be made of 'Alahoe' (Queen Lilliuakala) and 'The Rosary' (Nevin) and a number of humorous items of ragtime variety were greatly appreciated."

"Mr. H. Warner Sherwood delighted his audience with two beautifully played violin solos, 'Spanischer Tanz' (Redfield) and 'Romance' (d'Ambrosio), and was twice encoresd. Mr. Clinton R. Morse, who has a tenor voice of exquisite quality, sang 'The Way the Wind Blows' and 'Mother of Mine' (Rours) and as an encore 'Killarney.'"

AMERICAN NOVELIST
KILLS SECOND LION

LOS ANGELES, July 22.—To Stewart Edward White, American novelist, has fallen the honor of bringing to the dust the fourth largest lion in the world. White is hunting in the jungles of Africa and he is having a more exciting time than he had at Santa Barbara writing stories.

White left for Africa last September by way of London and through British East Africa from Mombasa, following a path of the way the trail was covered by Roosevelt. From Nairobi he wrote in May, saying that up to that time he had killed 155 head of African big game, ranging from the gentle gazelle to the mighty elephant and rhinoceros.

Supposed Head of Gang That Robbed Steamer Is Captured.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—Chas. Everett, leader of a gang suspected of robbing the Alaska treasure ship Humboldt almost a year ago, was arrested yesterday in Canon City, Colorado. News of the arrest was contained in a dispatch from Colorado.

Everett, the last of the gang to be arrested, who is said to have been the brains in the Humboldt robbery, is also accused of having swindled a San Francisco bank out of $5000 and a local law firm out of the same amount.

He has been trailed from coast to coast, the detectives keeping track of him through Dollo, Daidro, his affinity. Under the name of Waldron, Everett was in San Francisco less than a month ago and spent two weeks in San Jose.

SEVEN CAUGHT IN RAID.

The first arrest in this notable gold robbery took place in this city last December, when Harry Moffitt of the United States secret service arrested seven men and one woman in a rooming house and found bars of gold and gold dust in their possession. The woman gave the name of Mrs. E. L. Smith. She was never tried.

Orval Caviness, alias E. L. Smith, admitted his part in the case three weeks ago and was sentenced to one year in San Quentin. The light penalty was imposed because of the man's falling health.

Two more suspects were arrested, Charles Barrett, in Salt Lake City, and James Whalen, in Portland.

ASSOCIATE IS INFORMED.

One of the members of the gang admitted his part and implicated Everett. The detectives discovered that Everett planned the robbery while in Ketchikan, Alaska, obtaining blank drafts with which, it is charged, he intended to swindle banks.

Everett was arrested once under another name in Hot Springs, Ark., but before his identity was established he escaped from prison.

MANY BANKS VICTIMIZED.

Everett, according to the authorities, swindled a San Francisco bank out of $5000, the Bank of Reno out of $5000, a San Francisco law firm out of $5000 and banks in Washington out of $5000 and banks in Oregon out of $5000.

When arrested a $250,000 had been divided among four men. In all the gang cleaned up nearly $500,000.

Everett worked under many aliases. He was known in the different cities as Hugh Waldron, George Northrup, Alvin Karpis, E. R. Smith, J. J. Walery, R. R. Thorp and T. T. Newell.

The robbery of the steamship Humboldt took place in September last. The total was so grossly manipulated that the loss of $75,000 in gold bars was not discovered until after the treasure was opened at a Seattle bank.

MILLIONAIRES PASS UP HILLSBOROUGH!

Menlo Park Wins Three in Race for First Place as Peninsula Hub.

HILLSBOROUGH, July 22.—The battle for social supremacy between Hillsborough and Menlo Park has resulted in the former losing four important points in quick succession.

Menlo Park has won for residents three millionaires—Dr. Hartland Law, Robert Oxnard, best-sugar king, and George H. Lent. The prospective residents are expending close to $1,000,000 in building and furnishing their homes.

These improvements more than rival the work that is being carried on at Hillsborough. Besides, Menlo Park is erecting a concrete clubhouse and the Burlingame Country Club is building for itself a new home.

While George A. Newhall's palatial concrete residence in Hillsborough is being completed, Mrs. Theodore Payne's fireproof mansion in Menlo Park will soon be ready for occupancy.

Menlo Park boasts the finest grounds and residence on the peninsula, the property of James L. Flood, multi-millionaire clubman and auto enthusiast. Hillsborough offsets it with the Crocker estate, "New Place," the home of William H. Crocker; "Uplands," the residence of Charles Templeton Crocker, and the old Tevis home, the residence of Miss Jennie Crocker.

Some critics hold that Fred Sharon's vast place in Menlo outshines the Hillsborough estate of Charles W. Clark and even the home of Frank Cardan.

The Hillsborough contingent contends that it outnumbers its southern neighbor. Although Hillsborough possesses three polo fields and Menlo Park a swimming pool has the largest private swimming pool in the country, which was recently constructed on the Fred Sharon place. It holds 120,000 gallons of water.

JOHN BULL WILL TRY TO CULTIVATE WEED

NEW YORK, July 22.—To determine if tobacco can successfully be raised in England, J. V. Campbell arrived in New York today to study the growth of the plant.

Mr. Campbell is sent here by the Industrial Commission of London. He will spend nine months in the United States gathering data in all the tobacco-growing areas and make a report to the commission.

NOTICE!

The attention of the thousands of patrons and friends of the Oakland Orpheum is respectfully called to the fact that the theater will present on Sunday, July 23, the most extraordinary vaudeville bill, from every point of view that has been staged at the Orpheum for a very long time.

There are about 50,000 regular patrons of this theater, and each of these is quite well assured that the Orpheum bills invariably represent the highest type of modern vaudeville. Each of these patrons also knows that the theater shows are invariably a bargain—that is, they always represent a very large and satisfactory "money's worth" for the price of admission.

We wish to emphasize to each of these 50,000 patrons, however, and to every person who loves the snap, spice and sparkle of superior stage entertainment, to know that the program which we will offer next Sunday will be an extraordinary affair—the keenest, smartest, and altogether most delightful, and incidentally the most expensive vaudeville bill that could possibly be put together.

We desire to call your attention to the fact that there will be numerous "head line" features on the bill, whereas one is deemed ordinarily to be sufficient.

There will be eight magnificent vaudeville acts on this program Sunday, and the total salary roll involved in their engagements would stagger even those who are accustomed to the handling of large amounts. Please read THE TRIBUNE for particulars.

Because of all this we urge to all our many patrons and friends to make it a point to visit the theater during the coming week, and to remind others who may not be regular Orpheum attendants that during the coming week there will be staged a program that is so rich and altogether satisfactory as to be properly labeled

"THE GREATEST YET."

GRAPE GROWERS ARE ORGANIZED

E. M. Sheehan Elected Chairman of California Organization.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—The leading grape growers and wine men of California, at a recent meeting held in this city, formed a State organization to be known as the Grape Growers' Association of California and elected the following officers:

Chairman, E. M. Sheehan.
Treasurer, Frank E. Busse.
Secretary, H. F. Stoll.
Executive board—E. M. Sheehan, Frank E. Busse, Frank A. Wenth of Livermore, Theodore Gier of Oakland, L. A. Rivers of Fresno and H. F. Stoll.

This board, with fifty vice-chairmen, representing every viticultural section of California, will arrange organization meetings in all the leading grape centers of the State.

For the purpose of securing funds to carry on an effective campaign in the interest of the wine industry, growers who do not crush their grapes will contribute five cents a ton for the grapes they raise. Wineries will pay ten cents a ton for all the grapes they crush. Wine dealers will contribute stated amounts to be arranged later.

The first out-of-town meeting is to be held in August in Los Angeles.

ASQUITH HAS WHIP HAND IN VETO IMBROGLIO

Will Crack Lash About Ears of Parliament Within Few Days.

LIBERALS DEPENDING ON WISDOM OF KING

Tory Lords Would Revive Powers Long Fallen Into Senile Decay.

LONDON, July 22.—Mr. Asquith has the whip hand in the controversy between the houses of parliament over the veto bill, and his followers predict he will flourish the lash next week with the gesture of the master.

Infuriated Unionists denounce him for not having been more explicit on the subject of the assurances he has received from George V., regarding the creation of peers.

His supporters reply he has been explicit enough, that when the psychological moment arrives he will show his hand, and that in his last appeal to the British people he and his colleagues have not been guilty of a colossal deceit affecting the sovereign.

That the king will prove a strict constructionist of his prerogatives, is the rock upon which the radicals build their hopes.

Tories profess to think that if called upon by Asquith to create peers on a scale for which no precedent exists, he will refuse, dissolve parliament and give the Balfour-Lansdowne-Chamberlain coalition an opportunity to shout "Save the King from being throttled by Socialists and traitors." But men close to Lloyd George and Winston Churchill laugh at the idea that any Unionist of authority would risk involving the king in the ruin of the House of Lords.

RELY ON KING.

Cool-headed Liberals say, in the language of Sir Robertson Nicol, that they are happy to believe the king's own wisdom will resist such an attempt at a time when "thrones are tottering in Europe and when England has just been re-buttressed by imperial good will."

With Lord Lansdowne at the helm and the flag of referendum flying definitely, the House of Lords craft has entered the shoals.

Have the men in charge of the vessel, asks a London Radical sheet, eyes to sea and ears to hear what is ahead and what is around?

"Was there ever so mad an adventure as Lord Halsbury proposes, except in the records of smuggling and piracy?"

Democracy throughout the country, whether British or Irish, has been amazed by the claims of some of the peers during the debate on the veto bill.

TORY LORDS SNEER.

Tory lords have sneered when the champions of the government and the Radical party have referred to the House of Commons. A few, like De Broke, have boldly repudiated that supremacy and asserted it the duty of peers to revive powers long ago fallen into disuse. Anti-Democratic bias has been glaringly obvious on the Tory benches.

In resisting the pretensions of reactionary peers, Lord Morley and Lord Halsbury have displayed firmness and the spirit of the new democracy.

Though these peers belong to different sections of the Liberal party and do not see alike on all questions, the "moderate" secretary of war has loudly seconded the "Radical" secretary for India as the government representative.

In the big campaign against home rule that the Unionists are getting ready to wage in the early autumn, they will raise the theory of religious intolerance.

So plain is the purpose that the Nationalists have decided to take time by the forelock and are issuing through the Irish press agency an impressive appeal to the British people against a revision to this old exploded wicked slander upon the majority of the Irish people.

Jeremiah MacVeagh, a member of Parliament for Southdown, has put forth a booklet containing statements by 2 hundred well-known non-Catholics living in various parts of Ireland as well as several British officials posted regarding Irish affairs by personal experiences in the island, refuting the theory that the establishment of an Irish parliament would be followed by persecution of Protestants.

WARRANT ISSUED.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—A warrant was issued in the police court today for the arrest of Samuel Philo, on a charge of felony embezzlement. The complainant is Asher Pezonte of 24 Ellis street, who declares Philo misappropriated $150.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—The America Maru, of the Japanese line, left Hongkong and the Chiyu Maru left Honolulu yesterday, both for this port.

WEALTHY AMERICAN BEAUTY IS CORONATION FAVORITE

MRS. ELMER E. BLACK of New York, who was one of the beautiful American women in London during the coronation.

LONDON, July 22.—One of the prettiest of American women in London during the coronation period was Mrs. Elmer E. Black of New York. Mrs. Black is a wealthy widow who went to England to attend the meeting of the Universal Race Association. During the coronation week Mrs. Black took an active part in social features and was extensively feted by prominent members of the London smart set.

SUFFRAGISTS BEGIN SELF-DENIAL WEEK ON AUG. 15

Half of Money Saved by 3000 New York Women Will Be Devoted to Campaign in California

NEW YORK, July 22.—Three thousand New York suffragettes have already signified their intention of participating in a self-denial week which begins August 15. These devoted women are pledged to deny themselves everything except the bare necessities of life and donate the money saved to the cause.

Mrs. William Warner Penfield, the tall distinguished looking woman who now fills the place of Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt as chairman of the women's suffrage party, today told about the week of self-denial.

"We are undertaking it for two reasons," she explained. "The most obvious one is that we need a lot of money. As most people know, the amendment to the state constitution giving woman the vote has passed the California legislature and will go to the people this coming autumn. It is a tremendously important event in the history of suffrage and the California women are meeting the situation nobly. Thousands of them have been making a summer of self-denial, giving up their vacations and even week-end trips in order to devote time and money to forwarding the cause among the people."

MORE MONEY NEEDED.

"But still they need more money—not for the buying of votes, but for legitimate campaign expenses, for educating the people to the importance of the present issues. They have sent an appeal all over the country, and we New York women feel that we must not let it go unheeded. So half the funds collected during our self-denial week will be sent to our sisters in California. The other half will be kept in our own treasury for, of course, we too are always 'needing money.'"

"All the women who have heard of the self-denial week are thoroughly enthusiastic. Women who have almost no money that they can call their own, mothers of large families on the east side, have told us they will go without the occasional can of soda and the penny sodas which are their only solace this torrid weather in order to give the few cents saved to the cause."

"On the whole the lawyers, doctors and other professional women who belong to the party are pledging us a half or two-thirds or even seven-eighths of their income during the week set apart. Each woman will retain herself, of the money she earns, just enough for bare living expenses. The rank and file of us will probably amass our contribution by sheet saving and self-denial. A friend told me the other day that she had retrimed her hat instead of buying a new one, and put aside the money saved for the self-denial fund.

YES, THEY WILL WORK.

"During the week of August 15, many women will do their own laundry work. They will drink no sodas, eat no ice cream or candy. They will not leave the city for week-end visits. They will polish their own shoes. They will clean their own gloves. They will take their shampoo at home instead of going to the hairdressers."

"Our women will go to no theaters or concerts or beach resorts. If some of them have been hiring a woman to assist in the house work they will dismiss her. The ones who live in apartment houses will forego the attendance of the maid, with the tipping it involves, during the sacred seven days."

"We shall have to eat but we shall be as unobtrusive as it is possible. We shall patronize the cheap, substantial restaurant where one can get a meal for 20 cents. I fancy some of us will dispense with lunch altogether. And we shall not buy a flower or a popular magazine, or a summer novel in all the week. If we wish to read there are always the free public libraries."

MOTHER LONGS TO SEE ABSENT SON

Ohio Woman Makes Piteous Appeal to San Francisco Police.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—A piteous appeal for the return of a wandering boy, accompanied by enclosures of circulars to be posted about the town, was received by Chief White today, and the request of a sorrowing mother that the notices be placed conspicuously will be complied with. The missive comes from Bradner, Ohio, addressed to the chief, and reads:

"Will you please put these notices up in a public place that I may get some news of my boy. I am a poor widow, and I need his help and companionship. He will be 20 this fall. His name is Christopher Petersen. His initials are inside his coat pocket. He may be in vaudeville, or in a pool room."

The posters are small and brief. The first paragraph is headed: "My wandering boy," and reads: "If the readers of this notice should see my wandering boy, won't you please come home or write and let me know where you are, as I am almost wild with grief. Tell me why you went away and what you want to do and I will do all I can to put you on your feet. My life is ruined without you."

"MRS. N. PETERSON."

The second section reads: "I will welcome any information regarding the boy who answers the following description: Height 5 feet 8; weight, 130 pounds; grayish blue eyes; complexion fair; holds a check. At time of leaving he wore dark trousers, coat with green, blue, blue serge cap, green tie and plain, blue gingham shirt."

FRESNO ROMANCE CULMINATES HERE

Miss Lillie Martin Becomes the Bride of J. F. Dunleavy at Pretty Ceremony.

The wedding of Miss Lillie Martin and J. Fred Dunleavy, both residents of Fresno, was celebrated last evening in this city at the residence of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. C. Fred Burks, 472 Thirty-sixth street.

The ceremony was performed at 8:30 o'clock by Rev. J. R. Perkins, pastor of the First Christian Church of Alameda, and was witnessed by only the bride's immediate relatives and a few intimate friends of the bride. The entrance of the bride party was signaled by the rendition of the wedding march from "Lohengrin" by Miss Leona Burks, a cousin of the bride, while music incidental to the ceremony was given by R. J. Burks. The bride was attended by Mrs. W. B. Martin, her sister-in-law, as matron of honor, while W. B. Martin, brother of the bride, was best man. Miss Ethel Martin, youngest sister of the bride, was the ring-bearer.

The bride's gown was of white marquisette, trimmed with cluny and valencienne lace and made over a white silk slip, which gave her a changed traveling costume of white serge, worn with a blue hat, following the ceremony. The matron of honor, Mrs. Martin, was in a gown of pale pink null and carried a bouquet of Enchantress carnations.

Following the ceremony a wedding supper was served, the dining-room being attractively decorated for the occasion in a color scheme of pink and white, worked out in pink carnations and pink shaded candles. The young people were the recipients of many handsome gifts, including a chest of silver, the gift of the bride's parents.

The honeymoon will be spent in home.

TO TEACH JEWISH RELIGION BY MAIL

Former Kansas City Rabbi Is Placed in Charge of Correspondence School.

KANSAS CITY, July 22.—The Jewish religion is to be taught by mail. Rabbi Henry Berkowitz, formerly one of the Kansas City rabbis, has been placed in charge of a correspondence school which he has been planning for several years.

There are many persons of the Hebrew faith scattered about the United States, in the small towns and villages. These have little chance to hear these religious teachings in the synagogues and their children can only be taught by the parents. The purpose of the school is to afford religious reading to all Jews in the United States and Canada. Rabbi Berkowitz hopes to have the school in operation by the first of the coming year. Headquarters are to be located in Philadelphia, Pa.

TEMESCAL LADIES' DANCE A SUCCESS

Will Organize Club With Object of Giving Similar Entertainments.

The entertainment and dance given in Arminio's hall by the young ladies of Temescal during the past week proved such a success that it has been decided to effect a permanent organization for the purpose of giving similar entertainments in the future.

The last entertainment was followed by a dance, both parts of the program being under the direction of Miss Irene Rowan. The musical and literary program rendered was as follows: Spanish dances, Guinevere Morrill; "Yankee Doodle Boy," Viola Huber; song, "Splash Me," Mrs. Morrill and Miss Craig; piano solo, Marjorie Hunter; Dutch song and dance, Sorelda Medau; and Gladys O'Neil; "Ship Ahoy," Cora O'Connor; "I Just Can't Keep Away from You," by Thelma and Mildred Craig; Irish jig, Viola Huber; "Catchy Time," Gladys O'Neil.

FATHER WANTS $5000 FOR DEATH OF CHILD

VISALIA, July 22.—Alleging criminal negligence on the part of the defense, William Waterman of Exeter filed suit for $5000 damages in the local superior court against the Visalia Electric Railway company. Waterman asks $5000 from the company because his 1-year-old child was run over and instantly killed by an electric car at Exeter two months ago. The child was playing on the track near the Waterman home when the fatal accident occurred. Waterman alleged that the electric company neglected to repair its cars, and as a result the brakes were defective.

FINANCIERS HAIL GEORGE'S SPEECH

Consider It Intimation That the Government Is True to French Entente.

LONDON, July 22.—David Lloyd George's demonstration against Germany's dramatic action in Morocco, made in a speech before the Lombard street financiers last evening, has been hailed with enthusiasm on all sides as a clear intimation that the British government remains faithful to the Anglo-French entente and will be found at France's back throughout the present negotiations.

NOT AIMED AT GERMANY.

BERLIN, July 22.—The speech of David Lloyd George, the British chancellor, could not possibly have been aimed at Germany, according to the reassuring views voiced by the officials of the German foreign office, who were unwilling today to believe that the minister referred in any way to the Moroccan situation. These officials stated that the negotiations with France were proceeding normally with a prospect of success, and that there was no reason for Great Britain to abandon a waiting attitude and assume a belligerent tone.

PICKPOCKETS ROB YOUNG WOMAN OF $170

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—Pickpockets, operating on a Union street car, stole $170 from the handbag of Miss I. P. Costello, a resident of the Presidio, this afternoon. Just when the theft occurred, the young woman was unable to say, but she found her bag open and her pocketbook gone and notified the police.

HOW KAHN BROTHERS WIN AND HOLD PATRONS

PUBLICITY AS AN ART

Oakland Firm Realizes Value of Advertising in Building Up Trade.

Customers Soon Learn to Watch Daily for the Store's Announcements.

ONE of the most striking features of modern life is the importance paid to advertising. It has become an art within the past generation, an art that is an essential in the business world. This is an age of strenuous living and in business, when the people are in such a hurry that they must live on the run and, in order to attract their attention, it is necessary to do so with definiteness, with force, or in other words, to advertise to them the merits which, if they had more time to inquire, they could see for themselves.

No one realizes this more than the up-to-date enterprising proprietors of a large concern, such as, for example, that of Kahn Brothers, whose establishment at Washington and Thirteenth streets is one of the main mercantile stores of the city. This firm will serve well to illustrate to less energetic competitors the effectiveness of this art of advertising.

Every phase of modern activity is obliged to employ this medium, from the small merchant who hands out a sign telling what he has to sell to the city which, through its Chamber of Commerce and commercial organizations, conducts a world-wide publicity campaign, and even to the international expositions whose purpose is to make the rest of the world familiar with the products of each nation represented.

FIELD OF ADVERTISING.

It is in this field of international advertising that the printing press and its products, the magazines and newspapers, are such potent factors. But they are none the less so in the individual community, where they act as the middle point between the man who has something to sell and who wants to bring it to the attention of the man who wants to buy. Yet the singular point is that in so many cases, while the individual business man recognizes the power of advertising as applied to international affairs, he fails to see its application to his individual case, and fails to make full use of something which can be not only of great service to him, but to the community in which he lives as well.

Every merchant feels it his duty to boost the community in which he lives, and this he may do if he will by letting the buying public know what he has to sell. He may do this in one way by having his store attractively arranged, and by having attractive things in it, but that is only the first step; he must go further and call the attention of the hurrying public to his merchandise by the best means at his disposal, the newspaper.

He owes it to the community to put his "best foot forward," because by so doing he advertises the city's financial rating. This is because nothing indicates the financial, commercial and artistic character of a community more than its general merchandise stores.

WHEN THERE IS PROSPERITY.

If the stores show prosperity, up-to-date, enterprise, it is a sure indication that these are the characteristics of the residents of the city. This is so because the stores depend for their success on the women of the city, the wives and daughters of the men who do the business, and when the men are making good in manufacturing and wholesale pursuits, in other words, making money, then it is in large part to the women that the money goes to be expended for clothes and home furnishings and all the outward indications of financial success.

That is why when the outsider comes to Oakland and sees the many fine stores

HOT WATER USED ON HIM, HE SAYS

Steward Said to Have Also Wielded Cleaver on Member of Crew.

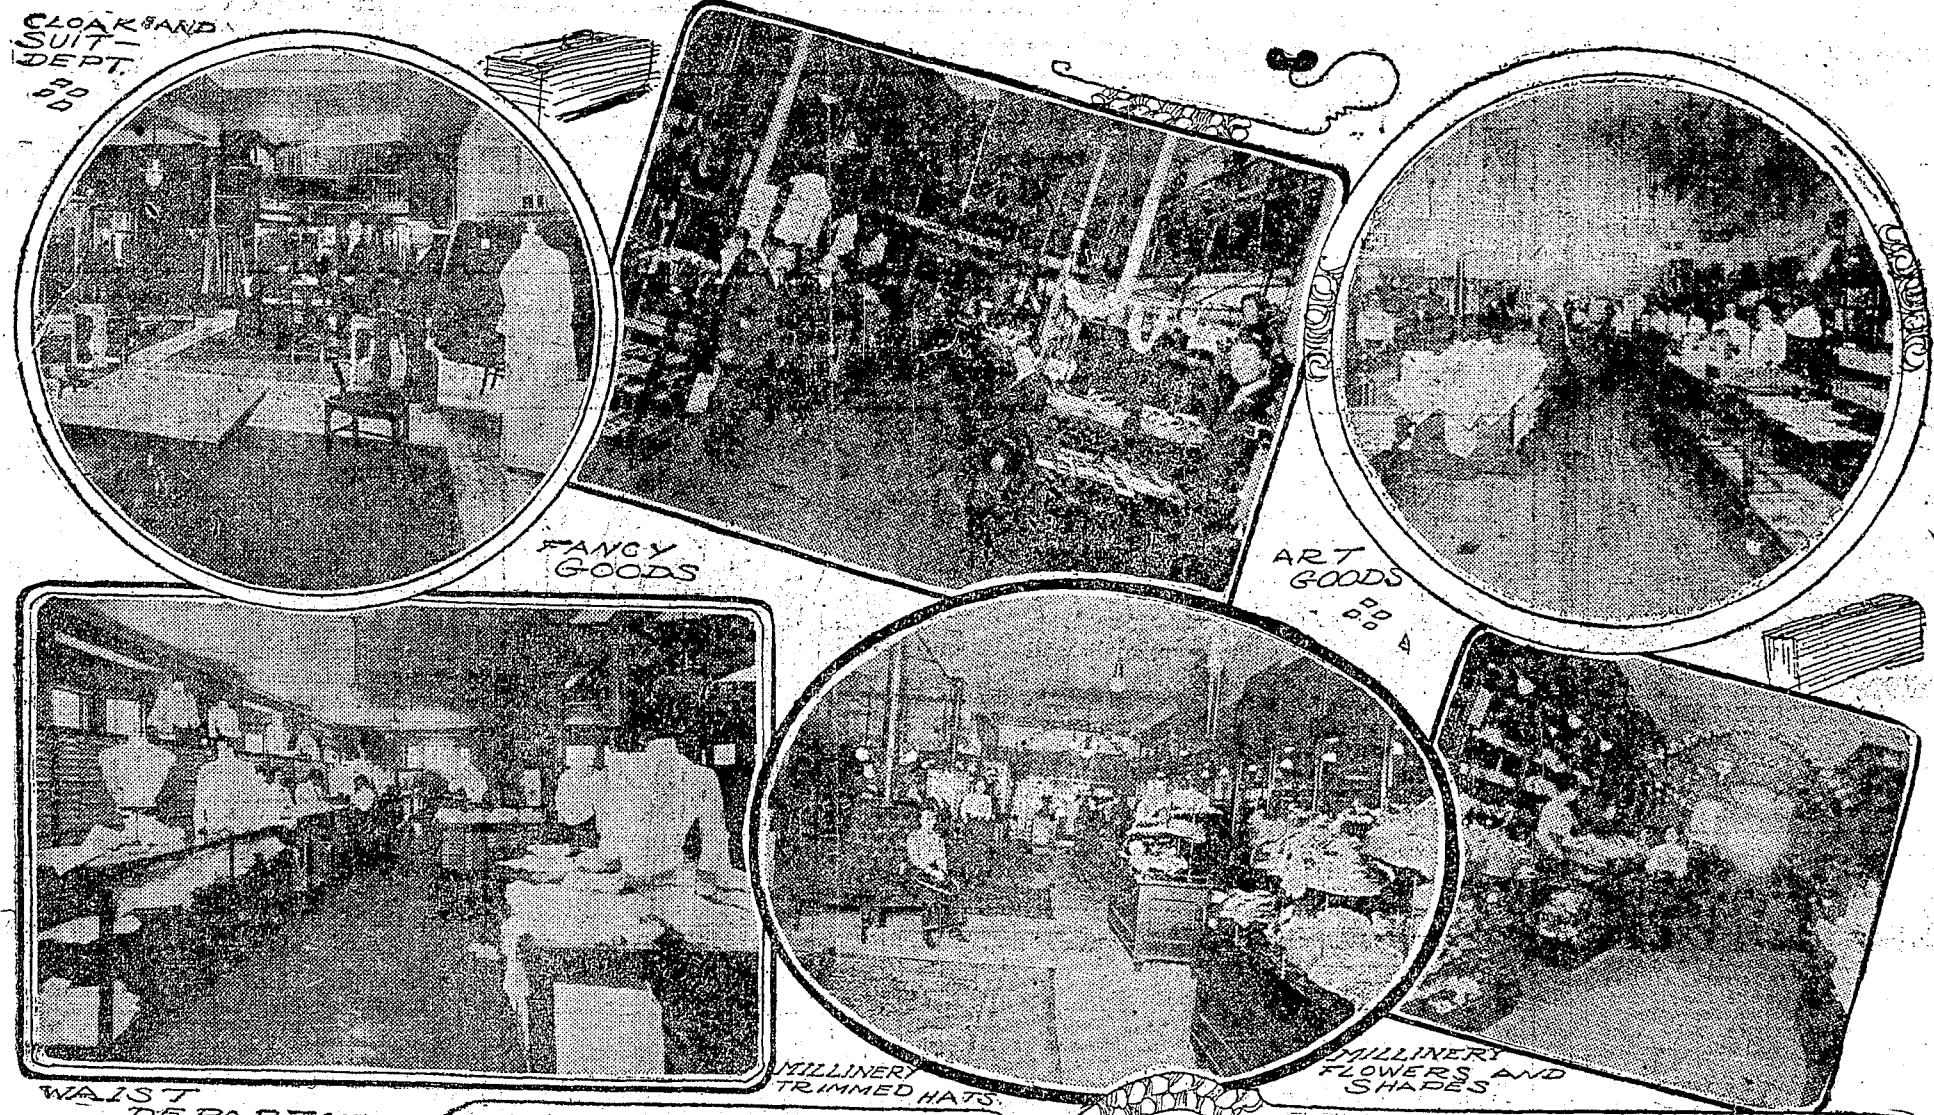

Edward Brown, steward of the steam schooner Tallac, now anchored off Long wharf, was arrested yesterday on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon, preferred by P. F. Fenderson, a member of the crew. Brown is represented by Attorney Clarence Wilson.

He was arraigned before Judge George Samuel yesterday and his case set for August 9. Fenderson declares that Brown threw boiling water over him and chased him with a large meat cleaver.

'COLUSA' TO BE NAME OF SACRAMENTO BOAT

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—"Colusa" will be the name of the new Sacramento Transportation Company's craft of a 500-ton capacity, being built for operation on the upper Sacramento River. Major P. J. Harney, of the company, says it is probable that the Colusa will be ready for business by the middle of August. The craft will be of a capacity about 160 tons greater than the Valletta, owned by the Farmers' Transportation Company, which now is the largest craft making regular trips up the Sacramento River.

Scene in various departments of Kahn Bros.' Store, one of the largest mercantile establishments in the State of California. By enterprise and up-to-the-minute methods, the firm has built up an immense and steadily increasing business. A patron once secured is never lost for the first rule of the firm is to guarantee its customers complete satisfaction as to prices and quality of goods sold.

which the city boasts, he has a gauge to measure the prosperity of the city, the amount of business transacted in other channels here. And that is why, when the visitor to the city sees such an up-to-date establishment as that of Kahn Brothers he can rest assured of the solvency of the city's business in widely separated lines of industry.

GROWTH OF YEARS.

Here in our city's midst is a store established more than thirty years ago, which has been steadily growing until now it ranks as one of the best in the city and on the coast. Nor are its proprietors satisfied with what has been accomplished in the past, but are continually keeping up with the times; in fact, are going just a little bit ahead of them, and making plans for the future which will make the establishment second to none. In this splendid example of a mercantile establishment, which has grown up here in Oakland, is to be found exemplified all that is best in business enterprise. Here every effort has been made to make the display attractive, and to house this display in quarters in keeping with the display. This factor has led to the preparation of plans for the beautiful new arcade building which the firm is to build on land extending through from San Pablo avenue to Broadway at Fifteenth street, and which will be one of the most novel and attractive stores in the West. Nor has the more direct phase of advertising been neglected; for the proprietors of this store have made use of the medium of the daily papers in the most energetic and enterprising manner, devoting large space to the description of their goods on sale in such an attractive way.

that with them, as with many other energetic concerns, advertising has become a feature of tremendous power in a store's transactions.

SUNDAY ADVERTISING.

This is especially the case as a result of the Sunday advertising, which, it is asserted by the merchants of enterprise, is one of the most effective methods of presenting to the buying public the merits of the merchandise to be sold.

In these days, when the Sunday newspaper has become the literature for the day of relaxation, there is scarcely an individual in the country who is not reached through these papers' columns. The latest evidence of Kahn Brothers' enterprise, which they have been presenting to the public, is what they have designated their Department Managers' Sale, which has in the last few years become an annual feature during the month of July, and which has this year been more successful than ever.

Inaugurated for the purpose of providing room for the arrival of the latest fall merchandise which the various buyers of the firm are now securing in the East, the sales have become so popular that this year thus far the receipts from the sale have been larger than ever before.

This is in spite of the fact that many people have talked of a certain inactivity in the business world, which this report more than anything else should help to discredit. And it is to the attractive character of the goods shown, and the attractive presentation of their attractions to the public, that the success of the sale is attributed.

ARRANGING A SALE.

As descriptive of the way in which these sales planned, E. Schwarzbach, general manager of the store, who has been with the firm for nearly half a century, and under whose direct supervision each of the departments is conducted, said: "I call together the various department managers as early as April or May of each year, and we then hold a consultation to determine what proportions of the store's stock shall be greatly reduced. We select attractive things, for people will not come if you offer only merchandise which is not altogether desirable. Because of the fact that we have these sales every year, and for an entire month, and because, as I say, the things offered are attractive, seasonable, we have found that our July sales are among the largest of the whole year.

"This is really more important than it sounds, for July is usually considered a dull month, coming between the things of Spring and those yet to come in the fall. As a result, we start out each fall season anew, with plenty of room on our shelves for the very latest and best things, which just at this particular time are being arranged for an New York and the East."

SCENE OF ACTIVITY.

During these sales each department of the store is represented, presenting a picture of hustle in every aspect of the enterprise. As to these departments, they number in all more than a dozen main ones. They include the Cloak and Suit department, under the management of Sidney S. Kahn, nephew of the original members of the firm, who is at the present time in the country's metropolis securing the latest things in wearing apparel for ladies; the Dress Goods department, managed by D. Magee; the Hosiery and Underwear, under the management of R. O'Donnell; Notions and Fancy Goods, S. Greenberg; Art Goods, M. Block; Muslin Underwear, Miss May Doherty; Men's Furnishing Goods, Albert Levene; Curtains and Draperies, James Field; Shoes, J. Ostreicher, and the Millinery department. Still other departments are to be added in the near future, both before and after the removal into the company's new building. In all of these departments the keynote is quality both in merchandise and service, reinforced by enterprise and the proper amount of publicity, which makes manifest even to the most casual observer the merit of the establishment, which reflects credit not only on itself, but on the city of which it is such an attractive and valuable accessory.

MANY OFFERINGS.

The statement of the capable manager of the store that in these sales the things reduced in price to make a "bargain holiday" are of the most seasonable description is certainly borne out to any one who studies the shop windows of the store. There are to be seen all the latest and most attractive things in dress materials. The majority of them are of summer weights, but have been so greatly reduced in price, so the managers of the store declare, that the buyer can get even the most expensive fabrics for very low prices.

On the other hand, however, there are many things which are offered that are always seasonable, whether winter or summer, such as household goods, fancy work, notions, and things of that sort which are used regardless of style. And while it is yet very early for the display of Fall things, still some of them are making their appearance. The Department Managers' Sale, however, must be gotten out of the way, with the consequent lightening of the weight of the shelves, before these new things can be shown to the public. As the sale ends with the thirty-first day of July, however, and so much of the regular stock has already been disposed of, it will be only a short time after the first of August before the eager shopper will have shown for his approval some of the most attractive of new things.

SHOPPER SATISFIED.

Naturally, it is a satisfaction to the shopper to know in advance what the styles for the coming season will be. This is not always a simple matter to find out, for the fashion experts are always chary of having their sartorial secrets become known before they are ready to tell them themselves. The best guides to coming modes so early in the year are the milliners' and dress makers' displays already being made in some of the Eastern centers, for nowadays American fashions are self-dependent, no longer relying on the designs of Parisian modistes where they are not in harmony with American tastes and physical characteristics. The chief announcement of the season thus far is that there is to be no marked change in the gowns worn. As was expected, the extreme design of the Harem skirt is a thing of the freakish past, effectually dead and buried. No similar fad in fashion has as yet made its appearance this year, and it is the opinion of the experts in models for Americans that such things never will be taken up here. This is especially the case in this part of the country, say the local merchants, for here they do not cater to extremes of any sort. Local merchants seem proud of the good tastes displayed in the West, and in a like manner the patrons of the stores have cause to feel proud of the merchants who do not attempt to induce them to accept things not in the best of taste. This is as true of the merchants of Oakland as of any other city on the Coast, and it is to merchants such as Kahn Brothers, with their enterprise, up-to-date-ness and good taste that the people of the city owe a debt of gratitude which they seemingly have not been slow to recognize by the support which they have given the establishment since its inception, making it rank now as a store second to none in quality of the many on the Pacific Coast.

ANTI-AGRARIANS STEEPED IN ROW

Split in House Bund Latest in Politics in Germany.

BERLIN, July 22.—A split in the House Bund is the latest event in the internal politics of Germany. This is a great organization formed about two years ago for augmenting the influence of the commercial classes over legislation and for combating the agrarian movement.

It now consists of about 250,000 individuals, besides some 750 commercial and industrial organizations of various kinds. Thus the total membership of the bund, direct and indirect, is considerably above 1,000,000; and it is therefore by far the largest private organization of any sort in Germany. In June the bund held its annual convention at Berlin; and, in view of the near approach of Reichstag elections, the speeches took on a very aggressive character against the agrarians and the parties supporting them. The president of the organization announced a policy which means protection of the bund prefers to see a Socialist elected rather than an agrarian.

His attitude has given great offense to the Central Association of German Manufacturers, the national organization of the largest manufacturers of the empire. This body has just announced its withdrawal from the bund because of the vigorous attitude adopted against the agrarians at the convention. The association explains its action by alleging that the course adopted by the bund endangers the protective policy, which is supported by a tacit alliance between the manufacturers and the large land owners. The secession of the association does not mean that all the manufacturers of the country will desert the bund; and on the other hand, many of the organizations of the smaller and medium-sized manufacturing establishments have vowed their support of a vigorous attack upon the agrarian and the conservative parties.

In some quarters it is believed that the defection of the association will help the bund, since it will enable it to put forth more energy in its struggle with the agrarians. It is also believed that it will tend to draw the lines more clearly between the supporters of the present tariff policy of the empire and those who prefer a more moderate form of protection.

ENGLAND WILL TRY TO RAISE TOBACCO

NEW YORK, July 22.—Great Britain will not rely wholly on the decision of the United States Supreme Court to re-establish competition in tobacco. Under the Lloyd-George budget she has $6,000,000 to spend on improving agriculture, and a part of it has been set aside to determine if tobacco can be raised in England and Scotland. The expert who has tobacco in charge, A. V. Campbell, arrived here today on the German ship with letters of introduction to Secretary Wilson from the department of agriculture, which he will present through Ambassador Bryce.

NEVADA BANKS FOUND IN STRONG CONDITION

CARSON CITY, July 22.—The Nevada Banking Board has adjourned after a session of several days and its report is that it has found all the banks of the State in good condition. Bank Examiner Howell made a lengthy report and states that he had found all the banks in a healthy condition. He further informed the banking board that he had decided to try and secure a hearing of the case in which a portion of the banking law was declared unconstitutional.

New Lines Being Pushed Rapidly to Completion in Canada.

200,000,000 BUSHELS

Tracks Seem to Spring Out of the Ground Like Magic.

WINNIPEG, Canada, July 22.—In order to handle the enormous 200,000,000-bushel wheat crop this year the three big Canadian railway systems are pushing the work of new construction in the western provinces, 356 miles of new lines having just been inspected by the Dominion Railway Commission, and placed in service. Two thousand miles will be added to the total this year.

In addition to the work in the prairie provinces, new tracks are being rapidly constructed in British Columbia. The Canadian Northern has lessened its gap between ocean and ocean to 250 miles by letting the contract for the construction of 100 miles between Hope northward to Kamloops. A force of 7000 men is expected to be at work on this section within a short time and the task must be completed within two years. Construction work is nearing completion on the line from Port Mann on the Pacific coast, to Hope. The eastern end of the road is at Yellow Head Pass on the boundary between Alberta and British Columbia. From Kamloops northeast to Yellow Head there are 250 miles of mountain to crawl around, cut through or tunnel under.

RIVER COUNTRY.

The 160 miles between Hope and Kamloops run through the canyons of the Fraser and South Thompson rivers. It is the most difficult part of the transcontinental road, and the most beautiful. The road from Yellow Head east to Edmonton is not yet in position to handle regular traffic. Work upon this section is being hurried as fast as possible, but there are several large bridges to be built, including those across the Pembina and McLeod rivers. It is possible that this section will not be ready to handle much freight traffic until next year.

In the prairie provinces railroad tracks seem to be springing out of the ground like magic. The year will see nearly 2000 miles of new road built. More than 1000 miles have been constructed or are under construction in Saskatchewan alone.

GREAT DEVELOPMENT.

This province is in the throes of the greatest railway development any section of the world has ever seen. The Canadian Northern is building 320 miles, the Grand Trunk Pacific is building 340 miles, and the Canadian Pacific is at work on 345 miles of new track. Most of this mileage consist of branch lines or extensions into the newly settled wheat districts.

By the end of the year Saskatchewan will have 4752 miles of track. This is more than half the mileage of the state of New York, and more than the state of Washington or North Dakota or South Dakota. The new lines are distributed among the three lines, as follows:

Canadian Pacific.—From Outlook, northwest, 50 miles; Craven to Colonsay, 65 miles; Weyburn to Lethbridge, 20 miles; Estevan to Forward, 35 miles; Regina to Bulyea, 10 miles; Lander extension, 20 miles; second track from Moose Jaw to Pasqua, 7 miles; second track from Moose Jaw to Caron, 18 miles; Moose Jaw southwest, 35 miles; Swift Current southeast, 45 miles; Swift Current northwest, 35 miles.

Grand Trunk Pacific.—Melville to Regina, 70 miles; Battleford to Biggar, 50 miles; Regina to boundary line United States, 50 miles; Regina to Moose Jaw, 40 miles; Young to Prince Albert, 50 miles.

WORK IS PUSHED.

East of Winnipeg new railroad work is being pushed. Sir William Mackenzie recently made public announcement that all sections of the Canadian Northern under construction have been financed and that contracts would soon be awarded for all uncompleted sections. The contract for the construction of 550 miles from Port Arthur to Selkirk Junction will be let in a short time. The preliminary estimates of the 1911

FAMOUS IN A DAY FOR THE BEAUTY OF HER HANDS AND ARMS

A Free Prescription That Does Its Work Over Night—You Can Prepare It at Your Own Home.

"It's my own discovery, and it takes just one night to get the marvelous results," answers Miss Grace Euston, when her friends ask her about the marvelous change in the appearance of her hands and arms. "You can do the same thing if you will take my advice," she says. "I feel it my duty to tell every woman what this wonderful prescription is for. Just think of it, it did all this in a night. It affords me a world of pleasure to tell anyone else how such remarkable results were brought about. I give you absolutely free, the identical prescription which has removed every defect from my hands and arms. You can prepare it at home, in five minutes, and it costs nothing. I have an empty two-ounce bottle and also a one-ounce bottle of Kulus Compound. Fill the entire bottle of Kulus into the two-ounce bottle, add quarter ounce of witch hazel and fill with water. Mix this thoroughly and you have the prescription. Apply the entire mixture to the hands and arms. It makes the skin transparent, removing all discolorations, such as tan, sun spots, freckles and coarse pores, roughness and wrinkles, and in fact every blemish the hands and arms are fair to. It also produces a marvelous effect on the neck and shoulders. If the neck is discolored from being exposed to the sun or wearing high collars, the prescription will immediately relieve that condition. No matter how rough and ungainly the hands and arms or what abuses they have had through hard work and exposure to sun and wind, this prescription will work a wonderful transformation in twelve hours or the next day. Thousands of women are using this prescription with just the same results that I have had."

ALASKAN STIRS UP LIVELY ROW AT WASHINGTON

JAMES WICKERSHAM, delegate to Congress from Alaska, who seeks the official scalp of Attorney General George Wickersham.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—James Wickersham, the delegate from Alaska, has stirred up a lively fuss before the House committee on justice by accusing Attorney General George Wickersham of holding up evidence in a coal fraud. It is said that Wickersham of Alaska is seeking the official blood of the Attorney General and has offered to the judiciary committee an affidavit concerning a criminal act said to have been committed by G. H. Jarvis, who committed suicide recently.

Wickersham says that a year ago he gave the Attorney General proof that Jarvis and others defrauded the government out of $50,000 on a coal contract, but the charge was ignored.

WEDDING FOLLOWS EARLY ROMANCE

Mrs. Lily Sewell of This City and Albert Hoogs of New York Marry.

A romance which had its inception in childhood days came to fruition yesterday, when Judge W. T. Harris of the Superior Court united in marriage Mrs. Lily Sewell of Brighton and Greenwood avenues and Albert Hoogs, a prominent theatrical manager of New York. Both were of San Francisco before the fire, having grown up in San Francisco and with the old-fashioned "school days together" as their lot in childhood. While still in their teens the families of each expected a marriage, but fate intervened and Hoogs assumed the management of important theatrical interests in New York, while the maiden married another. She became the wife of Amos Sewell, one of the best known insurance men on the coast. Sewell died two years ago.

After a quiet honeymoon trip to the south Mr. Hoogs will return to New York to arrange his business affairs and will eventually make his home in Oakland.

ORDER REMITS SENTENCE.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—An order issued by the War Department at Washington, D. C., remits a sentence imposed upon First Lieutenant Frank T. McNamara, Sixth cavalry, at a general court-martial. The sentence which has been remitted ordered a reduction of ten files in the rank of Lieutenant McNamara.

ISLAND OF RUGEN IS SLIPPING INTO THE SEA

BERLIN, July 22.—The important island of Rugen, in the Baltic sea, which has belonged to Prussia since 1815, is being so rapidly worn away by the action of the sea that Prussia has had to assert her rights of eminent domain and take measures to prevent the island from being gradually washed into the sea.

Large sums have been spent by the state in planting trees along the coast and in getting the dunes sowed with panic grass. These parts of the coast most seriously threatened have been protected by stone walls. Until recently it frequently happened that after a storm the coast line would be found to have retreated in places as much as 150 feet. This work of the state does not affect the private ownership of the dunes and beaches.

Though planted by the state, the trees become the property of the private land owners and may later be cut down with the consent of the state forestry department; but in this case other trees must be set out by the land owner.

LIMA BEAN CROP WILL BRING FIVE MILLIONS

LOS ANGELES, July 22.—Estimates today place the value of the lima bean crop this year at $5,000,000, thus putting this crop among the chief products of the state. The citrus crop is valued at almost $30,000,000, and the best sugar crop at $12,000,000, which makes the lima bean crop third in line of value.

PLAN INTERVENTION TO END CONTEST

Conference of Powers May Be Called for Albanian Situation.

VIENNA, July 22.—That European intervention is being considered in Albania is certain. Whether or not the interchange of notes now going on between the chancelleries will result in early action time alone will show. Probably the request of Montenegro that a conference of the powers should be called to bring peace to European Turkey will be granted.

Turkey seems utterly unable to induce the Albanian rebels to lay down their arms.

"Details of the negotiations in Podgoritz have reached Vienna from Salonica. The Ottoman ambassador in Cetinje, Sadreddine Bey, invited sixty leaders of the various Albanian tribes to visit him on his arrival in Podgoritz. He then made a conciliatory speech, mentioning the principal points in the proclamation. The leaders of the Albanian tribes listened to the ambassador's utterances with the greatest attention, and then requested him to give them a written statement that they could use as a basis for negotiations with their tribes."

It is stated that the leaders of the Klementi, Kastati and Kuli Choti tribes refused to accept the conditions offered by the Turkish government, and signified their resolve to continue the combat until the program of reform was made known in all its details, and guarantees were given that it should be carried through in its entirety. The leaders of these tribes said that they had no longer the same confidence in promises made by the Ottoman government.

MAJOR CLOMAN Is No Dude When It Comes to Action

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—Do you indulge in roulette? Are you inclined to buck the tiger? Well, San Francisco is the place for you, and you can get any kind of a game you want.

Now you wouldn't say that gambling is wide open—at least, not in the old sense, when places where women rolled rondo and where everything from faro to chuck-a-luck and the case game were open to the street. But the gambling is going on and the stranger can find an illegal game if he wants it.

All you have to do is to ask the guide at the hotel—the guide or anybody about the hotel who is wise. You can thus be properly introduced and play your head off. Of course the profits of the gamblers are enormous.

A First-Class Fighting Man

"I see you had Major Sidney A. Cloman—'Kid' Cloman of the army—as a sort of dude in your columns of last week," said a Bohemian Club friend the other day. "Well, if you sized him up that way you got off wrong. To be sure, he's recently come from a four-year service as military attache of our embassy at the court of St. James, but he's no more a dude, now than he was when he was in command of the University Cadets at Berkeley.

"He got the boys so fond of him that it became unpopular to 'cut' drill, and I recall an incident of how they learned and loved to follow him. It was in the days before the San Francisco police learned to control the crowds, and paraders were always interfered with. So, when the University Cadets were ordered to parade in this city Cloman just put his best football huskies on the ends of the fours and any other place where they were apt to get in contact with the crowds.

Then They Came Right Through

"Well, out on Van Ness avenue the parade was about to be dismissed. A lot of militia companies were lined up along the avenue, company front. The cadets came marching along in front of them. This was fancied as an insult; and some fresh commander swung a couple of companies right out across the avenue between Cloman, then a lieutenant and his cadets. Here was a dilemma. The way was blocked.

"Up galloped a subordinate, saluted and said: 'They have swung their companies right across our line of march, sir!'

"Well, Cloman never turned his head, but rode right on, saying softly:

"Tell them to come through!"

"In about a minute the air was full of militia heroes, their guns and accoutrements. Those football rushers didn't want any better fun than bucking those militia lines. Old General Shafter, on the reviewing stand, saw the whole thing and said:

"You'll hear of that young officer some day!"

The Ducks and the Moros

"And sure enough we did begin to hear of Cloman in the Philippines. He captured an outlaw band single-handed, with the same grit with which he had ridden into the hostile Indian camp after the murderer of Lieutenant Casey in the troubles on the Big Horn.

"Then he was in charge of the rations at Manila. The rations provided for beef, but there was no beef. The country was alive with ducks, but government red tape wouldn't permit the issuing of ducks as part of the ration. Cloman saw that the men must have fresh meat, so he bought ducks and issued them as beef, cutting all the red tape at one swipe.

"Next he was down in the Sulus as governor and commandant at Bongoa. One day some of the fanatical Moros rushed his men when they were in swimming and bolooed a number of them. Cloman had all the offenders rounded up. Then he sent them out to chop wood as prisoners under guard of the men they had rushed. A few shots were heard and no prisoners came back. And there was no more bolooing of Cloman's men as long as he was in command.

"No, sir; there's no dude about that chap. He's what Kipling so graphically called 'a first-class fightin' man.'"

Says It Was All Bunk

"Hullo, Doc! Where you from?"

So shouted and asked a friend of "Doc" William H. Leahy, the manager and impresario.

"Back from London and the coronation," was the reply.

"How was it—great?"

"Great nothing. Say, that coronation show wasn't as good as our Portola celebration. Do you know there wasn't a single illumination as good as that of the Palace Hotel for the N. E. A.

"The fact is, it was a disappointment all around.

THE KNAVE

SAN FRANCISCANS Can Have Choice Of Gambling Games

The prices for sight-seeing places and for everything else were boosted so high that people kept away, and the crowds were small. This made small business for everybody. There was general grumbling, and the pageant was generally considered a fizzle. We could put up a far better show if we had a coronation right here in little old San Francisco.

Something for a Literary Controversy

Harry Leon Wilson has been visiting in San Francisco and having his teeth fixed up. He is the man who succeeded Bunner as the editor of "Puck" and who has to his credit many successful novels and plays headed by "The Spenders."

Now when a man of that caliber gives a startling literary dictum it is sure to cause comment—and what do you think of this, written in Arnold Bennett's "The Old Wives' Tale," a copy of which he inscribed for Ned Hamilton:

"The greatest novel written in English up to date."

That ought to start the people with opinions from those brought up on the idea that "Henry Esmond" is the greatest English novel to those who hold out for The Duchess, or Augusta Evans Wilson. An old-fashioned symposium on that subject would be entertaining.

The Flowers That Will Not Bloom in the Spring, Tra-la

Up from the Family Farm at Portola—where, by the way, they produced last Saturday night the finest forest play yet done; a splendid picture by George Sterling—comes a merry tale of cross purposes.

Tenting in peace and harmony at the Farm are Dr. Alexander Garceau and Dan Hanlon. Their tent is one of the most comfortable on the place, and they are both very proud of it. But at times, all in merriment, however, they have differences as to decorations and camp regulations.

Hanlon thought there should be some climbing vines, so he bought and planted some rare bulbs. Garceau said the vines would draw mosquitoes. So, in the night he dug up the bulbs, but he let Hanlon go on watering carefully the places where the bulbs had been. Dan wondered and wondered why no shoots showed from his bulbs.

Then Garceau relented and said that though Hanlon's bulbs were not just the thing, he would get some other bulbs. He did so and planted them on the quiet. But some one told Hanlon. So he went by night and dug up Garceau's bulbs—and has left Garceau to this day watering the places where they were planted and wondering why no shoots showed above the soil.

Is He Turning in His Grave?

The First Unitarian Church is arranging to set up a tablet in bronze to commemorate the long and self-sacrificing services of the Rev. Horatio Stebbins, one of the ablest and most picturesque ministers we ever had in this city. He succeeded the Rev. Thomas Starr King and though he played a less heroic part than that great patriot, was a pulpit orator of splendid ability and a pastor loved and esteemed.

But though of the so-called "liberal faith," the Rev. Dr. Stebbins was anything but liberal. He was a Unitarian of Unitarians, and was not slow to take issue with any other creed. He had no use whatever for the evangelicals and particularly was he opposed to the manners and methods of the Methodists.

So the other day when I passed the site of the old Stebbins home at Clay and Larkin streets, and there saw a church building being erected, and saw the sign, "First Methodist Church," I wondered if the Rev. Horatio Stebbins might not be turning uneasily in his far New England grave.

Fish and Game Commission

The publication by the press of Sacramento that Governor Johnson will appoint Frank Newbert of that city to the Fish and Game Commission as successor to David Starr Jordan, who sent his resignation to the Governor some time ago, has again called attention to this department in which all devotees of rod and gun are so much interested.

When last in general public notice a legislative committee was engaged in investigating the commission, and particularly M. J. Connell, the member from Los Angeles. At this inquiry Fred G. Sanborn of this city, and newly appointed by the Governor as president of the commission, was specially active as prosecutor.

The principle allegation against Connell was that he had encouraged the guardian of a State preserve or feeding ground to shoot ducks over upon a private preserve maintained by some wealthy citizens of Los Angeles, and of which club Connell was a member and officer.

It was also charged that one day as Assemblyman Preisker of meadow lark fame was taking a short cut across this private preserve to "cry an auction" he was stopped by a shotgun in the hands of a keeper and only permitted to continue on his way on the declaration of his high office in the State. That Commissioner Connell had displayed a weakness for expensive carpets and handsome furniture in the office of the southern division of the commission maintained at Los Angeles was asserted and not seriously denied by Connell.

The purpose of this inquiry was admitted at the time to be the lifting of Connell's official scalp. But the Commissioner from the southland seems to have many friends and what is sometimes termed a "pull" for the hirsute growth still remains on his caput and with growth undiminished. So many letters have been sent to the Governor that the Chief Executive is said to hesitate about removing Connell, notwithstanding the legislative inquiry and its purpose.

Sanborn May Resign

Now it is told in fish and game circles that President Sanborn of the commission has threatened to resign if Connell is not retired. The reason for this attitude on the part of Sanborn is said to be the possibility of Connell and Newbert, when the latter shall have assumed office, forming a coalition that will reduce Sanborn from first to third place in the conduct of the affairs of the commission. It is reported that Connell will be inducted into office about August 1st, and following that date some changes in the line of appointments are expected to take place.

An appointment under the board, and which has been much sought, is that of attorney, now held by Hartley Peart. Charles H. Forbes, former secretary of the Republican County Committee, was believed to be in line for this billet, but Peart is tenacious and is said to owe his continuance in the berth to the fact that he has before the courts certain litigation for the board with which he is especially familiar. It is told that should Peart be retired from the attorneyship he would have to be retained as special counsel to carry the proceedings to a conclusion and his fees would be larger than his present salary. At any rate this is the reason assigned for his retention. There is no doubt, however, that he will be thrown out, as it is pointed out that he is George Hatton's man. That settles it. Peart is a young lawyer, with no pull. Hatton got him the job he now holds and Peart's desk is in Hatton's office. Secretary Babcock is also sure to go. Many sportsmen think he has made a complete failure as secretary and want Vogelsang returned to his old position. Babcock wants to hold the job, but it looks as though he was doomed to be retired. Sportsmen in general will welcome Vogelsang back in his old position.

Allegations that San Francisco bay is being improperly and ineffectually patrolled and that undersized crab and other fish are being openly served in restaurants of this city are a few of the complaints that are being made in relation to the present conduct of the affairs of the commission.

Pessimists and Fair Site

The selection of a site for the Panama-Pacific Exposition continues to occupy the spotlight of public interest. There are pessimists who claim to believe that the choice of the directors of the exposition corporation will not be made known until after the primary election, September 26th. Others take even a less hopeful view, deferring the selection of a site until after the general election on November 7th.

But in the environment of the exposition headquarters the opinion is expressed that definite action will be had as soon as a sufficient number of the absentee directors shall have returned to permit of a full expression by ballot. Of those who have not yet voted on the question, William H. Crocker and Homer S. King are reported to favor the Harbor View proposition. Henry T. Scott, who heretofore has voted for the Sutro-Merced site, is also expected to come into line for Harbor View in the finals. Dent H. Robert, who has been confined to a hospital by illness, is classed by the gossips as a Harbor View advocate. These added to the eleven already on record for the bay shore site would give that proposition fifteen of the sixteen votes essential to it being chosen.

It is said that James Rolph Jr., candidate for Mayor, who was committed to the Merced site by his home section, the Mission, stands ready to aid whichever combination secures fifteen votes for any site proposition. Other headquarters gossip has it that Thornwell Mullally, who favors the Golden Gate Park, is paired with Crocker during the latter's absence. Judge Curtis Lindley, who was appointed to succeed W. B. Bourn, is reputed to favor Golden Gate Park, but will not vote, as he has not been a member sufficiently long to have heard the reports and other evidence given in relation to the various sites. Judge Lindley was placed on the board of directors as the representative of Governor Johnson and the State commission appointed by the latter. As yet this State commission has been unable to come to a working agreement with the directors of the exposition corporation and Judge Lindley is expected to arrange for harmonious and concerted action by the two bodies. Judge Lindley is said to personally favor the park site.

Another change in the board of directors is reported to be in progress. J. H. Crothers, nephew of R. H. Crothers, is expected to or has resigned in favor of his uncle. Young Crothers is now in Eureka, Humboldt county, where he has an option on a newspaper, in the business office of which he is now acquainting himself with the conditions of the publication subject to the terms of the option. The elder Crothers is reported to favor Golden Gate Park personally, while his paper leans to Harbor View.

One incontrovertible view of the situation is, if the directors display as much energy in promoting the exposition after a site shall have been chosen as they have in their contentions over its selection the big fair will be a monumental success.

Hathorn Is a Joke

The District Attorney's fight is providing much public entertainment as well as being of great political interest and importance.

Ralph Hathorn, who was given the indorsement of the Republican County Committee for this office, has been seriously agitated by a rumor that he will not receive the indorsement of the Democratic County Committee. He has even threatened to withdraw from his single nomination should he not be given the Bourbon approval. This menace may secure for him a place on the Democratic ticket for the reason, as given by a facetious Bourbon, that "if there is but one man in San Francisco who cannot beat Fickert that man is Hathorn."

It was this same logical process that secured the Republican indorsement for Hathorn, Fickert's friends in the County Committee joining in his support, thus making the vote unanimous.

With two indorsements based on this complimentary argument Hathorn's pathway to defeat is certainly strewn with political roses and fragrant exotic blooms to a degree seldom enjoyed by a candidate for office. On every side his canvass is greeted with chuckles.

There has been some talk of a "gentlemen's agreement" between Gavin McNab on the part of the Democrats to join in a fusion ticket and indorse Hathorn provided the Republicans indorsed Dodge for Assessor and Dr. Leland for Coroner. If such an agreement existed the Republican County Committee treated it in a very ungentlemanly manner, for they turned down Leland without even so much as an explanation. The "gentlemen's agreement" is said to have also extended to the making of a fusion Supervisors' ticket. In this relation the Republican committeemen exhibited even worse political breeding, for they did not even have the courtesy to abide by the ticket of candidates they themselves suggested as a basis of fusion, but proceeded to name some men especially objectionable to the Democrats and well known to be so.

Perfect fusion between Republicans and Democrats on a municipal ticket has gone glimmering. As the McNab Democrats have yet to meet and complete their ticket they would seem to have the advantage in that they may select the best material presented by all the other tickets and submit to the electors a non-partisan production that should unite all the most desirable features already in the field, with possible improvements of their own.

Candidates For Mayor.

The canvass of P. H. McCarthy for return to the Mayor's office is being most vigorously conducted. It is claimed by his political managers that he has fully 6000 volunteers in the field working with great enthusiasm in his behalf. The rolls of his various clubs, with which the city is dotted, show material increases in membership each week.

Mayor McCarthy's attitude in support of Golden Gate Park as the site for the Panama-Pacific Exposition is believed by his political associates to have very materially increased his strength with the electors. They predict that a failure of the exposition directors to adopt the park site would cause a veritable landslide to the incumbent Mayor.

The Rolph people appear to have become dissatisfied with the canvass being made for that candidate for Mayor by those dilettante statesmen who have christened themselves the Municipal Conference of 1911. Special headquarters have been opened for Rolph on Market street near Kearny, and from here his personal canvass will be conducted under the management of Homer Boushey, who, I am told, acted as secretary of the Oakland Chamber of Commerce for two months or less, and who has also been associated with the Portola Festival and the secretary's office of the Panama-Pacific Exposition Company.

A report gained circulation and credence that

THE KNAVE

Rolph would not make a speaking campaign, but would avoid public platforms. This is denied by those conducting his canvass, they saying that Rolph will rather seek than avoid the rostrum. His canvass, I am informed, will be much on the same lines as other efforts to attain the same end, and that from about August 15th Rolph will devote his whole time to meeting the electors with a view to securing their votes at the primary on September 26th.

The following figures showing the result of the municipal election in San Francisco in 1909 may be of interest at this, the opening of the campaign of 1911: McCarthy, Union Labor candidate, 29,456 votes; Leland, Democrat, 19,594 votes; Crocker, Republican, 13,766 votes; McDewitt, Socialist, 1418 votes. Total vote cast, 64,234.

Works and La Follette

Following the declaration by California's Junior Senator, John D. Works, in favor of President Taft, by supporting the latter's administration measure, Canadian reciprocity, many political associates of Works in California have come out in the open and now they, too, are declaring for Taft for re-election.

It was believed that the organization that started out under the name of Lincoln-Roosevelt League and after masquerading under several political aliases is now designated as progressive, would be for La Follette for President, as it was commonly reported that their leaders, including Governor Johnson and Senator Works, were for the Wisconsin Senator for the highest office in the land.

But Senator Works, in the language of the old prize ring, seems to have "landed on the slats" of the Wisconsin Senator and now other progressives are getting quite perky and declaring that they, too, are for Taft and never did favor La Follette.

A change of heart in another quarter is also reported. There is a story in circulation among local Progressives that Al McCabe, the Democratic private secretary of Governor Johnson, saw, or imagined he saw, an opportunity to advantage the Democrats by boosting for La Follette. The gossip continues that McCabe was "called down," and that in no uncertain terms, by the Governor himself, as a result of numerous complaints made by prominent Progressives throughout the State as to his course.

Local Progressives state that several counties in the State, and in which the Progressives are conceded to be in political control, already have lined up their organizations for Taft.

The men called Insurgents controlled the last State convention by a margin of about twenty-six votes, and this majority was only secured by the aid of San Francisco's delegation, which, if I recall correctly, numbered fifty-nine. The present indications are the San Francisco delegation to the State convention in 1912—whether its members be elected at a primary under a call of the Republican National Committee, or those delegates to the last State convention be called upon to again act in that body, under the new primary law—will be almost to a man for Taft for return to the Presidential chair.

Whatever may have been the state of the public or political mind in California six months ago there is now a groundswell on for Taft that is so broad and so deep that the name of La Follette is but as insignificant chip on the political undulation in progress at this time for President Taft.

SILVER DOLLAR TABOR IS WEARY OF WINDY CITY

MISS SILVER DOLLAR TABOR, who loves the free and boundless west.

DENVER, Col., July 22.—In her own expressive language, Silver Dollar Tabor "hands it to Chicago" in a liberal way. "I have lived in Chicago long enough to become thoroughly disgusted with that great city," said Miss Tabor, "and I long for the mining camps and home, for the free and boundless West." She says the miners are "on the square," while the Chicagoans have no conscience. White lights and joy rides have no charms for Silver Dollar Tabor. She prefers the simple pleasure of nature and the free, crisp air of the snow-capped peaks of Colorado. In Colorado, she says, only character counts and that in Chicago it has no value.

SCHOOL TEACHERS TRY EXPERIMENT

Seek to Advance Backward Pupils in Normal Way in Two Months.

NEW YORK, July 22.—Under the direction of three New York school teachers a unique experiment is being made of the summer school of the University of Pennsylvania. The three teachers, Miss Elizabeth Farrell, an inspector of ungraded classes, and Mrs. Margaret Pfeiffer of Brooklyn and Miss Elizabeth Walsh, both experts in ungraded class work, are conducting a class of fifteen backward children under the auspices of the department of psychology. These children, by proper training, they hope to have normally advanced within two months.

The experiment is being made as an object lesson to the public schools of the country. Nothing is being done for the children that could not be done under any public school system. The class is in session from 9 to 5 every day. During this time the children are taught the regular school subjects. In addition they are instructed in gymnastics, swimming, personal hygiene and painting in water colors. The girls are taught sewing and domestic science, including the setting of tables for meals, etc.

An hour of every day is spent in resting. The children lie out on the university campus on summer chairs. The university serves them with lunches, and the diet of each child is separately arranged. In order to answer the objections of educators that it would be impossible for one teacher to instruct a class of fifteen children in such a variety of subjects, Miss Farrell, Mrs. Pfeiffer and Miss Walsh will each take turns in conducting the class alone for several days at a time.

Robert W. Veach of the Elsie Teachers' Training School of New York is observing the methods of handling these children in order to instruct prospective missionaries.

MAY CONNECT CALWA WITH FRESNO BY RAIL

FRESNO, July 22.—A branch of the Fresno, Hanford & Summit Lake railroad to Calwa, on account of the presence there of the Santa Fe terminal, is being considered by the officials of the railroad company, who are now awaiting word from the Santa Fe people as to what they can do before making any definite arrangements.

If the branch is built to Calwa it is probable that the railroad will not extend below Selma. An engineer of the Hudson Counties Construction Company, who was in Fresno a few months ago, advised the local people that Kingsburg was not a suitable terminus for the line. Acting on his suggestion, steps were begun at once looking to the abandonment of what rights of way have been secured between Selma and Kingsburg and the securing of rights of way to Selma. The matter was taken up with the Santa Fe and word is expected from them.

Announcement was also made that a thirteen-mile route had been secured from Fowler to Hanford, along which work will begin soon securing rights of way.

PRESIDENT TAFT'S SMILE RADIATES GRATIFICATION

Chief Executive Will Sign the Canadian Reciprocity Measure Upon His Return To Washington, Wednesday

(BY RALPH M. WHITESIDE.)

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The Taft smile is luminous today. And with cause. By a vote of 53 to 27 the Senate passed the Canadian reciprocity bill just as it came from the House, and as soon as the Canadian parliament adopts the measure, reciprocity with Canada will be an accomplished fact. If Georgia had been fully represented in the Senate the measure would have received exactly two thirds of the voting strength of the body.

Here are the twenty-seven who voted in the minority: Republicans—Borah and Hayburn, Idaho; Bourne, Oregon; Bristow and Curtis, Kansas; Burham, New Hampshire; Oliver, Pennsylvania; Minnesota; Shire, Clapp and Nelson, Minnesota; Clark and Warren, Wyoming; Crawford and Gamble, South Dakota; Cummins and Kenyon, Iowa; Dixon, Montana; Gronna and McCumber, North Dakota; LaFollette, Wisconsin; Lippitt, Rhode Island; Lorimer, Illinois; Oliver, Pennsylvania; Page, Vermont; Smith, Michigan; Smoot, Utah. Democrats—Bailey, Texas; Clarke, Arkansas; Simmons, N. C. An analysis of the vote showed twenty-four republicans voted against the bill and twenty-one in favor of it.

The bill was passed in the midst of unusual scenes. Not a word passed in debate, discussion being precluded. The opponents of the measure persisted in doing what they could to block its enactment to the very last. Those members of the Old Guard who fought it believe it is but the first step to a general scaling down of tariff duties.

BIG POLITICS DOMINATES.

The insurgents opposed it in part for the reason, in part because of sentiment in the agricultural states and in part by reason of hostility to President Taft. The democrats generally supported the bill because they believe it points to low tariff duties and because they think it will divorce the farmers of the country from the republican party and thus split that party. Big politics has permeated the reciprocity situation from the moment the bill was conceived, and it has succeeded in splitting the republicans in Congress as nothing else has done for years.

News of the passage of the reciprocity bill was telephoned at once to the White House. President Taft made no attempt to conceal his pleasure. He was particularly glad that the bill had passed prior to his departure at 5:35 p. m. for a week-end visit to Beverly. He will be back in Washington on Tuesday morning.

President Taft had hoped to sign the agreement today before departing for Beverly. He would be able to do so were it not for the fact that the House held only a brief session today, and adjourned before the Senate voted.

Speaker Clark will, therefore, not be able to sign the agreement before Wednesday, and it will not be until Wednesday the president will affix his signature. It was learned here today that the friends of reciprocity in the parliament at Ottawa will keep the body in session day and night for the next week or ten days. The hope is to weed out the opposition. If it does not succeed, a general election will be held and an appeal taken to the country.

EPITOME OF FIGHT.

The fight for reciprocity, the supreme campaign of the present administration, had its inception at a conference sixteen months ago at Albany, N. Y., between President Taft and Canadian Minister of Finance Fleming, and since then it has been carried along by the two congresses fruitlessly through to the last, because it was becalmed in the Senate, and successfully in the recent extra session, convened by the president expressly for its ratification. More than two-thirds of the Senate supported the bill. The bill passed by the republican House last session was introduced by Representative McCall, of Massachusetts. The present measure was introduced by Democratic Leader Underwood, of the House, chairman of the tariff making Ways and Means committee.

With the reciprocity fight at an end, the attention of the Senate and House is now directed to the question of what will be done on other phases of the tariff. The wool bill will come up for a vote next Tuesday. In the meantime, the Senate democrats will caucus. The insurgents in the Senate will not support the House wool bill, at least they will not at this stage of the proceedings. And a share of the Senate democrats are balking at the LaFollette wool bill. The only factor in the situation that seems to tend strongly to compelling the insurgents, and democrats to get together is their common desire to have a bill "put up to the president."

The Revolution in England.

The British House of Lords will render submission to the House of Commons instead of compelling the Asquith-Lloyd George ministry to create 400 new peers to override the Lords, veto of the bill restricting the legislative powers of the house of peers. Hereafter the lords will have nothing to say about bills involving taxation, revenue and grants of money. The resistance of the peers virtually ended when the King gave them to understand that he would create any number of new peers that the commons asked for.

The passage of the Asquith-Lloyd-George bill will be the greatest constitutional change in England since the revolution of 1688, when the hereditary monarch, James II, was driven from the throne and William of Orange made King in his stead. At Runnymede King John was forced to concede a portion of the royal authority to the barons. Certain rights were also conceded to the commons in Magna Charta which embodied principles which have gradually developed into the system which has made the governing power of the English nation. From the peace of Runnymede dates the rise of constitutional monarchy in Great Britain.

In the second revolution, during the reign of Charles I, the commons asserted their rights to be the commanding legislative force in the kingdom. The assertion of this right was carried so far that the King was beheaded on a charge of committing treason against the realm of which he was the sovereign, and the commons ruled for a time without a King and without letting the lords have a share in the government. On the return of Charles II the lords were restored to their ancient prerogatives and the commons were usually subservient to the wishes of the King, although they thwarted and defied him on more than one occasion.

The third great constitutional change came when James II was expelled from the kingdom, deprived of his sovereignty and outlawed. Parliament not only changed the dynasty, but laid down the rule that the King reigned by the consent and with the authority of Parliament. William and Mary thus came to the throne as deputies of the people. They had the shadow of hereditary right, it is true, but they dispossessed the direct heir and the reigning sovereign. So the second expulsion of the Stuarts was accomplished by asserting the rule that the monarch governed solely by consent of the governed. His title was good only so long as his conduct pleased the people—his subjects were in reality his masters. During the reign of George III efforts were made with some temporary success to restore the ancient prerogatives of the crown, but the accession of George IV found the commons still more entrenched in power. Soon the sovereign ceased to rule and government was administered by a ministry primarily chosen by the house of commons.

Now another great step has been taken toward freeing the British government from the traditions of caste and the influence of hereditary privilege. The commons have asserted their right to curtail the powers and prerogatives of the house of peers, and in doing so have reduced that body to a dependent and subordinate position. That the peers will nominally consent to this degradation counts for nothing, seeing that they did so under compulsion. To use Lord Lansdowne's expression, "they drink hemlock to avoid execution." The Asquith bill does not abolish the House of Lords, but it excludes that body from participation in the more important functions of legislation. It asserts the superiority of the elective over the hereditary body and the power of the electorate to change the constitution without asking the consent of a body which represents nothing more than the accident of birth and the traditions of feudalism. It is the most momentous political change England has seen since the accession of William III, and marks the beginning of the end of interference by aristocratic privilege with the course of legislation. Of late years the lords have done little else than to obstruct and thwart Liberal majorities in the House of Commons, vetoing measures which displeased them and compelling the democratic body to dissolve parliament and appeal to the country at frequent intervals. In short, the lords have periodically exercised their powers and prerogatives to aid the partisan schemes of the Conservative or aristocratic party until the commons have turned to and stripped the lords of their power and prerogatives. The lords are left their tokens, gewgaws, robes and titles, but they have little else to boast of. A militant and exasperated democracy has beaten them into submission and tied their hands against further mischief.

Let us give due credit to Hon. John D. Works. He was the only one of the insurgent group, save Pointdexter of Washington, that voted for the reciprocity bill. Senator Works has been consistently in favor of the bill from the start, and did not permit himself to be seduced by La Follette, Bristow and Cummins to give his vote against a meritorious proposition which is endorsed by three out of four Californians. Senator Perkins, of course, voted for the bill, but it was to be expected that he would stand by the President and the wishes of his constituents, so there is no special occasion for rejoicing over his vote for reciprocity. But it is really gratifying to find Senator Works lined up on the right side.

During the excessively hot weather that recently prevailed in New York the ice dealers more than doubled their prices. It was naturally charged that the dealers were taking a merciless advantage of the extremities of the poor, that they were making human suffering an agency for extorting exorbitant profits from their customers. The ice dealers loudly denied the charges. They said prices had been raised because there was a shortage of ice, and that the supply would have been exhausted if an advance in prices had not checked consumption. It was not a convincing defense, of course, but it was a sort of defense till it came to be examined. Mayor Gaynor ordered the chief of police to investigate and make an immediate report to him. This was done and the report completely explodes the "short supply" defense set up by the ice dealers. There was plenty of ice on hand for all purposes when the prices were raised. Moreover, the report shows that the dealers acted in collusion in raising prices and then framed up the lie about the supply being short as an excuse for about as infamous a transaction as has occurred since paupers were skinned in Massachusetts that gloves might be made of their hides. When they had plenty of ice the dealers conspired to raise the price and in doing so adopted a method that the law declares to be criminal. Using the police to make such an investigation as the one ordered by Mayor Gaynor is a little irregular, but it was justified in this instance. It exposed a heartless and wicked conspiracy and convicted the conspirators of the lie they invented to excuse their inhuman conduct.

In Naples the Socialists started a riot because the priests denounced the sheath skirt as immodest if not indecent. Just why the Socialists should have been aggrieved by clerical disapproval of the sheath skirt does not appear. The connection between Socialism and the sheath skirt is not perceptible to the naked eye. But perhaps the Socialistic outbreak was merely an exhibition of pure cussedness and the sheath skirt only a pretext.

THE EYE OF A NEEDLE

—CLEVELAND PLAIN DEALER.

Use of and Necessity for Bank Reserves.

It is strange to hear men experienced in finance arguing that bank reserves are idle and unprofitable and serve no useful purpose than cannot be served in some other way, but such there are and they are not slow to express their views. However, none of them have ventured to suggest a way by which the money tied up in bank reserves can be released without destroying the security on which the banking system rests. They point to bank reserves as idle hoards of capital, but make no mention of the necessity for holding in reserve stocks of ready money to meet contingencies which may at any time arise.

Bank reserves are an insurance against panic and insolvency. Their compulsory maintenance is a safeguard against financial improvidence if not profligacy. The money, although lying in vaults, is as necessarily employed in conserving credit and the stability of the monetary system as the money actually in circulation. It is being put to a definite and essential use for which no substitute has yet been found. It is performing a function which must be performed if there is to be financial security and money kept in active circulation on standard terms.

One might as well say that the stock a merchant carries is idle and useless as to say that bank reserves are idle hoards. Every merchant carries a stock representing a large sum of money; he is selling continually, from this stock, but he is also constantly replenishing it, and hence always has a large amount of capital continuously invested in his business. This money is represented by unsold and unused goods. No matter how much he sells there is always in his hands a stock of unsold and unused goods. It is necessary in his business. This invested capital, lying idle from a superficial point of view, is in reality as actively employed as the money going back and forth across his counters.

Now the farmer who stores hay and grain to feed his stock in time of scarcity and weather stress has apparently so much capital lying idle, but the storage is a necessity. His stock of hay and grain serve for him the same purpose that a cash reserve does for the bank. It is in fact the farmer's bank reserve. It is an insurance against scarcity and future need; it makes him secure in the same sense that the reserve makes the bank secure.

Now money held as a bank reserve is entirely different from money laid away in a safe deposit or hid in an old sock. It is a visible and available supply. Money hoarded away privately is invisible and performs no function whatever. It is money withdrawn from circulation and concealed, and hence lessens the volume of circulating medium without being a visible evidence of reserve and security.

Banks deal in money and credits. The capital they employ is furnished mainly by depositors, and with that capital they back the credit of men engaged in commercial and industrial pursuits. They cannot get the deposits unless their own credit is good, and if they cannot get deposits they cannot finance merchants and manufacturers. Reserves are necessary to strengthen the credit of the banks and give security to the depositors. Hence they are backing the credit of the banks' customers, assisting to keep money in circulation and provide for the general needs of business. Their duty is analogous to that of the vaults and watchmen that protect bank deposits from burglars and thieves. But their most vital and necessary duty is to keep in plain view a certain proportion of the circulation medium under banking command.

The vote on the reciprocity bill in the Senate shows the same anomaly that was exhibited when the measure passed the House. In the Senate a Republican majority of 3 was cast against the bill, while all the Democrats but three voted for it. In the House all the Democrats save eleven voted aye, while the Republicans polled fourteen majority in the negative. So the chief measure presented to Congress by a Republican President has been passed in both houses primarily by Democratic votes. What the political consequences will be no one can at this moment foretell. In the House sixty-four Republicans voted for and seventy-eight against the bill. In the Senate twenty-one Republicans voted for and twenty-four against. This is a proof that the Republican camp is badly divided, and the outlook is not brightened by the fact that only a minority of his party stood with the President in either house.

THE SURER AND SANER COURSE

THE OAKLAND TRIBUNE calls attention to the conduct of the Dalton trial in Alameda county, which in a few weeks resulted in the conviction of one of the most popular citizens of Alameda county on a bribery charge. It is evident that the criminal procedure in American courts is not to be too hastily condemned, while admitting that there is much room for improvement. It depends a great deal upon the presiding judge and the prosecuting officers. THE TRIBUNE points out that in the Dalton case there was no hiring of detectives to trail witnesses and prospective jurors, that the regular prosecuting officers of Alameda county handled the case, and that Judge Brown, in his decisions, was absolutely impartial and did not, by leaning one way or the other, leave ample ground for appeal. Of course, THE TRIBUNE was drawing a comparison between the Dalton case and the graft prosecutions in San Francisco. While THE TRIBUNE was never friendly toward the latter, it is not to be denied that a surer and saner course was adopted in the Dalton trial by District Attorney Donahue and his deputies—Visalia Times.

Twenty Years Ago Today

There was placed on record yesterday a contract wherein Rev. Father, McSwaney contracts with the Remillard Brick Company to do the brick work on the new Catholic church, corner Hobart and Grove streets, for $39,995.

P. H. McGrew had tears in his eyes when he came into the city clerk's office today. A short time ago he bought a lot on Sixteenth avenue for $310 and he has just been assessed $500 for street work in front of it. He says that he will make the contracting company a present of the lot.

Among the Oaklanders who are leaving on their summer vacations are the following: Miss Kate Martin, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Frost, Mrs. E. E. Leighton, Mr. and Mrs. David Hewes and Miss Jennie Stadford.

Superintendent Joseph Sanders of the Home for the Adult Blind, has arranged for increasing the work done by the inmates at the institution, particularly in the canning department.

Several Oakland men, among them N. W. Spaulding, Counselman J. E. Johnston and J. L. Hatch, are negotiating for a tract of land eighteen miles from San Jose, known as Madrone, for the purpose of making a great summer resort there.

"Miramar," the beautiful home in Alameda of Mrs. Hays, widow of Colonel Jack Hays, the Texas ranger, was offered at auction this afternoon. The highest bid was $19,760, and the owner refused to sell the property for this price, and withdrew it.

BARBARISM AND MARRIAGE

There seems to be no end of the narration of the barbaries of marriage as revealed in the police and court chronicles of the day. This immediate vicinity is furnishing its full share of these deplorable stories. Yesterday's papers, for instance, told of a child wife of 12 years married to a man 65 years of age, incidentally becoming mother to ten children, half of whom are older than she. Those interested in the India mission often shudder at stories which did not reveal more barbarism than is involved in this case. If the allegations made by the pitiable little girl-wife are even substantially true. That such crimes can be committed in the second decade of the twentieth century and in the United States, by parents, magistrates and others in authority seems incredible and the law is grossly inadequate if somebody is not severely punished for robbing this child of her childhood in such a barbarous fashion. A father who would give his daughter of 12 years to a man five and a half times her age; a man of this age, who would marry a child of such tender years, and a magistrate who would perform the ceremony—surely all these come within the province of the law governing common decency and good public policy.

If this case arouses indignation, however, what must be said of a husband who beats his wife until, loaded to desperation, the muddy waters of the river offer the only refuge from an intolerable condition? A woman was rescued from committing suicide the other day as she was about to take the fatal step with her little children clinging to her skirts. Her sole reason for the mad step was that her husband beat her until she could bear it no longer. Medieval punishment suggests nothing that would be too severe for such a husband.

Still another type of barbarian figured in the same day's news from this vicinity, when an evangelist who left his wife to support her self by toiling in a laundry while he spent his time "saving souls" was ordered by circuit court to pay the wife $30 a month alimony. It would seem that the right place for such a "soul saver" was the mourners' bench, where he himself might get some faint inkling of the meaning of the religion which he professes by preaching.

The lesson of all this is not that the world is getting worse, but that some of the people in it are so bad they could hardly be worse. Sporadic instances of barbarism only make civilization, which is the rule and not the exception, all the more conspicuous. —Kansas City Journal.

MAPPING THE WILDS

The British colony of the Gold Coast with a shant is about as large as New York State. A map of more than 40 sheets in four colors has now been finished. The Gold Coast is the first of the British tropical African colonies to have a complete and modern map on a scale large enough to show a great deal of detail.

The surveys and maps have cost $340,000 and nine years of work. The map was necessary as a basis of economic development. Gold is the chief product, and the mining companies are exporting more than $700,000 worth of it a month. Disputes over the boundaries of mining claims and other properties were incessant, but even African colonies that have little or no gold find that it is worth all it costs to produce good maps of the new possessions.

Enormous difficulties had to be surmounted in making this map. Most of the Gold Coast is covered with trees running up to a height of 200 feet or more. There are few good roads, most of the highways being merely narrow, winding tracks. The damp tropical heat averaged 86 degrees the year around, sapping the strength of the strongest men. To make accurate surveys narrow lanes had to be cut through the dense forests, and along these clearings the framework lines of the survey were carefully laid down. Then natives trained in the government schools until they became satisfactory surveyors filled in the details of the country between the framework lines by means of compass surveys. Ten parties, each made up of two or three white men and about fifty natives, were engaged in these surveys.

Nowhere in the world are surveys and map making being pushed more rapidly than in Africa. The German ten-sheet maps of Togo and large parts of German East and Southwest Africa and the Cameroons are among the best maps of the kind ever made in new lands. The French, English and Belgians are almost equally active, and the hundreds of map sheets now before the public give a far more accurate idea of the regions they represent than could have been derived from any map of Alaska published twenty-five years ago.

PRISON REFORM

Governor Foss of Massachusetts takes a somewhat ambiguous position on the subject of prison reform. While declaring himself in favor of the prison reform, he qualifies his approval by maintaining that it must be "practiced judiciously."

In the last word is the meat of his statement. "Judiciously" is indefinite and might be made to hide a multitude of subsequent evasions.

It would appear to be fairly well settled in the United States that the parole power should be used to a considerable extent. Whether it is used "judiciously" is a subject upon which there is ample room for argument.

Recently, in an Eastern State, a pardoned convict grew angry when a citizen dared to step on his toes. He drew a revolver and shot promiscuously about him, sending several men to the hospital. He had been at liberty only a short time before the jail gates again clanged to behind him.

Certainly, in his case, the pardon had not been "judiciously" granted. Nor is his case a solitary one. Illinois recently had a sad instance where a man who had been granted this favor was returned to prison within a short time—a murderer.

The question is a tremendously big one. It touches that deep humanity which is within us all, whether law-breakers or law-observers. The "honor" system among criminals has proved amazingly successful in many instances. It has been found of especial benefit in treating children.

Yet, every once in a while, an ugly case creeps into print—a case that would seem to bolster up the stern doctrines of other days, when men believed that "once a criminal always a criminal" and branded the felon with an irremovable mark.

Governor Foss may be a well-meaning man, but he has not added anything new to the literature of prison reform. It is will define "judiciously" in such a manner that it will enlighten Pardon Boards throughout the country, he will have done far more through his mere announcement of conversion to the new order of things. —Seattle Times.

NOISE AND THE NERVES

We have recorded the case of a tradesman who was indicted at the Surrey quarter sessions for having attempted to commit suicide. It was pleaded on his behalf that he had suffered from insomnia brought on by the noise made at night by the motor omnibuses and trains which passed the premises at which he had been unable to sleep owing to the traffic. This was an extreme case, perhaps, and possibly this particular victim of street noises was a man of abnormally nervous temperament.

But no man's nerves are entirely proof against the sapping influence of disturbed and interrupted sleep, and, unfortunately, cause and effect in this case are very apt to react upon and intensify each other. The nervousness of not being able to sleep is often enough the primary cause of sleeplessness, and thus an irregular series of intermittent noises tends to induce, especially in a sleeper awakened by them, a state of nervous apprehension which may lead in the end to severe and pronounced insomnia. This is a very serious matter, not merely for bad sleepers themselves, but for all who have to depend on their services. A man can do his work efficiently by day if he cannot sleep at night, and when public servants like Sir Henry Morris and other of our correspondents tell us how great and growing the evil is, it is high time that the community at large should stir itself and insist on a remedy being found and applied.

Of course the traffic of a great city can never be entirely stilled. There must always be occasional passings even in the literature of prison reform. It is up with us as best we may; as we must also with the continuous roar of the great thoroughfares up to a late hour of the night. But these are not the enemies of sleep of which Dr. Henry Morris speaks so much. It is the multiplication of the motor car and the heedless sounding of its raucous horn in the small hours that justly provoke his indignation and remonstrance. —London Times.

'MASTERS OF THE WORLD'

It was only the other day that a delegate to the international steel conference arose and said in a vein of felicity to his business confreres: "We are masters of the world today. Governments can neither make war nor peace so long as we control iron and steel; and in dealing with the association they can only buy at one price."

We may be of the opinion that in a sense there was a measure of buncombe in that utterance; but unless we are exceedingly dull in comprehension we will not miss the significance of it. It discloses a purpose on the part of the high lords of finance and industry that in many other ways has made manifest during the past few years. It bespeaks the well defined, probably the conscious tendency toward a more ambitious centralization of big interests than has ever been dreamed of up to the present time.

J. Pierpont Morgan, for example, is in heavy iron. Mr. Morgan is also a king in finance—literally a king—a man who has the ear of monarchs and potentates because he has put himself in a position to exert an influence on world finance. With Morgan and with his steel, and his money associates are associated powerful groups of men who have maintained and still have able and astute servants to control the government. One of these, the statesman from Rhode Island, has been laboring assiduously for years to bring about a national financial scheme in this country which will enhance and perfect the control that these men already exercise. Already in industry and in finance they have reached that mental attitude which obliterates geographical boundaries. Their ambition has become cosmopolitan and they seek in fact to be "masters of the world." —Portland Telegram.

TRICK OF COLLAR

Daniel Frohman, in his "Memories of a Manager," tells of a muscular trick by which F. F. Mackay achieved an astonishing stage effect. It was in Bronson Howard's "One of Our Girls." Mr. Mackay was playing the part of a French count who, in one of the chief situations of the play, is slapped in the face with a glove by an English officer. Mr. Howard's idea was that the count should become violent and furious at the affront, but Mr. Mackay contended that it was better to show the count that he was an expert duelist and accustomed to danger, he was not likely to lose control of himself. The result was that the Frenchman received the insult without the movement of a muscle. He stood rigid. Only a flash of the eye for an instant revealed his emotion. Then the audience saw his face grow red and then pale. This was followed by the quiet announcement from the count that he would send his seconds to the Englishman. This exhibition of facial emotion betrayed by the visible rush of blood to the actor's face was frequently noted at the time. It was a muscular trick. Mr. Mackay put on a tight collar for that scene and strained his neck against it until blood came, and when he released the pressure and the blood receded, the effect was reached. —Bookman.

'LYING DIPLOMACY' CHARGE AGAINST RUSSIANS

Correspondent in New York Paper Distrusts New Jewish Policy.

SEES EFFORT TO FOOL UNCLE SAM

Protests at Discrimination and Says Our Passports Should Be Respected.

(From the New York Times, June 2, '11)
Following the recent announcement in Washington that the state department had been informed that Russia thereafter would admit American Jews, Louis Marshall, has written a letter to Congressmen Francis Burton Harrison expressing distrust of the reported change in Russia's attitude, which he believes was an inspired utterance in line with what he called the "duplicitous and lying diplomacy" on her part in the past. He declares that Russia, realizing that America is considering seriously the abrogation of the treaty of 1832, by which American citizens, irrespective of race or creed, were permitted to travel in Russia and Russians to travel here, is trying "to fool the American people" into withholding action until public sentiment dies out.

Even if Russia's promise is sincere, he says, it would permit free admission solely to Jews prominent in the business world, discriminating against the poor who might wish to visit their old homes. Marshall declares that government should insist on unqualified recognition of American passports. This is Marshall's letter:

Dear Mr. Harrison: I am in receipt of yours of the 28th inst. with regard to the publication in Saturday's newspapers, in which it is stated that Russia has determined to admit American Jews traveling abroad on business. You ask my opinion with regard to this announcement and to indicate whether I think that any substantial advance toward the desired end has been made. I thank you for this opportunity of expressing my views on the subject.

HEARD OF LONG TIME.

For many years we have heard of a plan of abolishing passports, of extending privileges to American Jews, of abolishing the Pale of Settlement, but all of these statements were mere emanations of Russia's duplicity and her lying diplomacy. Now, however, Russia, thoroughly appreciates that the present movement for an abrogation of the treaty of 1832 is the most serious that has thus far been undertaken. She is undoubtedly aware of the feeling that has been aroused throughout the United States against the outrage which has been inflicted on American citizenship. It is, therefore, in accordance with Russia's cunning to give out these inspired utterances indicating her desire to please American people and to give to those Jews who are prominent in the business world the right to enter Russia.

This is coupled with the sardonic suggestion that the great difficulty which stands in the way of the Russian government is the position of the hostile attitude of the duma, which, it is feared, may not approve of the proposed measure. The very suggestion that the duma, which has been coerced into a state of abject humility, which does not even possess the shadow of power or authority, which is but a subservient tool of the government, would be permitted to oppose any government policy, is a gross insult to the intelligence of the American people. The duma is as powerless as a babe in arms. It is a mere puppet. Its initiative, which has been a squeeze out of it by Russian bureaucracy, which is as powerful today as it was before the Russian revolution.

TRYING TO FOOL PEOPLE.

I have no hesitation, therefore, in saying that if the Russian government by the Russian representatives at Washington, it is but another effort to fool the American people and to bring about a suspension of action by congress looking to the abrogation of the treaty. In the hope that the present publicity of the issue will die out, that the important issue presented be forgotten and that another decade may come and go before congress will again open its eyes to the colossal insult which has been inflicted upon our country.

But even were Russia sincere in her alleged expression of purpose, even were she to admit American Jews traveling abroad on business, into the pale of settlement, that would not meet the proposition which now confronts congress. The question involved in the present agitation is not whether the rich Jews or those who have acquired business standing shall be admitted into Russia, but whether any American citizen, whoever he may be, whether rich or poor, merchant or otherwise, shall be discriminated against by Russia in the very teeth of the treaty of 1832 and notwithstanding its provisions, which are applicable to all American citizens.

I am not a merchant, neither is my wife, nor are my children merchants. Why should we, if we desire to visit Russia as American citizens, be excluded because we are Jews and because we are not merchants? Why even as to merchants should there be a discrimination which would restrict their right to sojourn and travel within the pale of settlement, which would exclude them from St. Petersburg, Moscow, and other great commercial centers? No; this is not a case for a mere palliative nor for the granting of a special favor or the bestowing of grace upon a certain part of the Jews of America.

ASK NO FAVORS.

We are asking for no favors and for no special privileges. We are merely asking that the right of every American citizen, Jew or non-Jew, irrespective of race or creed, shall be respected by Russia in accordance with the terms of her treaty with the United States. We are opposed to the creation of any privileged class of American citizens or of any class of American citizens who are to be subjected to adverse discrimination.

We are equally opposed to the creation of a privileged class of American Jews, either by Russia or by our own country. Absolute equality must be insisted upon. This proposed

MARYS OF GREAT BRITAIN REMEMBER QUEEN MARY

QUEEN MARY wearing part of the insignia of the Order of the Garter, gift of all the Marys of the Empire.

LONDON, July 22.—At the time of the coronation of King George and Queen Mary, a beautiful gift was given by all the Marys of the British empire to Queen Mary. It is part of the insignia of the Order of the Garter, of which she is a member. A large sum was obtained by collection and part of it, at the Queen's request, was devoted to charitable purposes. This picture of the queen wearing the gift of the Marys was taken directly after the coronation.

MILL VALLEY TO HAVE GAS IN RESIDENCES

MILL VALLEY, July 22.—The Mill Valley Gas and Electric Company recently incorporated, has applied to the town trustees for a franchise to lay mains in the streets of the town and will install a $200,000 gas plant to supply Sausalito and this place with gas. The directors of this company are Dr. Ferdinand Butterfield, E. de Los Angeles and J. Schillingmann. It is the intention of the new company to erect a large garbage reduction plant in order to handle all the refuse of Southern Marin. The concern is to make a contract with the trustees here to handle all the garbage. The incorporation will in measure assist in the manufacture of the gas. The contract calls for the gas to be furnished at $1.75.

measure of the Russian government not only continues the present discrimination against American citizens, but it seeks, with the sanction of our government, to create an additional form of discrimination which is most offensive and insulting.

I hope, therefore, that nothing short of the absolute recognition by Russia of the American position shall be tolerated; that the resolutions which are now before the house committee on foreign affairs be pressed to passage, and that there be no further trifling with this great question of citizenship which transcends in importance all questions of property and privilege. Very truly yours,
LOUIS MARSHALL.

The day Congressman Harrison received this letter he introduced a resolution directing the secretary of state to inform the house of representatives whether any communications have been received by our government in regard to Russian discrimination against the American passport in the hands of American Jews. The resolution was referred to the committee on foreign affairs, and will, it is expected, be favorably reported next week.

The Associated Press correspondent in St. Petersburg has reported he can find no confirmation of the reported change by the Russian government in its regulations concerning the admission of Jews to Russia.

URGE FARMERS TO VOTE FOR WOMEN

Suffragists Send 10,000 Letters
Throughout State Seeking Ballots.

LOS ANGELES, July 22.—Ten thousand letters have been sent to the farmers of the State by the California Political Equality League of Los Angeles. The letter that follows gives the pith of the suffrage reasons which, if enumerated, would be multitudinous:

"A constitutional amendment giving the suffrage to women is to be voted on October 10, 1911.

"Mothers—Our duty is to take care of the home and the child. But we cannot raise good children unless we can control the conditions surrounding the home.

"The vote has to do with the cost of living, sanitation, food supply, education and moral conditions affecting our young people. Big organizations are making vast profits from commercialized vice—and our children are the victims. Mothers, teach the men you know to give you the vote to protect the home.

"Fathers—Remember your daughters—they must make a living; conditions are hard for them—give the girl a fair share of the boy's property. Teach your daughters by giving them the vote.

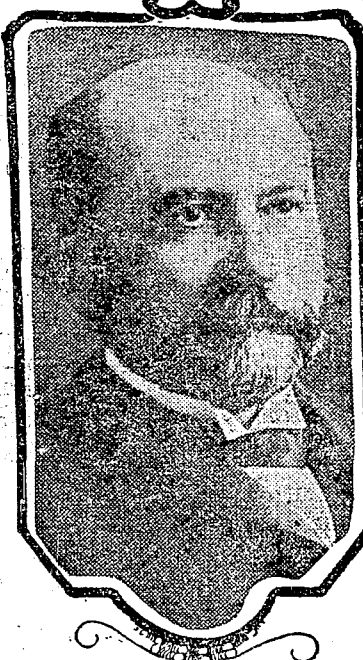

"Citizens—Put it into the hands of the many for it is just and it is progressive. It doubles the power for good. Thousands of women desire it and realize their need of it.

"Vote for the amendment giving women the suffrage and insure good government in California."

FERTILE DELTA LANDS BRING LARGER RENTS

STOCKTON, July 22.—Holders of land in the San Joaquin delta section have increased rents from $4 to $6 per acre. Because of the wonderful fertility of the reclamations and the increased demands, owners are able to obtain higher rents. Last year land on the Rindge tract was rented at from $18 to $20 per acre. This year the rent has been increased to from $22 to $26, and the price is being rapidly paid. Farmers in the delta section are always sure of big crops.

DR. HORNADAY ACCUSES NAGEL OF PERSECUTION

DR. W. T. HORNADAY, the head of New York Zoological Society.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Dr. W. F. Hornaday the head of the New York Zoological Society, has been an important witness before the committee of Congress which is investigating charges of the destruction of the seals.

Dr. Hornaday is an active member of the Campfire Club, and through that organization, as in other ways, he has fought for the preservation of the seals. Before the House committee he accused Secretary Nagel of trying to "suppress" him in his activities in behalf of the seals.

CONVICTS WILL HUNT CONVICTS

Oregon Adopts Novel Plan to Capture "Honor Men" Who Escape.

SALEM, Oregon, July 22.—Governor West intends to change the old adage that "it takes a thief to catch a thief" and will act on the belief that it "takes a convict to catch a convict."

He said today that the next time one of his "honor men" makes a break from the work that has been assigned to him outside of the penitentiary, he will select two or three convicts on whom he believes he can implicitly rely and will send them forth to capture the fugitive.

Governor West will go even further than that, and supply the convicts with guns. That the convicts delegated would make their attempts to catch the fugitive only as a matter of duty is another part of the governor's theory.

So far as is known here the idea is one new to prison history, and when used will probably be the first instance of the kind in the annals of convict hunting.

PORTERVILLE ROAD IS TO BE RUNNING SOON

PORTERVILLE, July 22.—Passenger traffic on the line of the new Porterville Northeastern railroad will be started soon after the first of August. Orders have been entered with an eastern concern for the immediate delivery of two special motor cars, which are geared for climbing the comparative steady grade from this city to Springville. At the meeting of the city council, the company asked and secured permission for the erection on the south side of a concrete house for the storage of gasoline, the tanks to have a capacity of 8000 gallons.

OLD-TIME REMEDY DARKENS THE HAIR

Gives Color, Lustre to Faded and Gray Hair; Dandruff Quickly Removed.

From time immemorial, sage and sulphur have been used for the hair and scalp. Almost everyone knows of the value of such a combination for darkening the hair, for curing dandruff and falling hair, and for making the hair grow. In older times the only way to get a hair tonic of this sort was to brew it in the home fireplace, a method which was troublesome and not always satisfactory. Nowadays almost every up-to-date druggist can supply his patrons with a ready-to-use product, skillfully compounded in perfectly equipped laboratories. The Wyeth Chemical Company of New York put up an ideal remedy of this sort, called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, and authorize druggists to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

This preparation is offered to the public at 60 cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by the Owl Drug Co., 334 and 336 Broadway, 10th and Washington and 16th and San Pablo.

FIRE CHIEF SPEAKS ON HIGH PRESSURE SYSTEM

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—At the recent meeting of the South Central Improvement Association, in St. Joseph's gymnasium, 250 Tenth street, an address was made by Fire Chief Murphy on the high-pressure water system.

In the business session of the association the executive committee was empowered to employ a special police officer to enforce the cleaning of sidewalks by residents, a protest was registered against the erection of a stable at Polson and Rogers streets, and a committee was appointed to secure a portion of the city street work appropriation for needed repairs within the district.

BERKELEY'S HEALTH BOARD TO BE JUMBLED

Dr. H. N. Rowell May Succeed Dr. George Reinhardt as President.

LATTER CLAIMS HE HAS NOT HEARD OF CHANGE

Mayor Wilson Admits That Shake-Up in Body Is Imminent.

BERKELEY, July 22.—Dr. Hubert N. Rowell, to succeed Dr. George Reinhardt as president of the City Board of Health and Dr. Woodson Allen to succeed Dr. J. M. Force as a member, are rumored changes in the board, following Mayor Wilson's admission today that a shake-up would probably take place. Dr. Robert Hector, one of the present members, is slated to remain in his position, according to gossip at the City Hall.

Dr. Reinhardt is professor of hygiene at the University of California and is also the University physician. Dr. Rowell, who is mentioned as his successor, is exalted ruler of the Berkeley Lodge of Elks.

The ex-officio members of the board, who will not be changed, are City Attorney Redmond P. Staats, City Health Officer Dr. J. J. Benton and Sanitary Inspector George Grimshaw.

CHANGES CONTEMPLATED.

Mayor Wilson admitted that changes were under consideration but that no definite action had been decided upon. It is expected that removals and new appointments will be made at next Tuesday morning's meeting of the City Council.

Dr. Reinhardt said this afternoon that his resignation had not been requested, but that he would certainly resign if such action was desired by the city authorities.

There have been rumors of slight friction between Health Officer Dr. J. J. Benton and other members of the board. Dr. Benton's salary was recently raised from $60 to $100 a month and it was expected by the Council that his duties would be increased.

A combination of the positions of city health officer and medical inspector of schools, suggested by the Board of Health will be considered by the Council at its next meeting.

FAVORS DUAL JOB.

Dr. Ernest Hoag recently resigned as medical inspector and the position has since been vacant. Dr. Reinhardt, who has recommended the filling of the place by Dr. H. W. Mahoney, favors increasing the salary of the inspector from $2400 to $3000 a year, requiring a physician to devote his entire time to the duties of the two positions.

Dr. Everett C. Beach Explains Scope of Work Resourcefulness, Tact and Sympathy Required

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, July 22.—The many-sidedness of the physical education work being conducted at the summer session of the university this year was a surprise to noted educators of the country attending the National Educational Association convention.

The course is the most elaborate conducted by any summer school in the country, and the model playground is the only one operated by a university.

Every afternoon except Saturday and Sunday, the grounds are filled with children of Berkeley, who overflow to other parts of the campus, where they sit under the oaks and listen to stories told by women instructors, who are taking courses in playground work and its allied branches in the summer school. Play and instruction for the child and instruction for the teacher are the benefits derived. The instructor frequently finds herself falling into the spirit of the play, so enthusiastically does she become in the activities of the children, and her teaching function is almost forgotten. That is the surest indication of the fundamental value of it all.

Dr. Beach conducts work. Dr. Everett C. Beach, a graduate of Stanford University and director of physical education in the Los Angeles schools, is head of the game department at the summer session. He told a TRIBUNE reporter today about the work being done here under his direction.

"The playground course at the summer session has proved to be the most popular course given this season," he said. "The classes are all large and enthusiasm is intense."

"The model playground on the old campus presents a scene of joyful activity with 1500 boys and girls engaged in play."

"The playground is maintained in connection with the other playground courses, and is the laboratory part of the work. It is here that the teachers experience the thrilling sensation of play. They do not boss the children in their games, but play with them and lose themselves in the interest of the activity, unmindful of the seriousness of the cause."

"Each teacher is required to devote nine hours each week to the practical work. Individual schedules are arranged and each teacher takes her turn in participating, instructing and supervising in the various activities of the different departments."

"In the kindergarten department where the attendance is greatest, the students stimulate and encourage the imaginative and creative powers of the children in the sandbox, where the material is provided for the construction of houses, forts, tunnels, etc. Outside the sandbox in some quiet, shady corner, the story-telling goes on and on the grass under the spreading oak the quieter guessing games, group and circle games are conducted. There are the teeter-boards, swings and slides that must be regulated to accommodate the large number desiring to use them. This department is rich with first hand material for child study and requires no small degree of patience, sympathy and tact in the adjustment of the children, the little mothers, the big mothers, the nurses and the spectators who are keenly interested in the welfare of the little folks."

"In the junior department, where the

North Siders of Alameda Ask Hospital Corps to Stop Practice.

ALAMEDA, July 22.—A resolution was passed at the meeting of the North Side Improvement Club last evening disapproving the action of the Oakland Chamber of Commerce in passing a resolution which overlooked the agreement first entered into in regard to the rights of Alameda in the harbor.

"The club also passed a resolution asking the United States marine hospital corps to stop the practice of persons on board ships and shore throwing into the bay refuse, municipally, dead animals and old clothes, which are washed on the Alameda beaches."

A vote of thanks was passed for the speedy work of A. E. Acklison and Chief of Police John Conrad for their work in clearing the north side of vessels.

The club also heartily endorsed the action of the Federated Improvement Clubs in passing a resolution, favoring the dredging of San Leandro bay.

Last night's meeting of the club proved to be a most enthusiastic one, and it was well attended.

MAYOR IS TOLD OF SEWER DISPUTE

Police Judge Tappan of Alameda Writes of Controversy With Health Officer.

ALAMEDA, July 22.—Police Judge R. Tappan, with Health Officer L. W. Stidham over the matter of abating a nuisance on the property of Mrs. Emil C. Cohen has written the following letter to Mayor William H. Noy, asking that the nuisance be abated. Stidham claims the nuisance abated but that his hands have been tied by the refusal of Judge Tappan to issue a warrant for Mrs. Cohen's arrest on a charge of violating the local sanitary laws, it being claimed that she is allowing a sewer to remain open on her property.

LIFE OF ATTORNEY J. C. CAMPBELL IS HANGING IN THE BALANCE

RIBS AND ARMS CRUSHED AND DOCTORS FEAR THAT HE MAY HAVE SUSTAINED FATAL INTERNAL INJURIES

By Valiant Effort He Prevented Severing of Left Thumb Struggles In Dark When He Is Knocked Down By Moving Train

ATTORNEY J. C. CAMPBELL, who was seriously, perhaps fatally injured Friday night while on the ferry steamer Solano.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—J. C. Campbell, who was injured at 9 o'clock last night on the steamer Solano while en route to this city, is in a serious condition at St. Winifred's hospital, and the gravest fears for his life are entertained by his many friends.

The victim of an unfortunate and unwarranted accident, Judge Campbell, although suffering excruciating injury, had the presence of mind to save his own life, as he lay in imminent danger of being ground to death beneath the wheels of the train, which caused him such severe injuries.

Judge Campbell had been arguing a case in Sacramento and was returning home on the Overland train. He had been dining and thought to take a constitutional on the Solano, which ferries the big train across the strait from Benicia to Port Costa.

The weather was especially warm and when the attorney reached the deck he proceeded to walk up and down.

Not noting that the steamer had landed, he was standing next a wall when a section of his train started forward. Before he noticed its approach, the first coach was upon him and there was not sufficient space between the boarding and the train for a human body.

Judge Campbell is a man of portly build and he was struck by the oncoming train and rolled round and round between the beams and the side of the coach. In this manner three ribs on each side were broken and his left arm was snapped. His chest also was badly crushed and he suffered cuts and bruises of the entire body.

At length he was thrown to the deck, his broken arm striking on the rail. The rear wheels of the car were approaching rapidly and with rare presence of mind and unable to move the fractured limb, the attorney, with his other hand drew the arm out of harm's way, and threw himself to one side just in time to avoid being ground to pieces.

Taken to hospital. His predicament was soon noticed and he was taken to the hospital as possible on the train by a physician who happened to be a passenger. The railroad officials wanted to remove him to the Southern Pacific hospital, but his request to go to St. Winifred's was acceded to and the arrival of the ferry at this side, an ambulance was in waiting and at 11 o'clock the injured man was under the care of his family physician, Dr. Winslow Anderson.

His wife and daughter had also been summoned and were quickly at his bedside, where they have remained almost continually ever since. Dr. Anderson, in giving a bulletin of his patient's condition late tonight said:

"Mr. Campbell is showing surprising vitality, but he has suffered three fractured ribs on each side and a broken arm. Whether the lung has been punctured or whether the crushing of his chest may have resulted in internal injuries, we cannot know yet. We dressed his injuries last night, but I cannot make any predictions as to the outcome at this time."

HOPEFUL OF RECOVERY. "The possibilities are what we fear. At present his condition is all that could be looked for and we are hopeful of the result."

Attorney Joseph C. Campbell was born in Indiana about 60 years ago and for thirty years he has been practicing law in California. He is a self-made man in the strictest sense and has risen from the position of "peanut butter" on a railroad train to that of one of the greatest criminal lawyers in the United States and a leader of the bar in California. He was for a number of years district attorney in San Joaquin county and was also a candidate for Congress. He has been chairman of several of the most important republican state conventions and is a thirty-third degree Mason and a past commander of Golden Gate Commandery, Knights Templar.

Prominent Attorney. Possessed of a pleasing personality and with a depth of knowledge and a range of experience seldom seen in a specialist, Judge Campbell is an entertaining speaker. He is a Shakespearean scholar and an authority on Roman and Grecian classics. One of his greatest victories was in the John A. Benson land fraud case at Washington, and he was also prominent in the beginning of the so-called graft prosecution being an attorney for former Mayor Eugene E. Schmitz.

Shoots Himself When Marriage Is Tabooed

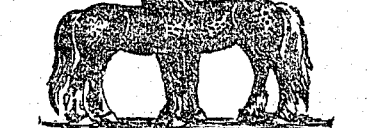

Fiancee of Nobleman Goes Into Seclusion in Switzerland While Grieving.

CHICAGO, July 22.—Letters received today from Chicago travelers in Switzerland related that Miss Olga Menn, a Chicago girl, for love of whom Baron Oskar Rothschild of Vienna committed suicide, was living in seclusion in a suburb of Lucerne. Mrs. Menn was with her. The report reached here that Miss Menn planned never to return to her native country. She was said to be as deeply grieved over the death of her noble fiancé as she was the day she received news of his suicide.

With a companion, young Baron Rothschild was making a trip around the world when he stopped in Chicago and met Miss Menn. Taken ill at the Congress hotel he asked to be sent to a hospital. There he met Dr. Menn, a native of Vienna, who attended him. Recovering the baron was invited to the home of Dr. Menn, where he met and immediately fell in love with Miss Menn. Before he left Chicago they were engaged to be married. He planned that Miss Menn and her mother should follow him to Vienna, where a formal betrothal would be arranged with his father, head of the Austrian Rothschild family.

When they reached Vienna, Miss Menn and her mother were informed by the young baron that his father would not consider the engagement. He said, however, that he hoped to win him over. Failing in this and threatened with dishonor, he married the Chicago girl, the young nobleman shot himself. Later, the elder Rothschild settled $10,000 on Miss Menn.

Togo Will Receive Cordial Welcome

Famous Japanese Admiral to Be Guest of Government in United States.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Admiral Count Hachiro Togo, chief of the naval staff of Japan and hero of a great fight, will receive a great welcome when he arrives in the United States ten days hence. For the past week the state and navy departments have been busy making preparations for the coming of the admiral. The tentative plans of the two departments are based on the advice from the Japanese embassy that Admiral Togo, accompanied by his naval aide, will sail from London July 25 on board the Lusatia. At New York they will be met by Captain T. M. Potts, U. S. N., who has already been detailed by President Taft to represent the government during Togo's stay in the United States, including projected continental journeys, for the admiral will sail for home from Vancouver. After the New York visit Admiral Togo will spend three or four days in Washington.

'VEILED WOMAN' OF MYSTERY DEAD

Son Braves Father's Wrath to View Face of Mother Cold in Death.

For Twenty Years Former Wife of Millionaire Had Worked as Servant.

CHICAGO, July 22.—Braving the anger of his millionaire father, hurrying to Chicago to look for the first time in twenty years upon the face of his mother, who was crushed under the wheels of an automobile Friday morning, although she is dead, Selwyn S. Edgar Jr. of St. Louis, son of Mrs. Katherine Porter, the "veiled woman of mystery," will arrive in Chicago tomorrow morning from Tarrytown, N. Y., where he has been visiting.

The young man was called up on long-distance telephone and said to W. F. Hobbs, who had employed his mother as a servant for five years:

"My mother was the dearest woman in the world. I will be in Chicago just as soon as a train can get me there. Please do not hold any funeral services, as I want to take charge of the body."

Thus, although she will not know it in this sense, Mrs. Porter, the humble domestic, who thirty years ago was a reigning St. Louis beauty and wife of Selwyn C. Edgar, a St. Louis zinc millionaire, will meet the son she gave up twenty years ago when she separated from her husband.

EDGAR INDIFFERENT. As for Mrs. Porter's former husband, Selwyn C. Edgar, when he first heard of her death, he displayed indifference.

"She went out of my life twenty years ago," he said.

It was at his command that the son, since he was a year old, has never seen his mother.

Mrs. Edgar, after separating from her husband, married John Porter, whose abuse caused her to leave him and work as a domestic. She was known as the "woman of mystery" on account of always being heavily veiled, which probably shut out the sight of the approaching automobile and caused her death.

Cholera Creates Alarm in Gotham

Nine Deaths From Dreaded Disease Prompts Great Activity to Prevent Its Spread.

NEW YORK, July 22.—With nine deaths from cholera since the dreaded disease, brought from the infected districts in southern Italy first made its appearance in this port, and the news that the new, of a steamship from Rome, who went to Bellevue hospital on Thursday had been diagnosed as cholera, the authorities of the city, state and nation realize that they are confronted with a situation more serious than they thought. Extraordinary measures will be adopted to prevent the disease gaining a firmer foothold.

News of the suspected case in Bellevue Hospital spread like wildfire today in the big institution and there was no little excitement. It required the best efforts of the big corps of nurses and physicians to allay the fears of the patients. No new cases were reported among the other immigrants undergoing examination at the Hoffman Island Hospital.

Girl of 17 Divorced Once, Married Thrice

Shelbyville, Indiana, Miss Began Marital Journey at the Age of 14.

SHELBYVILLE, Ind., July 22.—Though only 17 years old, Mrs. Mary Luther Smith, the bride of Cary Smith, has been one of the principals three times in wedding festivities. She was divorced last year from Andrew Luther, with whom she has twice gone through the marriage ceremony.

The first time she and Luther plighted their troth at Greensburg through the aid of the girl's mother, Mrs. Charles Hooker, who assisted in obtaining the marriage license. The girl was then only 14.

After the couple had lived together a year it was discovered that the man who had performed the marriage ceremony was not a minister, as he had claimed to be, and they separated.

Luther later persuaded the girl to steal away from her home and they were married again, the second ceremony being performed at Indianapolis. Recently Luther deserted his wife. He is now in the regular army.

He was picked up in a semi-conscious condition and removed to the Central Emergency hospital. An examination by Dr. Sampson revealed that he was suffering from an injury to his head and a possible basal fracture of the skull.

HUGE PYTHON IN DIRE PLOT TO MURDER

Seeks Revenge Upon Female Reptile That Spurns Him by Attacking Babies.

Fire Extinguisher Prevents the Giant Serpent From Cruelly Killing Helpless Infant.

NEW YORK, July 22.—Murder was attempted and thwarted at the Bronx Zoological Gardens today. Trouble rocked the snake house on its foundations, shattered a pane of plate glass and required a pair of fire extinguishers to suppress it. The instinct of a mother to protect her young, the jealous rage of a spurned suitor, who became the villain, and all other requisites of melodrama, were entangled in the plot.

Rosa, the 20-foot python which recently arrived from Trinidad, presented the park on Tuesday with a bevy of forty-eight baby snakes. The first pythons that have been born here this year. An hour later, Kal, the 10-foot python, tried to slip into the cage to drive out the new arrivals, but was prevented.

After his first attempt at killing the baby snakes had been thwarted, he laid a careful plan of revenge. His cage is separated from that of Rosa by a thick plate glass, the bottom edge of which rests in the sand on the floor. This sand is four inches deep. Beneath it is the board flooring, but the glass does not reach all the way down to that. By digging away the sand she gave up twenty years ago when she separated from her husband.

Then he waited until he was sure that the big mother python was sound asleep when he put his head under the glass and seized one of her babies. He had drawn the young snake into his cage when the keeper happened along.

Just outside the back door of Kal's cage a fire extinguisher hung on the wall. Keeper Palmer grabbed it, swung open the door of the cage and turned the stream into the face of the giant python. The effect was magical. Perhaps it was some chemical property in the extinguisher. Kal dropped the baby and began to crawl back and forth around the cage. Palmer seized a pole and pulled the baby snake to safety.

Germany May Send Warships to America

Kaiser Doesn't Like the Way His Subjects Are Treated in This Hemisphere.

BERLIN, July 22.—As the result of recent attacks on Germans in Cuba, Mexico and other Latin American countries, the German government is considering the advisability of putting a much stronger representation of its flag in American waters. Additional reason for this action is found in the situation in Haiti, where the disorders attending the fall of President Simon are menacing German commercial interests. At the foreign office today it was admitted that a proposal to send a warship to the island immediately was under consideration.

Promoter Plans to Sell Stamped Eggs

Beloit, Wisconsin, Hopes to Be Center of Big Shipping Industry.

BELOIT, Wis., July 22.—Beloit as the center of the egg-shipping industry in this section is seen in the plan which a local promoter has under way to make contracts with all the farmers hereabouts to buy all the eggs they hens lay and ship them to wholesale houses. By the method under consideration the exact age of every egg will be known, for they will all be stamped when gathered. In case a wholesaler receives some eggs which are "ripe" he can send them back and the promoter, by means of the stamp, will be able to tell who is responsible.

WIFE AGREES TO FORGIVE ELOPER

Banker Kelley of Seattle Returns Home After Escapade With Mrs. Henry.

Erring Husband Goes Back to Family Broken in Health and Spirits.

SEATTLE, July 22.—Broken in health and spirits and somewhat reduced in bank account, S. Foster Kelley, formerly a well-known Seattle banker, who eloped to San Francisco with the beautiful young wife of A. J. Henry, a bank clerk, has returned to his home in this city, has been forgiven by his wife and they have agreed to forget the past. He came back about a week ago and hid himself from the sight of former friends and business associates. He is now at the Kelley home, but is incommunicado. He refuses to see reporters or answer the telephone, while his wife is equally firm in her denials against persistent requests for a statement. From friends of the former rich and influential banker, however, a statement was obtained here to prove that, after considerable correspondence, an agreement was reached between Mrs. Kelley and her erring spouse to forget the past and to settle their property in this city on terms satisfactory to the injured wife.

A part of the Kelley fortune, once estimated at $150,000, is said to be intact, but neither of the Kelleys have informed their friends as to the present financial standing of the ex-banker or his ability to resist the suit for $100,000 damages for alienating affections brought against him by Albert J. Henry.

Fifteen months ago Henry obtained a divorce. Kelley was named as co-respondent in the suit, being charged with eloping with Mrs. Henry and the two Henry children, Anita and Albert. Later Mrs. Henry and Kelley kidnapped the children. After ten days' search they were caught and Kelley was forced to spend ten days in jail for his part in the abduction.

Women Will Adopt Flying as a Fad

This Is Prediction of Miss Harriet Quimby, America's First Female Aviator.

NEW YORK, July 22.—Aeroplane driven by society buds will soar in flocks over Newport and Narragansett Pier next season, is the prediction made by Miss Harriet Quimby, America's first woman aviator.

Miss Quimby, who has taken up aviation seriously, is convinced that women will adopt flying as a fad, if nothing more, as soon as they appreciate how easily and how little real danger attends it.

"You see," she said, "the chief obstacle in the path of the average person who would like to fly is the expense attached to the sport. A machine alone costs $5000 and then there is almost another thousand that must be spent in learning the art. But expense does not figure with society folk, and so when they once realize how easy it is to learn to fly, they will take to it like a duck to water."

As evidence of her ideas of dangers in aviation, she said she would much prefer driving her monoplane in an ordinary wind than driving an automobile down Fifth avenue on a busy afternoon.

BALLINGER TO TURN GUNS ON TAFT

Amazing Information Is Circulated in Washington of Attack on Administration.

Denver Land Convention to Be Opportunity for Former Secretary's Scathing Remarks.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—That former Secretary of the Interior Ballinger, the man for whom the president went to such lengths as to weaken his administration seriously is about ready to turn his guns on the administration is the amazing information that now comes to Washington.

Ballinger is about to come out in an attack on the administration's policy of conservation and at the same time is about to set forth the plans he believes in for the handling of the public domain and public resources. The plans he favors are not the plans President Taft favors, or the plans which have been put before Congress in the form of certain conservation bills.

It is announced that a big land convention is to be held at Denver beginning September 26. Ballinger has consented to speak. In that speech he will criticize the failure of the administration to carry out the policies with respect to the public domain and the public resources that Ballinger was led to believe would be carried out when he went into the cabinet.

The expectation is that Ballinger will criticize the land office and he will take the opportunity to voice his hostility to the Pinchot ideas of conservation. Western men who are in close touch with the convention say that the meeting will be a great one and that it will not be unmixd with politics.

It is expected that the interests hostile to conservation will be in control at the Denver meeting, and that much will be heard, under the surface at least, of throwing Rocky Mountain states into the democratic column if a more liberal policy is not pursued as to the country's resources.

Exasperated Owner of Auto Gives It Away

Jasper County, Illinois, Lad Is Made a Present of Crug Wagon.

HAMMOND, Ind., July 22.—Cecil Hancock, a 12-year-old Jasper county boy, was presented with a motor car by an exasperated New Yorker, who, while motoring to Chicago, met with an accident near the farm owned by William Hancock, the boy's father. The tourist refused to give his name, but the auto bore the number "8605-New York."

While descending a hill near the farm the New Yorker lost control of his machine and it plunged into a ditch. Young Hancock helped the occupant out of the wreck and its owner made the air blue with lurid remarks about the blankety-blank machine.

"I'll give the car away for anything to get rid of it," he said.

"Give it to me," suggested the boy. "Take it and welcome."

He then hired the boy to drive him to the nearest railroad station, where he boarded a train for Chicago.

HELD ON CHARGE OF SLAYING HIS SPOUSE

Coroner's Jury Holds Henry Clay Beattie Jr. for Wife Murder.

DAMAGING EVIDENCE IS GIVEN AT THE HEARING

Woman Produces Letter and Claims That Defendant Is Father of Child.

RICHMOND, Va., July 22.—Henry Clay Beattie Jr. was held responsible by the coroner's jury this afternoon for the murder of his wife, Louise, last Thursday night on the Midlothian road, five miles south of Richmond. Damaging evidence was brought out against the young man, who says a stranger killed her while the couple were riding in their automobile.

Beattie's cousin had already testified that he bought a shotgun for the young man and this weapon played an important part in today's proceedings before Coroner Lovins.

The first witness called at the afternoon session was Mary Alexander, a negro woman. She found a single-barreled shotgun near the road at about the place where the Beatties were shot and turned it over to the authorities.

Paul Beattie was the next witness called to the stand. He examined the gun, already identified by the negro woman, and said he bought it last Saturday.

ASKED FOR SHOTGUN.

"That night," said the witness, "my cousin, Henry, took me within several blocks of the pawnshop in his auto, and stopping for a moment he told me to go over and get the gun."

"He gave me $4 Friday when he first asked me to get the gun and 5 cents to buy some shells."

The witness became giddy here and had to leave the stand.

Henry Beattie showed intense interest while his cousin was testifying.

Beulah Binford, who swore yesterday that Henry Clay Beattie was the father of her child, came back to Richmond about two months ago, after having been away for more than a year. She told Beattie she was coming and he advised against it. She wrote and telephoned to him. He met her here by appointment. Miss Binford has turned over to the coroner the following letter, which she testified was written to her by Henry Beattie July 14:

OCEANS OF LOVE.

"Dear Kid: Pay this ten on the furniture and make him give you an itemized bill and what you are to pay each week. Don't get Irma to call me any more. Some one will get wise. With oceans of love, brimming with kisses, HENRY."

This letter, coupled with the fact that Beattie had been out with the Binford girl frequently recently, gives what the police claim is a strong motive for the assassination of Mrs. Beattie. Henry Beattie was shot by a hired assassin, who was to receive $1000 for the crime.

OPINIONS DIFFER ON RECIPROCITY

One Expert Says It Will Hurt Farmer, But Another Says It Won't.

CHICAGO, July 22.—Opinion was divided on the Board of Trade today as to whether Canadian reciprocity would help or injure the American farmer, so far as wheat was concerned. John W. McDougall, one of the expert grain traders, said the treaty would be injurious.

"They will be able to dictate the price of wheat the moment that this reciprocity goes into effect," said McDougall. "Canadian wheat will pour into the United States and we will find our markets swamped with wheat."

John Dennis of Baltimore said the reciprocity bill would help the American farmer.

"The Canadian farmer grows nothing but spring wheat and we can send our soft winter wheat across into Canada and the mills there will grind it. That will help matters. The reciprocity bill means an even exchange all around."

Here are the motor car pacemakers for 1912—the Chalmers "30," $1650—the Chalmers "Thirty-Six," $1950. These cars win their way to your approval by sheer merit. They set new standards of motor car values.

When the Chalmers "30" was first announced four years ago, the words "astounding value" were used to describe it. It set a new standard.

Each season since, by better factory methods, by improvements and refinements, we have greatly increased the value of the car without increasing the price. Each year the verdict on Chalmers cars has been "best value at the price."

Our Astounding Values

And now for 1912 we say to you, the motor buying public, with perfect assurance, that this year more than ever before we offer you "astounding values."

The "30" remains the leader among $1650 cars. The new "Thirty-Six" at $1950 represents a further development along the lines of greater size and increased power. The reliable, standardized, beautiful "Forty" is continued for those requiring a car of unusual power and 7-passenger capacity.

"30" Fully Equipped $1650

We ask you to remember these facts: The Chalmers "30" was the first genuine automobile to sell at a medium price. No car of equal value ever has sold for the same price or for less.

Remember that this is the car which was driven 208 miles a day for one hundred days in succession; that made the trip from Denver to Mexico City; that for two years won more contests in proportion to the number entered than any other car; that has never been defeated by a car of its price and power; that holds the world's light car speed record; that won the hardest Glidden Tour ever held.

Please remember further that this is the car with the most advanced design; the car that has been more widely copied than any other.

Buy a Beautiful Car

Remember this car has a grace of line and beauty of finish which the costliest cars do not excel; that it has given satisfactory service to 15,000 owners; that it is backed by the Chalmers guarantee.

Last year this car sold for $1650, equipped with magneto, gas lamps, top and windshield.

Think of it this year—refined and improved in every possible way, with thoroughly ventilated fore-door body, inside control, magneto, gas lamps, Prest-O-Lite tank, and including also Chalmers mohair top and automatic windshield—for $1650!

We think you will agree that "claims" are unnecessary in view of such value at such a price. The facts are eloquent and convincing.

New Model "Thirty-Six" $1950

When we considered bringing out a new model, the Chalmers "Thirty-Six" we instructed our engineers to build a four-cylinder, five-passenger car that would leave absolutely nothing to be desired.

We said we would fix the price when the car was ready. We think that in the Chalmers "Thirty-Six" we are offering a car that leaves nothing to be desired.

What more could you ask in a car than you are able to get in this one?

More power, perhaps? You really could not use more than the splendid long stroke motor we develop. With large cylinders and long stroke (4 1/4 in. by 5 1/4 in.) the new motor is a great puller at high speed; a wonderful hill climber; and will give you all the speed you want. Though called a 36 it actually develops 40 h.p.

Four-Speed Transmission

Greater flexibility? The four forward speed transmission—a feature until now found only on the highest priced makes—gives a flexibility of control hitherto unknown on medium priced cars.

Direct drive on the fourth speed. A third speed is provided which will carry you over the hardest grades without loss of time. If a very steep hill is encountered, you can still drop back to second, which is powerful enough for the steepest grade and yet much faster than first speed of an ordinary car.

Do you ask more room in the body? This body is as roomy as any five-passenger car built. It is a big body. If it were any bigger it would become awkward and less comfortable.

More comfort? We honestly believe that it is not possible to buy a more comfortable car at any price. The big wheels and tires—36x4—the ample wheel base, sturdy frame, 4-elliptic rear springs, tilted, luxuriously upholstered seats afford the passengers the acme of riding comfort.

Chalmers Self-Starter

Greater convenience? The new Chalmers compressed air self-starter does away with the last of the original inconveniences of automobiles.

This starting device is built in the Chalmers factory. It is not an accessory added to the car, but an essential feature. With it there is no need of cranking. Any woman can now drive a Chalmers car. The compressed air of the self-starter can be used for inflating tires.

Convenience has been considered in little things, too. The control lever on both the fore-door and torpedo bodies are located inside the body.

A dash adjustment enables the driver to adjust the carburetor without leaving his seat.

Consider These Details

As to details of finish, we ask you to compare the "Thirty-Six" with any car selling up to $4000.

Body fittings are of the luxurious type found on high-priced cars. Black enamel finish instead of brass is used on metal parts, such as door handles, coat rail, hinges, lamps, etc. An option of nickel plating, at an extra cost of $50, is offered.

The ventilated dash is covered on the inside with leather. The tonneau floor is covered with coon mat. The front foot board and the running boards are covered with dark gray, linoleum.

Other details of construction which show the care expended on little things are: The beautiful doors, two handles on each door, permitting opening from the inside; scuff plate on the fender where it joins the running board; large, completely equipped tool box on the running board; smooth finish of bonnet and fenders, all rivet heads being entirely concealed; improved Mercedes type honeycomb radiator, such as you find on the high-priced cars. Many other exclusive features you will note when you examine the car.

"Thirty-Six" Already Proved

Do you ask greater reliability in a motor car? Probably no new model has ever received more thorough testing before being offered to the public.

Months ago—in November, 1910,—we completed the first three cars of the "Thirty-Six" type.

One of these was sent to Uniontown, Pa., where for four months we kept it going day in and day out, up and down the celebrated Uniontown Hill and other Pennsylvania hills. Motorists know there is no severer hill-climbing test.

The second of these cars was sent to Florida, where, for weeks, it was driven through heavy sand in the hottest weather.

The third car, driven through the Middle West, averaged 200 miles a day for 3000 miles.

The motors for the new models were tested on the block, running 15,000 revolutions per minute, 24 hours a day for weeks at a time.

It seems almost incredible, but it is the absolute truth, when we tell you that in all of our testing of this car and its motors we have never broken down a single motor, transmission or other vital part.

We have tested not only one car but a number of them; we have tested not only one motor, but many; we have not driven a few hundred miles, but tens of thousands of miles.

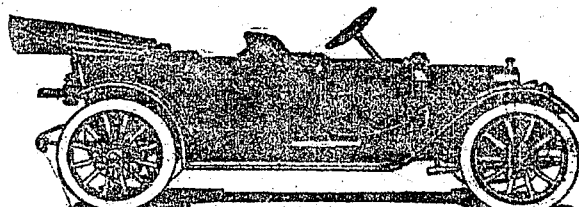

And we have done all this so that we might be able to stand behind an absolute guarantee of all of the parts of this car for one year and a further guarantee of Chalmers service.

Our Cars Fully Guaranteed

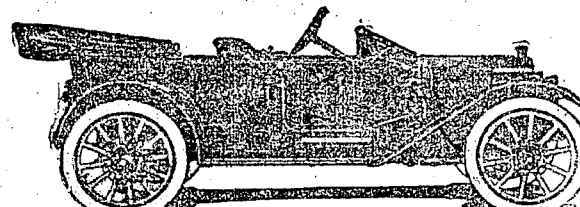

We guarantee Chalmers cars to be free from defects in material and parts. For one year from date of delivery we will replace free any defective part, if returned to our factory for inspection.

The parts of Chalmers cars are made from the best materials obtainable, and they are built, for the most part, in our own factory. Hence we are perfectly safe to guarantee them.

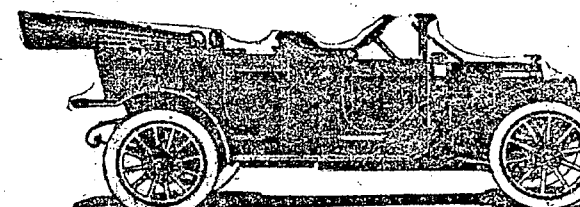

We really believe, whether you buy a Chalmers or not, it is worth your while to see the new cars. We invite you to come one and see the new models. Early deliveries are assured.

POLICE JOY RIDE TO CAPTURE THIEF

Two Autos Containing Officers Rushed to Save Valuables of Don Morris.

Answering a hurry-up call for assistance in capturing a burglar who had been reported breaking into the home of Don M. Morris, 340 Jayne avenue, about 8:30 o'clock last night, Captain of Police T. Brown and Policeman Jack Cherry participated in an exciting automobile dash up Broadway in order to augment the force consisting of Inspectors Kyle and Emigh and Policemen Crossman, who had preceded them in another auto at the first alarm and who had telephoned in for aid in surrounding the premises.

Neighbors had notified the department that a man of questionable appearance had been seen prying about the front door and windows and that he had effected an entrance. Scarcely five minutes elapsed before they were on the scene ready for action, but when they got there, alas, the suspected one had taken a hurried departure. In some mysterious manner he had become aware that he was being pursued and nothing but the trace of his jimmy was left behind.

"It was a case of too much haste," declared Captain Petersen, "or we surely would have landed our man."

The first detail of officers arrived too quickly and before the man had started work.

After a futile search in the vicinity of the house returned to the Central station, none the worse for their joy ride, but with extra automobile hire of $3 to be settled.

Don Morris said, after a careful inspection of the premises, that he had not suffered any loss of valuables.

METHODS OF TRUST ARE REVEALED BY SPRECKELS.

Great Saving if Sugar Should Be Put on the Free List.

TELLS OF EFFORTS TO STOP HIS COMPETITION

"Subpena Treasurers of Refineries," He Suggests to the Committee.

NEW YORK, July 22.—Sensational testimony which prompted the Congressional committee which is investigating the sugar trust to make a demand for hitherto unrevealed records of the trust, was furnished today by Claus A. Spreckels, president and majority stock owner of the Federal Sugar Refining company, described as the only refinery which is outside the influence and a fighting competitor of the trust.

Spreckels virtually charged that the trust, through its constituents in the West, is continuing to receive rebates from the railroads or is manipulating the sugar output in the West in restraint of trade.

Telling of the troubles which attended the infancy of the Federal Sugar Refining company organized in 1902, Spreckels made innuendoes which created a stir in the circuit courtroom, where the sessions of the committee are being held. He said that from the beginning the company had trouble with its machinery, circumstances indicating it was being tampered with.

SUGAR WAS TAPPED.

Then the sugar was damaged. Conditions got so bad that about a year following the opening of the plant he personally paid a midnight visit to the refineries. He ordered workmen on duty to open barrels which were standing around.

He found they contained matter that if allowed to get into the sugar would have absolutely ruined the business. Dead rats were found in some of the barrels.

At the time, Spreckels said, the sugar liquor would be run out of the tanks and into the sewers. But, he added, he has never been able to get evidence enough to prove anyone's connection with the trouble.

"The trust made territorial division of the spoils in the West," he said, and he told of an instance where this was proved to him by failure in business deals unless he acceded to terms which were preposterous.

"How much difference would result in the price of sugar to the consumer if the commodity were put on the free list?" Spreckels was asked.

WOULD BE CHEAPER.

"About two cents a pound. Even cut the present duty in half and as much revenue would be returned to the government as under the present tariff. The public would be enabled to purchase refined sugar at a price that is granulated sugar, for little more than 3 cents a pound, were it not for the avariciousness of the beet sugar people."

"If you will subpoena the treasurers of the beet refineries," Spreckels suggested to the committee, "you can easily secure proof of the fact that beet sugar can be manufactured at this price."

SANTA CLARA HAS GREAT RESOURCES

Facts and Figures Compiled by County Assessor Are Interesting.

SAN JOSE, July 22.—Some interesting facts have been obtained and figures compiled by L. A. Spitzer, the county assessor, who has just completed his returns for the year 1911. An equitable comparison between the figures of the year 1910, and the present year cannot be made because of the fact that within the last twelve months a new system of taxing public service corporations has gone into effect, whereby the State Board of Equalization places a value on these properties except nonoperative property of the corporations, which is principally real estate.

Despite the fact that the assessment of all the larger corporations is not included in the figures, it is found that there is $69,349,045 worth of property in Santa Clara county this year as against $71,087,235 last year. And bearing the same fact in mind it is shown that San Jose has $21,933,365, an increase of one-half million dollars.

Next to San Jose stands Palo Alto with $3,121,120; then comes Santa Clara with $2,001,460, and Los Gatos with $1,121,235. Other cities are the following: Gilroy, $815,130; East San Jose, $575,940; Mountain View, $569,715; Mayfield, $552,595; Morgan Hill, $211,035; Alviso, $195,645.

In the number of fruit trees in the county the prune leads all others with 5,300,000; next stands the peach with 593,000, followed closely by the apricot which has 546,400. Other figures in this class are: Plum, 272,000; cherry, 138,000; pear, 129,000; apples, 18,000; olive, 11,500; fig, 1710; walnut, 11,200.

It is interesting to note the fact that there are 29,200 acres of land under cultivation for hay, 6720 for wheat, 8190 for barley, 100 for alfalfa, 225 for corn, 190 for beans, with other minor crops.

The horses of the county are valued at $1,355,000; cattle, $622,500; poultry, $94,500; and a small comparative figure for the other animal products. The valuation placed on machinery is $240,000 and that on automobiles $196,000.

The First "Underslung" Touring Car at a Popular Price

$1400

Regal "35" Underslung Touring Car

REVOLUTIONARY! STARTLING! Such words as these will fly to the lips of every person interested in Automobiles who reads the caption of this advertisement, for it means another chapter has been added to the history of motor car perfecting—the presentment to a vast army of prospective automobile purchasers of a new standard of value embodying such exceptional advantages of purchase that all existing comparisons sink into insignificance.

IN A FEW DAYS the Regal "35" Underslung Touring Car will be the most talked-about car in the country, because, all over this broad land, the great daily newspapers and other publications, will have told the public that at last there is, indeed, one tangible and epoch-making advance, not only in engineering construction, but in dollar for dollar value that will immediately revolutionize opinions and ideas as to what constitutes an ideal motor car.

UNDERSLUNG CONSTRUCTION has been used for years. It's new only as applied to automobiles. Famous designers and engineers, all the authorities of note are a unit of agreement that underslung construction is the perfect, hence the only type of construction, especially where speed and absolute safety are required. Hence, it is invariably used on railway trucks, interurban cars, etc. But—hitherto the only objection to it in the Automobile World was its addition of price. It cost so very much more to build an underslung automobile. Despite its excellent advantages, motor car manufacturers considered this extra cost. It means either a prohibitive priced car, or, too great a reduction of profit.

LET US GO BACK three or four years—The Regal Motor Car Company were the first to design, manufacture and sell a Standard "30" five-passenger Touring Car at a price which gave every man of moderate income an opportunity to own not only a "good" automobile, but a car that could stand side by side with other cars then selling at double and treble the price and hold its own, no matter what part of the car was compared, or by whom—This was the car that, tumbled prices by creating a greater demand for what was then considered a luxury.

THE RECORDS OF THE PAST are eclipsed today; the Regal habit of looking ahead is at the very apex of justification.

The Regal "35" Underslung Touring Car at $1400 is a challenge in values.

It's a prophecy come true. An ideal built around a permanent principle. A supremacy that brooks no argument. Never has a car been offered for approval with so much confidence. Never a car created and built embodying so many proven advantages. It's a dominating car—a twentieth century masterpiece.

OVERWHELMING ADVANTAGES. So many, so exclusive, so emphatically superior are the advantages offered in the Regal "35" Underslung Touring Car that their emphasis will convince every prospective purchaser of his present good fortune that he is about to buy an automobile—a statement that is easily proven.

IT'S THE "SAFE" CAR. It recognizes the demands of gravitation. It's as different from the up-in-the-air type of motor car as the "safety" bicycle is from the high-wheeled relic of the past. The weight is "slung" below the axles instead of suspended above them. The center of gravity is so low that it hugs the road. "Turning Turtle," the cause of 75% of all automobile accidents, is almost reduced to an impossibility. Another point—suppose you hit, when upon your travels, a water hole that's deeper than you think and your car is driven down to the ground. In the Underslung Type the frame will strike instead of the fly wheel—saving the crankshaft from serious injury. Or, again, if a spring should break, the "Underslung Frame" cannot fall to the ground. These accidents do happen. The Underslung always turns corners on four wheels, not on two, and at almost any speed—and the tendency to skid is reduced to a minimum. A man has less to think about and more time to enjoy his ride if he sits at the steering wheel of a Regal "Underslung"—He's driving a safe car—an insurance against accident.

IT'S THE "COMFORTABLE CAR." The words "Underslung" and "Comfort" are twins. Its the one car that harmonizes with any kind of a road—It has the faculty of ironing out the wrinkles of that "bad stretch" the motorist invariably meets because it embodies another element of construction that is unique—the springs are shock-absorbing. The side-swaying motion is also left out of this design, and you will miss the sensation of parting company with the car when you come to the "sharp turn." The line of travel is always forward, it's a "velvety" motion, "skimming," not "riding" in a Regal "Underslung." Being a roomy car, the "boxed-in" feeling, so noticeable in other cars, is forgotten.

IT'S THE "ECONOMICAL" CAR. Thousands of men can afford to buy a car, but they can't afford to keep one. Here is their opportunity. The frame of a Regal "Underslung" is below the axles, every ounce of weight being well within the wheels banishes vibration and eliminates the destructive "side-lash" on springs and tires. The saving on tires is enormous, but is even more on the "life" of the car. The finest steels, the most highly tempered bearings, must eventually give way before ceaseless hammering, wrenching and the thousand and one strains the chassis of a motor car endures, but the weight of a Regal Underslung is not continuously straining and fighting with the frame to lower itself—it is in the mathematically perfect, normal position. The Regal Underslung construction eliminates the diseases that shorten the life of the average car. It's mechanically sound, healthy and long-lived. One other economy feature—the power plant being placed very low, the maximum horsepower, by a straight line drive, is delivered from motor to rear axle—a big saving in gasoline.

IT'S THE "BEAUTIFUL" CAR. It's the kind of beauty that goes deeper than paint—it's built right into the car. The curves and lines of the Regal Underslung are masterful in elegance—they delight the eye. You must see this car side by side with other cars to appreciate its good looks. You will notice the "sweep," the "rakish trim," the long, low body that suggests power and speed; the broad "wing" renders, the general appeal to the most refined sense of proportion. There is a "Unity" of excellence in its every appointment that interprets every ideal a purchaser can possibly have about a car, while to own a Regal Underslung stamps a man as a connoisseur of what motor car beauty of design really means.

ROAD CLEARANCE. The superior constructional advantages of the Underslung lend itself to this problem. Under a Regal "35" Underslung Touring Car are ten inches of uniform road clearance, which makes it possible to use a perfectly flat dust pan; consequently, whatever the speed, there are no miniature swirls of dusty tornadoes kicked up under your car—the dust is left in the road where it belongs. As 80% of all other types of automobiles have a maximum clearance of but ten inches the superiority of the Underslung in this important particular is apparent. Besides, the height of the motor and transmission mean an ease of accessibility that is exceptional, and the level motor suspension ensures a perfect lubrication.

THE PRICE IS A SENSATION. This car at $1400, presents a unique standard of value. It is the first Underslung Touring Car ever offered to the public at less than $4000, consequently there are no existing comparisons. It must be seen, examined, tested to substantiate its reputation. But one thing is certain—it will be the car you will buy. It stands at the pinnacle of motor car perfecting. It offers more in actual essentials than has hitherto been thought possible at any figure below the thousands. Its great assets of safety, beauty, comfort and economy are excellent. It is built by men who have faith in their product, faith in the great buying public, and who value above all things their reputation. If you are a close observer of the Automobile Industry after you have seen and "demonstrated" the Regal "35" Underslung five-passenger Touring Car you will say it is

THE GREATEST ACHIEVEMENT OF THE YEAR.

THE REGAL "35" UNDERSLUNG TOURING CAR is furnished with Demountable Rims (one extra Demountable Rim included). It is the complete car.

COUNTRY PROSPERS AND BUSINESS IS GROWING

Situation in Financial Market Is Reported to Be Most Satisfactory.

SECURITIES FIRM AND BANKS SOLID

Nature Takes Leading Part in Promotion of Present Gratifying Conditions.

(BY RALPH EMERSON.)

NEW YORK, July 22.—While there is virtually no speculative market in Wall street, the situation in the financial markets may be called satisfactory to pretty nearly everybody except the brokers. So far as there has been a time when the speculative contingent has felt, or professed to feel bluer. There has been an unusual reluctance to engage in new commitments, even among the "in and out" professionals. There has been a total absence of indication that important capital was taking interest in the proceeding, yet the fact remains that prices have moved upward and stand at the close of the week at a new high average for the year.

SPECULATION DEAD.

This condition of things, puzzling on its face, is in reality easy to explain. Speculation in the market is at a minimum and has long been so. Speculative interest, meaning by this the great past, is dead. It may, and many people think it will be stirred into life again at some future date, but for the present only the most insignificant fraction of the business transacted on the stock exchange originates in outside quarters.

On the other hand, unsatisfactory as the position is from a standpoint speculatively, it is eminently satisfactory from the point of view of the real business. More pleasing could be conceived by the conservative share owners, who look to stability of values above everything, than a market gradually creeping forward, conforming quickly and cautiously to the course of general business developments, and containing the least possible element of that speculative inflation which invites violent and destructive releases. The strength of the present Wall street situation is not that there are many new buyers, but there are so few who care to sell, even under the temptation of advancing prices. As the great bulk of the security supply is held solidly in this way, largely as a permanent investment, it is easy to understand why stocks go up easily on very small purchases, and why they go up more readily than down.

BUSINESS ON UP GRADE.

This technical aspect, which is one of decided strength, fits in at the same time with all sensible judgment regarding outside conditions. Business throughout the country, although far from uniform in its movement, has for the past two months, been steadily on the up grade. In such representative industries as steel, copper and dry goods, there has unquestionably been an important gain in new orders since the Supreme Court decisions in May. Railway earnings, if they are still in most instances below the big totals of last year, are making much better comparisons than they were last winter, and this is particularly true in regard to the net receipts. Bank earnings, which are another broad reflection of trade activity, likewise show a substantial improvement over six months ago, and for the last few weeks have been running close to last year's totals. These things taken together, the picture of current business is, first, taken all in all, the country's industries are well employed, the trade volume is a good ways from the high level of boom times, but by itself and not relatively it is larger, secondly, as already noted, business is on the increase, all the recent statistical records of production and consumption and for the most part the railway traffic statements, make this clear; thirdly, the increase bids fair to continue, provided no really serious accident overtakes the crops.

DIVIDENDS ARE ASSURED.

Investors see in all this an assurance that dividends will continue to be paid as they are, indefinitely, and that any great depreciation in market values is unlikely. They compare the dividend return on the stocks with the prevailing rates of 3 to 3½ per cent on long time money and see equally little reason in this direction why they should convert their securities into cash. Altogether, the motive to sell even at a dividend price is not yet here. There is a better look to things in the business world. A cheerier sentiment has expressed itself in financial circles. She may be relied on to continue the good work, until the crops are harvested and the proceeds banked.

HOP PRICES SOARING HIGHER AND HIGHER

SACRAMENTO, July 22.—Hop prices are already soaring, and growers declare they expect to see hops reach the 35-cent mark this season. The highest offer last year was 25 cents, while the average was only 17 cents. This year some of the growers have already refused offers of 25 cents. According to Harry Frazier, who is an expert on hops, the California crop will not equal that of last year, while the foreign demand will be greater. There are very few old hops in storage, and the market will be filled with nothing but new hops this year.

BOY DEALS DEATH IN AN ELECTRIC CAR

NORTH ADAMS, Mass., July 22.—Drawing a revolver in a crowded electric car today, Pablo Mallok, 21 years old, shot and killed Mortimer Hoyt and a Mrs. Isler and seriously wounded Miss Margaret Shea of Chelsea and Mrs. S. L. A. Hall of Pittsfield. He was captured.

YGNACIO VALLEY WILL HAVE BIG GRAPE CROP

MARTINEZ, July 22.—A wine-grower and vineyardist of Livermore valley has been in Ygnacio valley and contracted for a part of the present season's crop. As high as $20 per ton has been contracted this year and the grape men are looking forward to splendid prices for their crop.

SLAYER CONVICTED BY BLOOD STAINS

Scientist at Last Discovers Secret of Analysis Long Sought For.

LONDON, July 22.—For the first time in the history of the criminal courts of England a skilled analyst has been able to say positively that the stains found on the clothes of a prisoner were made by human blood, and not only that, but that the blood was from an anemic person. In many murder trials the guilt or innocence of a prisoner has turned on the evidence of the analyst, who heretofore was unable to swear positively whether the stains were made by mammalian or human blood. The point came up in the Crippen case, and it was then said that science was at work on the subject and a successful outcome of the investigation was anticipated.

In the case in question a man was charged with killing a woman and when arrested stains were found on his clothes. Dr. Wilcox, the Government analyst who was a witness in the Crippen case, stated in evidence that modern methods now enabled him to say that the blood was human and that it came from an anemic person, which the victim was. The prisoner was found guilty and sentenced to death.

CODE ADOPTED BY CHIEFS OF POLICE

Telegraph Cipher Discussed at Convention Held in Rochester.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—The convention of the associated chiefs of police, which was recently held in Rochester, New York, was an international affair, at which, however, none of the heads of the police departments in this community were present and which was but slightly represented on the part of the entire Pacific Coast. H. M. Van Alstine, author of the Peace Officers Telegraphic code, who journeyed from this city, was made the representative of San Francisco and Oakland by the officers of the convention. One of the most important steps taken was the adoption of Van Alstine's code as the official telegraphic cipher of the police departments of the country, and it will probably be also used by Scotland Yard. The code, which has already been adopted by all the sheriffs in the country, besides making the telegraphic communications between police officials secret, brings about a considerable saving in the cost of wiring by reason of the abbreviations which can be used. The code contains everything necessary to the writing of messages concerning the capture and holding of thieves, the sending of descriptions and Bertillon measurements of convicts and suspects. The convention adjourned to meet next year in Toronto, and it is hoped to arrange for a convention in San Francisco in 1915.

"If San Francisco wants to advertise her exposition," said Van Alstine today, "she could have no better medium than the police chiefs and I was surprised that so few of the delegates were familiar with conditions here and with the mammoth fair that is to be held. As many men from the West should go as possible to every convention and we should have them here in 1915. The chiefs have never met in San Francisco. They were to have had their convention when George Wittman was head of the department, but he was deposed shortly before the time set and another convention city in the east was chosen."

FAMOUS OUTLAW HUNTER IS DEAD IN NORTH

VICTORIA, B. C., July 12.—Frederick Hussey, for the last twenty years superintendent of the British Columbia provincial police, is dead here, aged 63. Superintendent Hussey was connected with the provincial police thirty-three years and has had a hand in the capture of every outlaw taken in British Columbia during that time. His most recent exploit of note was the capture a few years ago of Bill Miner, the famous train robber, after he had held up a Canadian Pacific express train and robbed it of papers of exceptional value to the company.

KILL MORE THAN WILD BEASTS.
The number of people killed yearly by wild beasts don't approach the vast number killed by disease germs. No life is safe from their attacks. They're in air, water, dust, even food. But grand protection is afforded by Electric Bitters, which destroy and expel these deadly disease germs from the system. That's why chills, fever and ague, all malarial and many blood diseases yield promptly to this wonderful blood purifier. Try them and enjoy the glorious health and new strength they'll give you. Money back if not satisfied. Only 50c at Osgood Bros.

BALDWIN PLANS VOYAGE TO POLE

Famous Arctic Explorer Would Conduct Expedition Under World's Fair Patronage.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—If nothing goes amiss with the plans of Captain Evelyn Briggs Baldwin, the famous arctic explorer, some time during the summer of 1912 two odd-looking sister ships, the Atlantic and the Pacific will sail from San Francisco harbor, bound for the North pole.

It is the present plan that Baldwin's venture shall be under the auspices of the Panama-Pacific Exposition company. Baldwin has already commenced arrangements with the World's Fair officials. It is his plan to sail, with twenty-five men, for Point Barrow, Alaska, and from there to drift across the Polar sea, reaching the North Atlantic within four years. He expects to keep in touch with the world through wireless messages flashed from his ships to the government stations in the far north. The ships will be constructed after the old Dutch Galliot type. They will be 150 feet long and 34 feet wide. They will be built entirely of oak, heavily braced and shaped to withstand the tremendous pressure of ice floes. Baldwin made his last trip to the Polar regions in 1901 as commander of the Baldwin-Zeigler expedition, when he established a line of stations through Franz Josef's Land up to Crown Prince Rudolph's land, the northernmost island of the Archipelago.

OAKLAND DESTINED TO BE BIG SHIPPING PORT

GATEWAY TO TRADE OF ORIENT

Hamburg-American Line May Build Big Docks on Water Front.

Municipality Is Expending Millions in Establishing System of Wharves.

THAT Greater Oakland is destined to become the greatest shipping port on the western shores of the United States upon completion of the Panama canal is continually becoming more apparent. All signs and all portents point to such a satisfactory consummation of the plans of the progressive element which is placing this city in the forefront of the modern municipalities of the country. Situated as the city is geographically, no future less desirable need be anticipated, for the efforts of all are directed to that end. Civic pride and commercial progress walk hand in hand, are united in the attempt to make Oakland in fact what it is by location—the gateway to the trade of the Orient and the Far East.

The prescient minds which chart the course for Oakland's civil and mercantile advance have never lost sight of such a goal, nor have they ever been turned from their purpose by affairs of inferior moment. The progress has been, is and will be to accuracy, to skill, to accomplishment and to material results. The city's future aggrandizement will be justification and monument enough for these builders of the present. The effects of their far-sighted policy are already being made manifest in numerous ways, but in no way so much as in the impetus given to the railway interests having terminals here. Convinced of the strategic value of this point as the open sesame to the Pacific and encouraged by the civic spirit that animates the community, and by the willingness to co-operate and assist all worthy projects which pervades the city's commercial bodies, the officials of the railroads in question are prepared to increase their already large investments here by many hundreds of thousands of dollars.

No project under way in Oakland is destined to be a more potent factor in the development of the city's commercial interests than the system of municipally owned docks, which, when completed, will extend from Sessions basin in the estuary to a point north of the Key Route mole on the western harbor front. No circumstance which has transpired in connection with this future possibility is more significant than the fact that the recently announced intention of the officials of the Hamburg-American line of steamers to establish trade relations with the Orient upon completion of the Panama canal. The company now has more than four hundred engaged in world commerce, all hailing from and clearing from New York, and when the canal is finished will bring this coast into touch with Europe and the Atlantic coast ports through their medium. It is the announced intention of the Hamburg-American company to establish a regular line of steamers between San Francisco bay and New York via the canal and from the latter port to its European terminals.

SEEKING DOCKAGE.
The matter of adequate dockage at a point convenient to railway terminals is one which enters largely into the company's Pacific coast plans, and it is not unlikely, in fact it is very probable, that the Oakland harbor front will be selected as the proper point at which to load and unload passengers and freight. The advantages offered by Oakland in that regard have been investigated by officials of the company—together with those across the bay—and are now in the hands of the company's engineers.
While no definite decision has as yet been made, nor will be, probably, for some time, it is known that the possibility of Oakland's being chosen as the western terminus of the company's ocean-to-ocean line is better than average. The attention of the proper officials has been called to the advantages this city can offer in the way of dockage—it will soon have no peer in that regard along the west coast line of the United States—and the matter is being canvassed carefully and thoroughly.

RESIDENCE OF
J. J. KELLY
522 BELLEVUE AVE.

The congested condition of the shipping along the San Francisco water front precludes the possibility of a large line such as the Hamburg-American depending upon the facilities offered by the harbor commissioners, and for this reason—as well as others, including the very important one that Oakland is the western terminus of three transcontinental railroads—it is probable the local water front, with its magnificent system of municipally owned wharves, by that time ready for business, will be selected as the landing point for the Hamburg-American Company's commodious floating palaces. A number of years ago the Hamburg-American, together with other important interests in the ocean traffic way, were forced to abandon New York City proper, with its forest of shipping, as a landing place, and to establish docking facilities at Hoboken on the Jersey side. In a measure the same unsatisfactory condition confronts the company in regard to the selection of San Francisco as a landing point, hence it is very likely that this city, with infinitely more to offer in the way of adequate dock room and freight handling facilities, will win the day.

OPPORTUNITY OF OAKLAND.

"I know of no other great city on the Pacific Coast that presents the opportunities for varied industries along all the lines of commerce that Oakland presents," said Edward T. Jeffrey, president of the Western Pacific Railroad, in this city a few days ago.
Emanating from a man of such marked business acumen and executive ability, the statement is one well worth analysis by investors or prospective investors in business or realty ventures here. It is the statement of a man who knows whereof he speaks, and who before speaking weighs well his words and their after effect. It is a statement pregnant with prophesy anent Oakland's future commercial greatness, and may with confidence be accepted as the conviction of a man who voices an opinion only after careful consideration of facts and figures.
When considered together with other remarks made by Mr. Jeffrey, the statement takes on all the significance of a prediction sure to be realized.

"Twelve years ago," said Mr. Jeffrey,
"unknown to you gentlemen, I spent several days in Oakland, tramping your streets and viewing the latest possibilities of your wonderful water front. My old-time dream of the Western Pacific-Denver & Rio Grande extension was uppermost in my thoughts at that time and received further inspiration as I came to realize the advantages this city offered as a terminal. It was then, twelve years ago, gentlemen, that I made up my mind to make this city the western resting point of the Western Pacific, when my dream became a reality. You have made great progress since my visit twelve years ago. Great industries have been established here; your trade has grown; your city has grown numerically and in wealth; your banking power has increased; your buildings have grown taller, and your civic importance has increased. With the fat farm lands all around you, industrial enterprises firmly established, work for those who are willing to commence at hand, rail commerce already established, there is every reason to warrant your continued growth and your increased prosperity, and I am confident they will continue. Pretty strong talk this, coming from a man who knows the commercial possibilities of the municipalities of these broad United States, and who doesn't converse unless he knows what he is talking about.

IN LINE WITH PROPHECY.

Right in line with the prophesy of Mr. Jeffrey regarding Oakland's great future, for his statement may, with reason, be so considered, is the announced intention of the San Francisco, Oakland & San Jose railway—Key Route—to construct a bulkhead and fill in solid for a distance of 700 feet along its Oakland mole. Formal permission to do so has been granted by the city council, the work to be done in conformity with the grant made to the city of Oakland by the United States government October 31, 1910. Inspiring the petition presented to the council for permission to do this work is the determination of the railway officials to improve the Key Route basin to its line with the municipal bulkhead, to establish adequate harbor and docking facilities and to reclaim by fill approximately 400 acres of land.

The work to be done is in line with the comprehensive investment plans of the United Properties company, the $200,000,000 corporation of which the Key Route is an unit, and it is the intention of the officials thereof to hasten it to completion as fast as possible. The job will have been completed long before the opening day of the big fair across the bay, by which time it is probable the extension of the Key Route tracks across Alameda county to San Jose will be a fact accomplished. By that time, also, it is probable the tracks of the Oakland & Andloch railway, another unit of the United Properties company, will be connected with those of Vallejo Northern, likewise a subsidiary company of the parent corporation mentioned, thereby making a large and fertile section of the Sacramento valley directly tributary to Oakland. Via the Vallejo Northern and the Oakland & Antioch tracks will come to Oakland markets and to the municipal docks the products of the orchards and farms of Contra Costa, Alameda and Santa Clara counties. Over the tracks of the Key Route these products will find the waiting ships along the water front. In connection with United Properties company's affairs it is well to mention the fact that many of its employees are establishing homes here.

W. J. Marland, contracting agent for the Central Light & Power company, another unit of the U. P. Co., has purchased a handsome home at 218 Alcatraz avenue. Charles Murphy, auditor of the United Light & Power company, holding company for the Central Oakland Light & Power company, has established a home on Lawton avenue, and Chief Engineer Farnworth of the last mentioned corporation, has bought a home on Lawton avenue near Broadway. The average cost of the three residences is $5500.

INTERURBAN RAILWAYS.

Another project tending to the aggrandizement of Oakland is its inception in the intent to make this city the pivotal point of a comprehensive system of suburban railroads.
Plans to that end are nearing completion and will soon become operative.
It is the purpose to connect Port Costa with Oakland via Martinez, Concord, Walnut Creek, Pleasanton and other San Ramon valley points by means of a horseshoe line, thereby opening and making tributary to Oakland a large and fertile farm area. The financial advantage of such a line to the business men of this city is obvious. With

Group of cottages on Forty-second street, west of Grove street, three of which have been sold by George W. Austin.

Oakland thus closely connected with the products of farm and orchard, and the distributing market for them, local business will be benefited by hundreds of thousands of dollars per year.
It is proposed to operate cars of the gasoline motor type, similar to those soon to be run on the triangle line from Oakland to Niles and Newark.
Several trains are to be operated daily, and the service will be increased as rapidly as traffic warrants. The plan has the support of the Oakland Chamber of Commerce and of the commercial bodies of the interior towns the road will tap.

EAGLES TO BUILD HALL

Alameda Aerie Soon to Have Handsome Home at Cost of $15,000.

ALAMEDA, July 21.—The Alameda Aerie of Eagles has drawn plans and specifications for a modern building for lodges and social purposes to be erected on the north side of Alameda avenue west of Oak street. The building will be similar to the handsome Elks' clubhouse, but designed on a smaller plan.
It will cost about $15,000. The specifications call for a two-story structure on a lot 50x100 feet. The lower floor will be used as a clubroom and for social purposes and the upper floor for the lodge room. The building operations are expected to be completed within two months. For the present the Eagles are occupying a small structure on the Alameda avenue site, which will be torn down to be replaced by the new building.
R. C. Hinch, contractor, is building fifteen modern bungalows on Garfield avenue which Hally & Co., real estate brokers, are selling. About twelve of the cottages have already been sold and are occupied by new residents. The pretty cottages, all of which are of different architecture, line both sides of Garfield avenue, which is known as Hillen row.
The avenue is convenient to cars and trains and is one of the most admirable locations in the east end. The cottages are selling at from $1500 to $3000.

Building Inspector John Davies reports activity in building circles and stated today that there was more building in the city than there had been in several years.
Hally & Co., Lewis & Shaw, McCraith & Son, the Alameda Land Company and other brokers all report heavy sales and a big increase in business.
The Haight school on the north side of Santa Clara avenue east of Chestnut street, which was recently completed, was accepted by the Board of Education yesterday. Powell Bros. were the contractors for the new school structure and Cunningham & Poltsee the architects. The Washington school on Eighth street and Santa Clara avenue is about completed. Klenck & Muller were the builders and Louis Stone the architect.
The new school faces on Eighth street.
The new Haight and Washington school buildings, which constitute the chief improvements during this year, have been carefully planned and their construction has been carefully supervised. The former contains twenty class-rooms, twenty cloak-rooms, an assembly hall capable of seating 700 people, a laboratory, manual training room, cooking room, sewing room, experimental dining-room, two bicycle rooms, two large playrooms, two pupils' lunch rooms, two teachers' retiring rooms, teachers' lunch room and kitchen, library, office, reception room, shower, bath room, four storerooms, besides lavatories, furnace room and other smaller rooms. From the standpoint of modern appearances and conveniences in educational work, the building is intended to be complete in every detail. The Washington school contains twelve class-rooms and the same appearances as enumerated for the Haight school building.

The total cost of the Haight school building, exclusive of architect's fee, will be approximately $34,000. The Washington school will cost approximately $62-500. The addition to the Lincoln school has cost approximately $14,500. For architect's fees and superintendence of construction, the board will have to pay about $10,000. The total cost of the buildings, exclusive of equipment, will aggregate $130,000.

PLAN TO O.K. PROPERTY VALUES

Committee From Oakland Real Estate Association Will Appraise.

Organization Takes Steps to Protect Interests of General Public.

In line with the policy of recent activities for the improving of the order of business, and real estate transactions, the Oakland Real Estate Association at the last meeting took up the matter of appraisal of property values. After a thorough discussion of the subject a resolution was unanimously adopted to the effect that a committee be appointed to serve for the mutual benefit of the public and the members of the body.

When one of the members of the association receives a request for information as to the proper value of a certain piece of Oakland real estate, he now enjoys the privilege of not only giving his off-hand opinion, if he has one, but may inform the correspondent that he has referred the matter to the appraisal committee of the Oakland Real Estate Association. As a member of the association he thus saves himself the responsibility and work of inquiry, and at the same time is enabled to tender his client a valuation with an official stamp of approval.

It is stated that the dealers receive frequent requests from out of town correspondents about property that they are not interested in and have not the time to examine into carefully.
President George W. Austin appointed an appraisal committee as follows:
C. V. King, chairman; William J. Layman and George M. Flint.

E. L. Spence and George M. Flint were elected members. There were numerous applications made for membership, but these were the only ones properly filed.

OAKLAND THE CITY OF OPPORTUNITY

Edgar Jones, Real Estate Expert, Tells How Others View Us.

That Oakland is recognized throughout the country and in the northern cities of the Pacific Coast as the "City of Opportunity" and an attractive place for residence or investment is the report of Sales Manager Edgar A. Jones of the Wickham Havens Company, who has returned from an extensive trip.
"I found that Oakland had been heard of in the East and heard of to her advantage," he said. "While Los Angeles is years ahead in the matter of booming, Oakland has made a quiet but no less effective impression upon the people of the East, who are watching the Pacific Coast. Aside from the opinion that has been held for years as to the future of the Pacific Coast, the Panama Canal has focused interest, and wherever the name of Oakland has been carried there seems to be no doubt as to the factors working here for a great future."

"Oakland's harbor advantages and her growth in the past few years are becoming more and more widely known, while there is abundant evidence that her fame as a city of beautiful homes and a desirable place to live, is gaining despite the wider advertising of other sections of the coast. The only thing the East needs is more light regarding Oakland. Whenever the city is talked of it is praised."
"I returned by way of Vancouver, Seattle and Portland. In all this section there is enthusiastic faith in the future of Oakland. Whatever the complaints are regarding the local situation there is no question of the fact that Oakland is advancing rapidly. Her fame as a city of homes and the growth of residence districts is talked of in the north and it would do Oaklanders good to see their own city as residents of other cities of the coast view her."

LARGE RANCH IN NAPA COUNTY SOLD

MacFarland Property Is Disposed of for About $70,000.

The famous MacFarland dairy ranch of 600 acres, located seven miles north of Napa, has been sold to E. D. Meissner, a former merchant of Berkeley, who is an experienced dairyman and farmer. He will at once put the place in first-class shape and run the ranch himself.

The property was sold by Darrow-Hughes Company of 1257 Broadway, Oakland, the country land agents who have sold so many Sacramento valley, Napa and Lake county ranches. They last week sold the Wartenweiler property, two miles south of Napa, for $10,000 to Dr. A. De Puy, who will move on to the place.

It is understood the MacFarland ranch brought about $70,000.

The Darrow-Hughes Company recently sold the Carpenter ranch belonging to the Farmers' bank of Lakeview. This ranch contains 1600 acres with one and a quarter miles of shoreline on Clear lake, and is considered the best ranch on the shore of this lake.

The same firm sold the Rogers ranch at St. Helena of 1500 acres, and numerous smaller properties.

NEW RESIDENCE SECTION OPENED

Hood Park Offers Diversified Attractions of Scenes and Climate.

A new tract of land, known as Hood Park, has just been opened up in East Oakland by the agent for the property, J. E. Hood of 9729 East Fourteenth street, East Oakland. This tract marks still another instance of the growth and expansion of the city in the annexed district, and the throwing open to settlement of still another desirable residence section.

The land in question has been given many improvements before being placed on the market according to the agents, including the construction of sidewalks, sewers and street work, and is situated in a district of the city which boasts of an equable climate. The lots in the section are twenty-two in number, fronting on East Fourteenth street are 40x100 feet and provide for the construction of the proper class of buildings. The owners of the district have placed building and class restrictions upon the sale.

LONDON, July 22.—Miss Alice Brewster, a stewardess on the P. and O. liner China, has been fatally stabbed by one of the stewards, a Lascar, who has been arrested by the captain. The China, homeward bound from Australia, is expected to reach Tilbury today. The tragedy occurred on June 11, when the ship was within easy sailing of Colombo, and the victim was buried at sea. Miss Brewster, a native of Little Canfield, Essex, a picturesque village a few miles from Bishop's Cleeve, had been in the service of the P. and O. company for many years, and was intending to leave the service shortly.

NO LET UP IN CITY'S GROWTH

All Agencies Tend to Add to Civic Prosperity, Says Austin.

President of Real Estate Association Optimistic for Future.

The inauguration of express train service between Oakland and Hayward by the Oakland Traction Company for the morning and evening hours of the heaviest business traffic, is the most recent of the many transportation developments which have borne steady testimony to the growth of Oakland. Real estate men are especially jubilant over the moves that mean so much for every resident, and George W. Austin, president of the Oakland Real Estate Association, says:

"The operation of the express trains to Hayward is a great move in the right direction, and the traction company is to be congratulated. A rich country with plenty of acreage for country homes, and for ranches is brought closer to Oakland. The advantages are in line with those of the entrance of the Oakland and Antioch railroad, and we are fortunate in having so many agencies working for our good.

"When the improvement of Seventh street and the electrification of the Southern Pacific service there is considered, in conjunction with the innovation of electric trains from Fourteenth and Franklin, the sight-seeing cars of the Key Route, the Oakland and Antioch and the Hayward service, one realizes how great has been the advancement of Oakland in transportation matters in a few months. This means indisputable advance as a city."

SOMERSAULT SENDS HAN TO HOSPITAL

Practice in Y. M. C. A. Results in Paralysis for Youth.

NEW YORK, July 22.—The class in physical culture at the Bedford branch of the Brooklyn Young Men's Christian Association had finished their regular exercises last night and Physical Director I. M. Foss called together a few of the more adept members to practice a "stunt" that called for courage and strength—leaping from a mat and turning a somersault in the air. Many of the youngsters had the energy remained to see how well the young men carried themselves under the test, and as each member performed the act successfully there was applause.

At last it came the turn of Edwin A. Kraft, aged nineteen, a salesman of No. 260 Hart street. Kraft made the leap and the turn, but instead of alighting on his feet he landed on his back and remained motionless. His regular rush of anxious ones to his side and it was found that he was unconscious.

Director Foss carried Kraft to the reception room and a hurry call was sent to the Swedish hospital. Dr. Campbell, who responded, said that the young man was paralyzed from the waist down, the back down and had broken a ligament in the left leg. Kraft was taken to the hospital.

BODY FOUND IN BASKET ON TRAIN

LONDON, July 22.—A startling discovery was made at the left luggage office of the South-Eastern and Chatham railway at Victoria station, the dead body of a boy being found in a basket on June 24. A well-dressed woman, about 25 years of age, took a collapsible straw basket to the left luggage office. This was not called for on the usual way, and later it was opened. Inside, wrapped in canvas, the body of a fair-haired boy about nine or ten months old, was found. The child seemed to have been well nourished and had two teeth in the lower jaw. Apparently it had been dead six days. Around the neck was a very suspicious mark, and the clothing was covered with chloride of lime.

BRAVELY TRIES TO SAVE LIFE

Rich Young Woman Leaps From Yacht When Her Footman Sinks.

NEW YORK, July 22.—Miss Annie R. Tinker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Tinker of No. 48 East Fifty-seventh street, was sailing around Port Jefferson Harbor, L. I., on the yacht Margaretta, with friends. The Tinkers have a large summer home at East Setauket, overlooking Port Jefferson Harbor. Mr. Tinker is a stock broker.

Louis Jean Dazib, 25, a footman employed by the Tinkers, and two other employees of the family were swimming at a point just below the Tinker estate. Dazib attempted to swim to a float some distance out, and when almost there became exhausted and sank. His two companions shouted for help.

The Margaretta was ready to come about a few yards from the float, when Miss Tinker noticed Dazib swimming toward it. She heard the cries of his companions and saw that the footman had disappeared. She sprang to the windward rail and dived overboard in full attire.

A few sturdy strokes brought her to the float. She dived at the point where Dazib was stricken, but failed to find any trace of the body. Mr. Jacobson and Mr. Foss, neighbors of the Tinkers, joined in the search for the body and it was found lying under the diving float.

MEMBER ON FIRE AIDED BY KAHN

Willis of Ohio Finds Blaze in Pocket and Startles House.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Representative Frank B. Willis of Ada, O., is short a mohair coat and a pair of $3 trousers tonight.

This afternoon Mr. Willis startled the House by jumping out of his seat and yelling "Fire." A lot of matches in his coat pocket was burning at a lively rate.

Representative Kahn of California shed his coat and rushed over to wrap Mr. Willis up. But by slapping, kicking, jumping in the air, the Ohioan extinguished the conflagration that threatened to make a holocaust of him.

Mr. Willis is one of the most popular young members on the Republican side. He is large, athletic, broad-shouldered and heavily checked with raven black hair and a fine, boyish face. After the blaze was over he took stock. It was found his trousers were gone, and part of his shirt was torn. Mr. Kahn sided up, and using his coat as a screen, escorted him out amid laughter.

"Must have been inarguable matches," said Uncle Joe Cannon. "That sort of ways fire up at unexpected times."

CHURCH DECLINED GIFT OF $100,000

Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Objected to Conditions Regarding Donation.

NEW YORK, July 22.—The death of Mayor Ely, a former mayor of New York, which occurred at Livingston, N. J., brought to light the story of a contribution proffered to but declined by the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church, of which Mr. Ely was a member. On June 1 Mr. Ely made a formal offer of $100,000 to the church, specifying that it should be used as a part of an endowment fund for missions, and that the church should raise $400,000 by the end of this year to be put with this gift into a half million dollar endowment for the home missions which the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church either in whole or in part supports.

One week later the session of the church applied to Mr. Ely with a formal resolution declining the gift because the church did not care to undertake to meet the conditions, but at a subsequent conference the committeemen practically arranged with Mr. Ely that his offer be renewed in the fall of this year.

Edwin J. Gillies said that the session of the church had deemed it an inopportune time to go into the work of raising $400,000. New people were coming to the church because of the popularity of Doctor Jowett's preaching, and old members who had not been in attendance were beginning to come regularly again, said Mr. Gillies, and it was decided that to embark on such a money raising venture at that particular time would look too much like trying to capitalize Doctor Jowett's popularity.

The Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church needs about $20,000 a year for the two city mission works upon which it is engaged, one at First avenue and Sixty-third street and another in King street. At present the church is in need of any funds for this work, but it is admitted that, with the general trend of

PET DOG ATTACKS KINGSBURG GIRL

Pounces Upon Her Ferociously and Tears Her Face With Teeth.

KINGSBURG, July 22.—Miss Edith Bonander was bitten in the face this morning by one of Levi Garrett's dogs and severely injured. Miss Bonander, who is a very popular and attractive young lady, was assisting her sister in the care of the Garrett home while Mr. and Mrs. Garrett are away on their vacation.

It was while she was busy arranging some things in the pantry that the dog came rushing at her, biting her on the cheek. The young lady grabbed the dog by the nose to make him let go, and as he did so he bit her on the hand, drawing blood.

Miss Bonander was at once taken to the office of Dr. Gillespie, who dressed her wounds. There were seven ugly gashes in Miss Bonander's face and two of the dog's teeth cut clear through the fleshy part of her cheek.

The dog that bit Miss Bonander is an old family pet, but for some time has been dangerous to strangers on account of being always ready to bite people.

There is strong talk of getting up a committee to wait on the city council, asking that an ordinance be passed requiring all dogs to be muzzled. Even if the dogs do not have rabies, the fact that dogs bite people, leaving them scarred for life, is not looked upon with any degree of favor.

uptown growth, the time might come when an ordinance of some kind would be necessary to the work.

William H. Ely, brother of the late Smith Ely, said that his brother's will had not yet been opened nor read, and would not be for some days. Mr. Ely added that he did not know whether his brother had left any bequest for the church in place of the $100,000 which had been temporarily declined.

Artistic Mastic Park Bungalow

IN ALAMEDA

Built by C. C. Adams

This attractive bungalow is located in Mas-tick Park, where at the present time there are twenty new bungalows under construction.

Mastick Park is a subdivision of the old Mastick homestead and is in that part of Alameda almost due south of the City Hall in Oakland, and when the new electric train service is installed between Alameda and Oakland will place the property within five minutes of Fourteenth and Franklin streets.

The attractive feature from an exterior viewpoint of this particular bungalow lies in the wide porch extending entirely across the front of the building, the shingled columns in front and the spread at the base of the building. All the casings show a battered effect, as well as the outside chimney. The eaves have a width of about 3 feet and are sprung, which gives a pleasing effect. Entering the bungalow you pass through a 4-foot Dutch door into a very large living room having a large stone fireplace on the south side of the room. An inside hall is off the living room and connects the two bedrooms and leads into the bathroom.
The kitchen is of the buffet type, with its drawers and bins and provides a place for everything within easy distance, and makes household work a pleasure. The large livingroom is trimmed with Oregon pine rotary, cut 3-ply, veneered panels. This is stained a rich brown and the tinting of the walls and ceiling harmonizes with the color effect throughout.

The electric light fixtures are of hammered copper of special design and were manufactured in Alameda by Otto Bechtle & Company.
The hot water supply of the house is provided by an Electric Weld No. 30 combination heater and boiler, manufactured by the John Wood Manufacturing Company. The pressed brick of the outside chimney, as well as the common brick, sand, lime and cement were furnished by the Standard Supply Company of Oakland.

This attractive bungalow complete with lawn, fence, Duplex shades, connected with electricity, gas, water and sewer, can be built on a fine Mastick Park lot and sold complete with the lot for $3500 on the first payment of $350 and the balance at $35 per month, including the interest.

Anyone desiring to inspect this particular bungalow, or anyone who should be interested in beautiful bungalows under construction, may do so by calling upon C. C. Adams at 813 Pacific Avenue, Alameda, Cal., or may phone Alameda 2482 for appointment.

For the convenience of its readers THE TRIBUNE calls attention to the different lines represented by the various advertisers on this page, who are worthy of recognition and patronage.

DON'T SACRIFICE SAFETY FOR SPEED---GET BOTH

These two things are seldom combined. "Haste makes waste," as the old saying goes.
Hurry a man and you worry him. And a hurried and worried man is a poor one to rely on for accurate, complete, trustworthy work.

Yet there are times when you need an abstract or title quick.
Come to us for it. You'll get it "on time" and infallibly accurate.
The reason is simple—we have a set of complete, systematized, accurate records that make quick and correct work easy for us. Without such records, speed and safety would be out of the question for anybody. For your own satisfaction, come in and learn the details.

I firmly believe in a high-grade warm

Head pains, and head heaviness, which are often experienced by fat people, may indicate that this degenerating process is imminent. The accumulation of this fatty tissue to normal brain substance, which is the result, will result if the overproduction of fat is stopped in other parts of the body. Thousands of fat people have depended entirely for reductions to normal weight, upon Marmola Prescription Tablets, which are the only product of the famous liquid Marmola Prescription. While taking these tablets for the reduction of fat, no dieting nor exercise are necessary, as a reduction of 10 to 16 lbs. a day is accomplished and prevented by the action of the fat. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold at all druggists or the Marmola Co., 74 Monroe Ave., Detroit, Mich., at the uniform price of 76c for a large case. They remove the fat already formed, prevent its re-forming, clear the complexion and tone up the entire system.
